8 REASONS TO WRITE TO US FOR A FREE SAMPLE

—a free sample of Montina Corlon. 1-It's an imaginative new vinyl floor 2-made of pebbly vinyl chips that are 3-gently flecked with colors. 4-The chips are set at random in translucent vinyl. They produce an intriguing textured surface (that's 5) and 6-a warm, friendly look. Montina will enhance any decorating style without dominating it (that's what a floor should do-7). And 8-it will tantalize the decorator in you! For a sample of Montina Corlon and a folder showing its colorings, write Armstrong, 6307 Atkins Ave., Lancaster, Pa. In Canada, Dept. 73-H, Box 919, Montreal, P. Q.

SPLIT LEVEL designs. As warm air rises to upper levels, cooler air moves to lower rooms. This can cause uncomfortable heating or cooling problems.

ROOMS OVER UNHEATED AREAS, such as a garage or excavation, make the floors and walls cold, can make the room too cold to be used.

LARGE GLASS AREAS alter inside temperature each time air flows outside temperature change. Even true of double-paned windows.

SPREADOUT FLOOR PLAN. The effects of sun, shade and wind in different areas of the home can cause widely different heating or cooling requirements.

FINISHED BASEMENT. Because it is partially below ground level, the temperature needs in a basement are far different from the rest of the house.

SEPARATE LIVING AND SLEEPING AREAS require different temperatures—warm and relaxing in the living area—cool and comfortable for sleeping.

How you can prevent these heating or cooling problems in your new home

(or correct them in your existing home)

What good is the world's most expensive home if it isn't comfortable to live in?

One of the best investments you can make in your new home or present one is to take a little time and spend a little extra ensuring your comfort—with adequate heating or cooling.

Zone Control—dividing your home into two or more areas that you can keep at different temperatures to suit family's needs.

It's simple! In a forced air system, for example, all you need is a separate thermostat for each zone along with a damper motor to control the air distribution. In hot water systems, you need thermostats and zone valves to control the flow. In some cases, two small furnaces or boilers are installed. Installations are made quickly and easily.

How you can zone your home. The first step is to decide how you want to divide your home, by zones. Then call your heating or plumbing contractor. Be sure he understands you want to zone and where. He can design a system that will assure you the comfort you need and deserve.

In a new home, he'll lay out a piping or duct system for each zone. If he can do this at the planning stage, you can have Zone Control for very little extra cost. In your present home, it may be as simple as adding a thermostat with its associated controls.

For more information on Zone Control, write for free literature. And, now available to help you in your planning, an informative 48 page booklet "How to get the most out of your heating and cooling dollar"—50¢ postage paid. Write Honeywell, Dept. HB7-49, Minneapolis 8, Minnesota

IT'S *W*ORTH MENTIONING

By JULIE POLSHEK

Hydro-Jet Broom rides on swivel casters easily wheeled on any terrain. Garden-hose flow feeds to three water jets in 17-inch base; their concentrated spray forcefully sweeps and washes. Pistol-grip handle has finger-tip valve for water control and shutoff. Weighs only 3 pounds; easily used upright for watering overhead plants. Made of bonderized steel tubing; 48" long. Enameled finish. $5.95. Treasure Trove, 31 E. 28th St., N.Y., N.Y.

Plastic is used with luxurious effect in Texas-Ware's new tumbler. Its textured exterior resembles etched glass, an illusion heightened by glasslike translucence and tints. Choice of amber, smoke, absinthe green, or lavender; all coordinate with Texas-Ware dinner service. Tumbler's plastic is a hot-or-cold insulator that won't sweat; is alcohol-proof, machine-washable. $3.50 for 8 (12½ ounce). From R. H. Macy & Co., New York 1, New York.

Bunting makes Stack-Snack table entirely of aluminum for care-free serviceability and lightness of weight, both desirable attributes in outdoor furnishings. Embossed white finish of the rigid table top is toughly resistant to marring; size is 17" by 25". Frame has a 1-inch girth; its slanted design provides firm stance, tip-proofness. Capped with gliders. 17" high. Cost $10.50 each. Strawbridge and Clothier, Philadelphia, Pa.

Janie's innovational rug cleaner is a pressed cake of dry chemical solvents merely rubbed on, removed by vacuuming. It cleans penetratingly, freshens colors, routinely removes most spots or stains; stubborn ones you prewash with water, powder while damp. Safe and effective on any type of carpeting, on any colors; is chalk-free, leaves no residual deposits. $4.95 with applicator and refill; extra refills, $2.35 each. Gimbel's, New York 1, N.Y.

Shower curtain hangs on traverse hooks which ride silently on nylon gliders; track on the underside of the square bar holds the recessed gliders. Bar and its wall plates are fabricated of structural aluminum; hooks are forged aluminum; all of it is anodized (gold or natural color) for lifetime serviceability. Choice of 5-, 5½-, or 6-foot length; $4.50, $5, $5.50. (Available in corner model.) From Shower Bar Co., Inc., P.O. Box 47-885, Miami, Fla.

Kampkap's multipurpose Vanity Fair Hamper uses only 22" by 12" floor area (32" high). Hamper unit has step-on opener, mesh panel for ventilation. Storage unit has 3 shelves, hanger for bowl brush. A deep drawer stows cosmetics; both sidewalls have towel ring. Counter top is made of plastic with molded-in sections. All-metal; white, black, yellow, blue, pink, or green with golden trim. $35; Abraham & Straus, Brooklyn, New York.

Here's a gracious convenience for cocktail guests, especially those given to meandering. Palm-fitted grasping end makes Miller Partie Plate easy to balance or carry. Tray has glass-or-cup well and another for cocktail-snack dips; a high gallery surrounds it all. Molded material is a low-luster Melmac in assorted pastels (tan, blue, gray, green). Machine-washable. A set (4), $3.95. Casey's, 512 E. Parkway, Talladega, Alabama.

Artwire's portable caddy for dinnerware is primarily an outdoor-living convenience, but many will find it equally useful for cupboard space-saving. For either purpose, it holds 8 place settings if used for plastic dinnerware, 6 settings if used for chinaware. It is 17" by 8½" by 8¼"; has handle at each end for carrying ease; made of heavy steel wire with vinyl Kushion-Koat finish (white). $2.95; Foster & Gallagher, Peoria, Illinois.

Don't be deceived

■ If you are misled by the illustration into believing I am going to tell you about bird feeders, I apologize. The bird feeder is shown to illustrate the flexibility of new Barrett vinyl building panels.

You can use these new panels for such things as patio roofs, storage structures, carports, cabañas, dividers. They have important advantages besides how-ability. They are noncombustible, stay smooth under weathering, have pleasant, subdued colors. Most important, they don't draw water through the laps by surface tension—the usual cause of leaks in panel materials.

Vinyl panels come in flat, ribbed, stepdown, or corrugated profiles, and in opaque or translucent. They're 4' wide, which means fewer joints, and 8' to 20' long. Be prepared to pay about 33¢ a square foot at your lumber yard or hardware store.

And leftover scraps are excellent for making bird feeders.

Instant bathroom remodeling

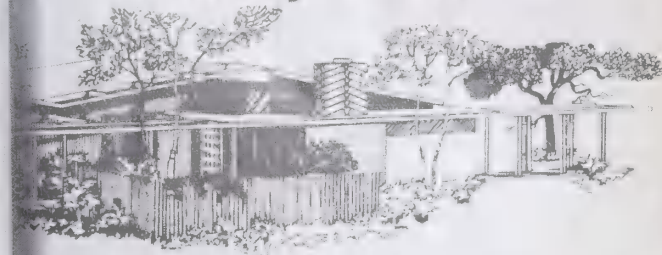

■ An easy way to improve an inadequate bathroom is to replace its outmoded lavatory with a new cabinet-style one. You don't need much space. The Formco people custom-make units to fit the space you have. You can design your own unit, pick your bowl and surfacing.

There are three different styles. Adding up the cost of the parts of the Starline assembly shown here,

(Please turn to page 10)

I arrive at $109.10 as its cost, but don't depend on my arithmetic. You can get exact figures from the manufacturer, Formco Inc., 2810 Highland Avenue, Cincinnati 12, Ohio. Here's a tip. They are handsome and useful in bedrooms. If your bedroom adjoins a bathroom plumbing wall, you can probably install the unit for no more than a bathroom installation would cost.

DISCOVERY

At every age, we are constantly discovering new and significant things in the world around us. Wherever we look, we find that ideas and customs are constantly being replaced by something new—different—and very often, better.

Among the new developments which are changing our lives today are improvements in the field of building materials. Longer-lasting, better-looking products are available to today's home buyers and home owners. From the CERTAIN-TEED family of fine building products come magnificent Jumbo Woodtex "300" Asphalt Shingles, offering the ultimate in roof protection and opening new horizons in roof beauty; new Ceiling Tile with exceptional harmony of design, sound absorption, and insulation value. From BESTWALL comes new Eternawall Vinyl-Clad Gypsum Wallboard with chip-free, fade-free surface and beautiful linen-weave texture; and the famous Bestwall team of "fire-fighters", gypsum wallboard and gypsum lath and plaster, providing vital protection against fire and other hazards.

You'll discover the great advantages of these and other fine products — lasting value, and protection against weather, wear-and-tear, unwanted noise — when you visit your Bestwall Certain-teed dealer. Or write direct to

Easy-to-assemble storehouse

• All you need is a screwdriver and a pair of pliers and you can assemble a Heller prefab steel storage shed. It's 6 feet wide and 3 feet deep, and it can provide storage for all those things that are now cluttering your garage. It has a lock built into its door handle, with an inside safety latch so children can't lock themselves in. It costs under $90, less than any kind of a shed built to your order.

You can erect the Heller shed against a wall or fence, or it can stand alone. I can testify that it's rust- and corrosion-resistant. I've had one outdoors over two hard winters and it looks just the same as the day I assembled it. They're sold at hardware, department, and drugstores. The maker is William Heller Inc., Altoona, Pennsylvania.

What, no padlock?

■ There isn't need for a separate padlock on the new Wise Hasp-lok, shown here. The lock is fastened to the door, as the upper photo shows, and rotates to secure the hasp in place. You'll find it more convenient and better-looking than the usual arrangement. It's more like a real door lock, stronger, too, and freeze-proof. It's shown above on a garden-supply cabinet. Distributed nationally by Curtis Industries, Eastlake, Ohio. Its list price is $5.49.

• I have a sample piece of new Duralok siding tacked to the south-west corner of my house. This siding is made of PVC (polyvinyl-chloride), a rigid plastic. It is color-impregnated and is designed to last the life of the house without repainting. Sound intriguing?

I plan to leave that sample piece on my wall for a year and see if sun and frost do anything to it in that time. I'll report back to you again in 1964 with my findings. If you want to know more about this new product immediately, the people who make it are: Duralok Division, Acorn Chemical Co., Cleveland 2, Ohio.

Retreads for your lawnmower

• A lawnmower is like a car. When the tread is worn off its tires, it's harder to control and more hazardous to use. The proper thing to do is retread it.

It's a simple job with Gates Rubber Company's new Replace-A-Treads. You merely slip the retreads on over your present wheels. An adhesive binds them to the old tire. These retreads fit most standard lawnmower models and at $3.95 a pair are only about half of what new wheels would cost you.

But I think the Gates people are missing out on something. They've overlooked another important market for these retreads. You know these motorized karts that kids drive? These karts leave a lot of rubber, and it's not too long before their tires are bald. My number-two son has a kart, and these Gates retreads are just what he's been looking for. Bet other kids could use them too.

Bathe like a Roman

• Crane has just come up with three new baths for sunken installations. It certainly makes having a sunken tub much simpler than custom-building one from scratch.

Do you feel there is something especially luxurious about stepping down into your bath? I always have. I don't think it's just the novelty of it, either. My theory is that this kind of a tub restores water to a more natural position, and we respond from a native deep-seated feeling of rightness within us. Please let me know if you have a theory of your own about it.

Anyway, the Crane baths are called The Marc Antony, The Centurion (illustrated here), and The Caesar. They are available on special order from your Crane dealer. You can get information from Crane Co., P.O. Box 780, Johnstown, Pennsylvania.

100 feet long

• What's remarkable about this hinge is not just that you can get it in any length up to 100 feet, but that it's made of flexible plastic. There isn't any joint. It's the plastic itself that bends. And, like a muscle, the more you use it, the stronger it gets.

This one-piece hinge never needs oiling or painting, can't rust or corrode. It won't leak, which makes it good for marine use. Use it where you would a piano hinge. Nail, staple, or screw it.

It comes 1 1/8", 1 1/2", or 2" wide, in chrome or brown, and for surface or concealed mounting. From 36¢ to 60¢ per foot, from C. E. Shepherd Co., 7110 Avenue C, Houston, Texas.

It's patio painting time

• Waterlox is a good company to know about. Nobody makes a more complete line of paints, finishes, and preservatives for the patio than they do.

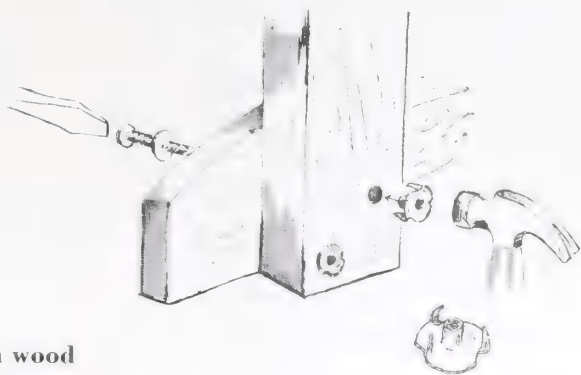

What you'll like about their new Patio Stone Color is that it preserves the natural texture of the concrete, stone, or brick on which you apply it. Most paints fill up all the holes in concrete block. This doesn't. You can use it on walls or floors. The colors were styled by Leon Gordon Miller.

For swimming pool or garden pool, Waterlox makes Grip-Crete, a chlorinated rubber paint. Everyone agrees chlorinated rubber is one of the best finishes for under-water use. For natural wood siding, they make Weather-Cide. Clear finishes like this don't last as long as paint, but this one wears away gradually so you don't have to scrape off the old finish before applying a new coat.

Waterlox also makes an exterior wood finish to bring back the original look of faded redwood or cedar, and a clear wood treatment for protecting against rot, termites, and warping. For making masonry water-repellent, they offer Silox.

Waterlox is a division of the Empire Varnish Co., Cleveland 4, Ohio.

Steel threads in wood

• Good little devices that will help you make many expert repairs are Teenuts. They make it possible to use machine screws or bolts in wood, with no screw-end or nut projecting through to the other side. They have a trim look.

You can use Teenuts to replace screws that have pulled out, and where old screw holes are useless. These fasteners won't pull out.

Teenuts are good for attaching drawer pulls and knobs, for fastening metal to wood, for repairing children's playthings. If you're building cabinets or furniture that you may later want to disassemble, Teenuts are an excellent "knock-down" fastener. The sketch indicates how they are used.

Teenuts come in seven sizes and you get from four to eight of them, depending on size, for 29 cents. They're at hardware counters.

The Editors commend this
"BRAND NEW CRAFT... so exquisite,
it's hard to believe how easily
it's done!"

Capture forest and field on paper, using ferns, fresh or dried leaves, vines, flowers, etc., and Takashimaya's versatile BASIC PAPER KIT.

Make truly original Christmas cards, greeting cards, pictures, screens. Decorate lamp shades. Use compositions under glass tops of tables. The possibilities are unlimited! The results — thrilling! (An exciting, new type of project for school and camp Arts & Crafts Classes!)

House Beautiful Editors devoted 6½ pages of last July's issue to this new "nature craft," and readers responded with overwhelming enthusiasm.

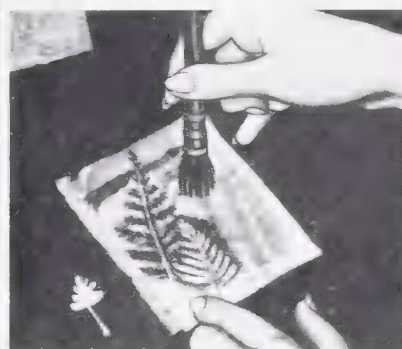

You can master the technique in a half hour. Create beautiful effects in minutes! Just 4 simple steps:

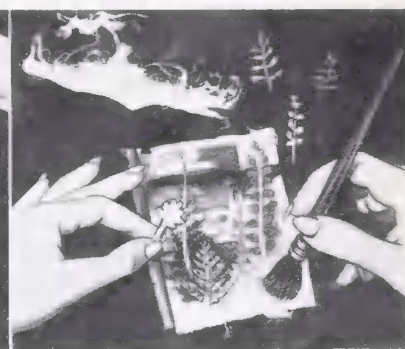

1. Background

2. Leaves

3. Veil

4. Snow or clouds

From Old Mexico HAND MADE OF PURE COPPER

For cooking and informal serving, or as decorative pieces for snacks, fruit or flowers.

Deep in Old Mexico the native craftsmen spend endless hours laboriously shaping these articles by hand from solid pieces of pure copper—a method that has not changed in 2000 years. There is no hurry in this relaxed country. Artists make these objects for the sheer joy of creating beauty, and time is never divided into hours. Mañana (tomorrow) means any time in the future. Because of this our quantities are necessarily limited. Order now for gifts or to keep for yourself.

THE PEDDLER'S WAGON

1905 N. MIDKIFF ROAD, MIDLAND, TEXAS

SOPHISTICUFF encircles your wrist with two initials (maybe his?), has the heavy look of solid gold without giving away its pleasant price tag. It's 14k gold-plate, and we can't think of a smarter gift for a career girl or a grandmother celebrating her Golden Wedding Anniversary! Gold or silver (specify initials), $3.95; 2 for $7.50. Jamaica Silversmith, 50 Delancey St., New York 2.

SWEET AND LOW DOWN. We're fusspots about shoes. They must be comfortable enough for walking, pretty enough to wear with summer casuals, suburban classics, and so we bought a pair of the Linda. White, bone, navy, black, red, or tan calfskin. AAAAAA-D, sizes 2-10, $15.95; 10½-13, $16.95. 50¢ post. Solby Bayes-McIntosh, HB7, 78 Pratt, Hartford 3, Connecticut.

GOLF SCORER. The missing links men might get home to their golf widows earlier if they didn't have to do all that tallying and totaling of the score. Brushed silver plate scorer developed by a golf pro has three number wheels that keep track of score on each hole, hole number, and total. With chain for locker and bag keys, $1. With initials, $1.25. Vernon, HB7, 30 Evans St., New Rochelle, N.Y.

IRISH FRUIT CAKE is every bit as delicious with a tall glass of mint-sprigged iced tea as it is with eggnog, so why wait until Christmas to enjoy it. Baked in Ireland from an ancient recipe, it's loaded with luscious fruits and nuts, enriched with creamery butter, subtly flavored with Irish whiskey. Vacuum tin, $3.95. $7.50, 2. - Powerful 1/20 H.P. EMERSON motor clears 3-acre radius.
- SYLVANIA 10" 22-Watt BLACK LIGHT is irresistible to moths, all flies, gnats, mosquitoes and other flying pests.
- All-weather unit offers full 360 degree range.
- Operates electrically for pennies per mo.
- No Chemicals. • No work.
- No spraying or dangerous odor.
- Perfect for motels • shopping centers • restaurants • drive-ins • dairy barns • service stations, as well as home use.

The all new Jet Control BLACK LIGHT Insect Trap is the most powerful of its kind on the market today. Actually clears a 3 acre area of all harmful insects. Sylvania 10" 22 Watt Black Light draws from grass, gardens, foliage and shrubbery, killing adult insect before eggs are laid (at the height of its mating season). Its Emerson 1/20 H.P. motor is 10 times as powerful as competitive model. (Most others have 1/200 H.P. Motors) and its Jet-Control principle actually pulls the insects into the bag with such force (Creating a wind Tunnel With Over 1175 Cubic Ft. of Air per minute suction) that even powerful house flies and mosquitoes are powerless against it. Ruggedly constructed of corrosion free baked enamel metal to insure years of trouble free operation. Shipped complete with 8 ft. of weatherproof outdoor cord, hanging bracket and reusable mesh bag 13" H. x 12" diam. Wt. 16 lbs. Completely UL approved reg. $34.95. ## KILLER!

(OF FLIES AND MOSQUITOES, THAT IS)

There are over 275,000 insects in every back yard . . . walking, flying, leaping, swimming, boring. They're buzzing, crawling, stinging, biting, eating your barbecued hamburger, drowning in your iced tea, taking the fun out of outdoor living.

And you?

use a BVI INSECT FOGGER. Takes but a minute—your outdoor living area remains bug-free for hours.

Just fill the container of the BVI INSECT FOGGER with ordinary oil-based insecticide. When you pull the trigger, a built-in electric pump forces insecticide through the atomizing nozzle into a heated fog-producing chamber. The heat vaporizes the insecticide and a thick fog surges from the end of the barrel. As the fog spreads through the air and rolls over the ground, it kills insects on contact! You can occupy the fogged areas immediately, but the insect-killing effect lasts for many hours. The barrel is easily detachable, converting unit into an effective sprayer for applying water-base garden sprays, weed killers and similar liquids. Just $34.95* wherever garden products are sold.

A Season for Seashore and Seaports

Places to fill that summertime yen for a briny breeze and the sound of sea gulls

By MARION COUGH

● To coastal Americans, the shore usually means a local strip of oceanside, familiar and nostalgic, associated with childhood's pails and shovels and sand castles, and shells that give back the roar of the sea when you hold them to your ear. It belongs peculiarly to summer, like air conditioning and lemonade, just as it seems the peculiar domain of children and those grownups who have never lost their sense of freedom and romance.

We have many romantic shores in America. In the West, the Pacific pounds in on pebble beaches lined with cliffs of wind-twisted cypress. In the South, the shore may be a place of palm trees and sea grape and crepe myrtle, where the Gulf laps placidly at talcum-fine sand. But the most romantic shores of all belong to New England, for the deep roots of America are still evident there. Briny waterfronts and dunes of beach plum and bayberry recede into trim towns where hollyhock and the brightest of blue hydrangeas bloom in the door-yards, and the houses are crowned with captain's walks, and farm and woodland are never far away from (Please turn to page 102)

Pick it up. Turn it over. Run the blade into its slot.

You've never seen a cutting board like this. Jens Quistgaard built it out of end-grain blocks. The way you build a butcher block. And where it's different, he designed it different. For a reason.

Take the size. Too small for cleaving beef. But just right to slice a lime or lemon on. And the top's concave, so it won't spill the juices. Take the wood. It's Siamese teak. The stuff, not of butcher blocks, but sailing ships. (Jens chose it because it stands up so well to water.)

Then how is this board like a butcher block? Pick up the knife and start to cut. Decisively. Forget your inhibitions. You won't dull the knife or gouge the wood. You're cutting as your butcher cuts. Into end-grain. Not across the fibers. As to the knife itself: the blade's the same tough Finnish stainless steel that prows the Finnish ice-breaker fleet. (The Finns would be ice-bound ten months of the year without it.) And there are two more intelligent bits. A nylon bushing—inside the scabbard slot—to keep the knife blade snug, and safe, and sharp. And the thoughtful price—just $7.95 for board and knife together.

Moon House, as this pavilion is called by its owner and designer, serves as a very economical roof-top, day-night retreat.

Meet the Retreat

new ways to get away from it all —some without even leaving home

By CURTIS BESINGER

● Detachment, the essential quality of a retreat, may be sought—at great expense—by purchasing an entire island or a thousand-acre ranch. It may be gained more economically through architecture. And it needn't be as costly or elaborate as the pavilions built in the 18th Century.

All one needs is a place—one that is clearly defined, set somehow apart, and endowed with a special significance. This was achieved in medieval times with a few trees studiously placed to form a bower. Equally simple means were used in the little, evening-time pavilion shown above.

Designed by Architect William Alexander for the roof of his own house, its actual detachment is no more than a hatch cover in the floor over the stairway to the roof. (The pavilion shelters this hatchway so it may be open for ventilation in rainy weather.) But the sense of detachment is immense. This is due in large part to the clearly stated wood structure, lightly roofed with corrugated aluminum and enclosed with fiber-glass screen. If you imagine the roof top without this structure, you will appreciate how it defines this as a place set apart. More retreats on the next 10 pages

The main room, although having walls of sliding glass doors on three sides, has a strong sense of innerness, induced by its careful geometric organization, the size and position of the fireplace, and the secludedness of the cloth-lined alcoves for couches. Adjoining is a small kitchen serving this room and pool area.

A retreat may not be a fortress but it should be inviolable. Here this is suggested by position—apart from the house and at a lower level—and by a clear, geometric form, the octagon.

In alcoves at both sides of the fireplace are couches used for lounging during the day, but which can be made up as beds for overnight guests. The dressing room, seen through the doorway, has an adjoining bath that may be entered from the outside for use in connection with adjacent pool.

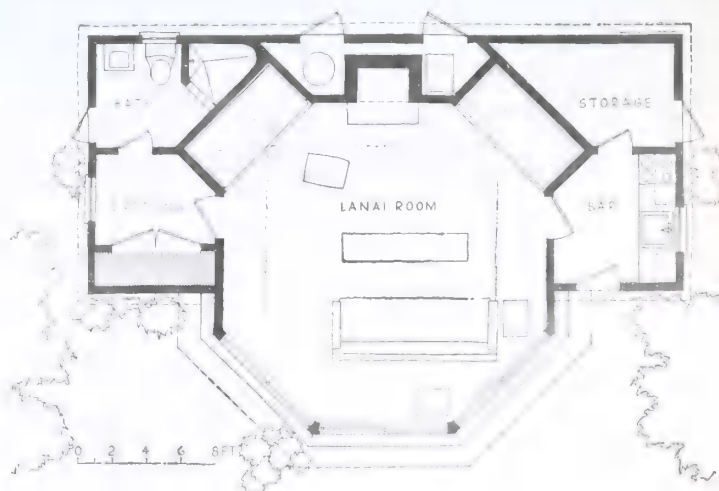

PHOTOGRAPHS BY MORLEY BAER

Retreat to the other end of the garden

● An octagonal pavilion, nineteen feet across, provides a place to sulk in, to entertain an overnight guest in, and to use as a cabaña for the swimming pool. That this is a place inviolate, one not to be too freely invaded, is suggested by the strong geometrical organization of the pavilion and by its being placed apart from the house. This separateness is heightened by the landscape design.

The self-contained-ness of this retreat is made complete, for the convenience of its users, by dressing and bath facilities that have an outside entrance from the deck area of the pool, and by a small kitchen, which also provides for convenient service to persons in and about the swimming pool. As can be seen in the plan at the right, the structure contains spaces for the storage of pool equipment and outdoor furniture used in this area.

A Double-Purpose Retreat for Your Garden

*Poetic refuge in the summer
Storage house in the winter*

● You are looking at a modernized version of the Victorian summerhouse. It is a structure that would invite you to come to it, to get away from the house, to be out in the garden. Perfect though your main house may be, there are times when you don't want to hear the sounds of other people or the machinery of living. There are many activities that are better pursued alone, such as practicing music, doing office or craft work, reading, or napping.

This one-room house uses a new, white, translucent fiber-glass-reinforced plastic called Luminglas for walls and all glazing. (This material is resistant to rocks, hail,

In the spirit of the Victorian summerhouse, this pavilion, glazed with white, translucent plastic, provides a softly luminous interior, a place from which, if one chooses, the outside world can be seen only as a fascinating play of shadows that will stir imagination and encourage reverie.

and industrial fumes, and immune to moisture and brine.)

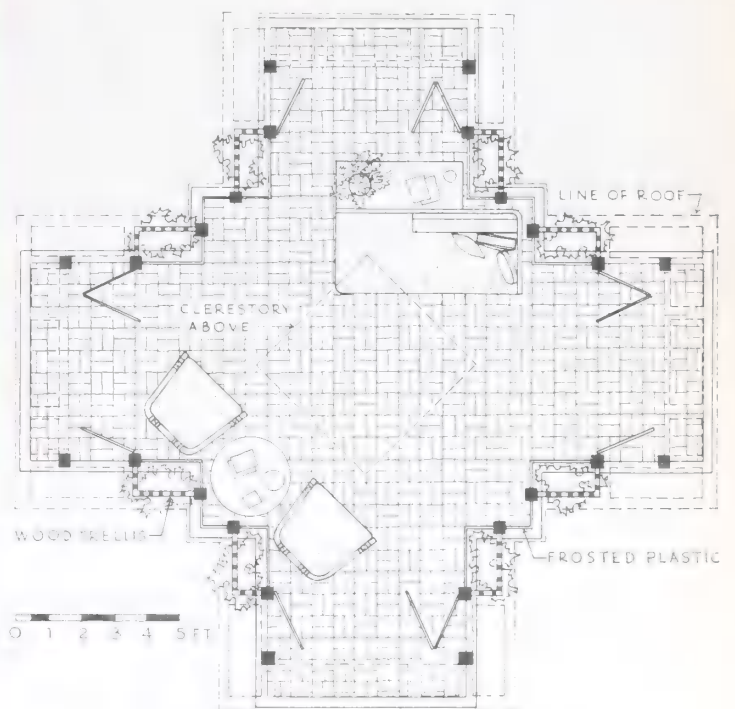

Visually and aesthetically it would make a light, cheerful enclosure that would not seem like an enclosure at all. Being in it, you would still feel the outdoors and part of the garden. Foliage and branches cast lovely, ever changing patterns on it, much as they do on the paper shojis of Japan. Electric heat would make it usable for many months. In winter, it could be a storeroom for garden furniture and other outdoor necessities.

For working drawings of this garden house, send $1 to: Blueprint Co., Dept. HB-5, 101 Park Ave., New York 17.

PHOTOGRAPH BY EZRA STOLLER ASSOCIATES

Above you see how this plastic wall material will mirror the shadows of trees and shrubs, as well as the lattice that occurs in the corners. Plan below would require 272 sq. ft. of Luminglas, costing in the neighborhood of $575. To build this garden house would cost between $2500 and $3500.

DRAWING BY HALLGAIN THATCHER

In plan, the pavilion is essentially a ten-foot square with projecting bays on all four sides that open with doors, so house can be completely open. Trellis is of prefabricated redwood; 144 sq. ft. would be needed, at a cost of $520. See page 101 for sample of it, and how to add bath to plan.

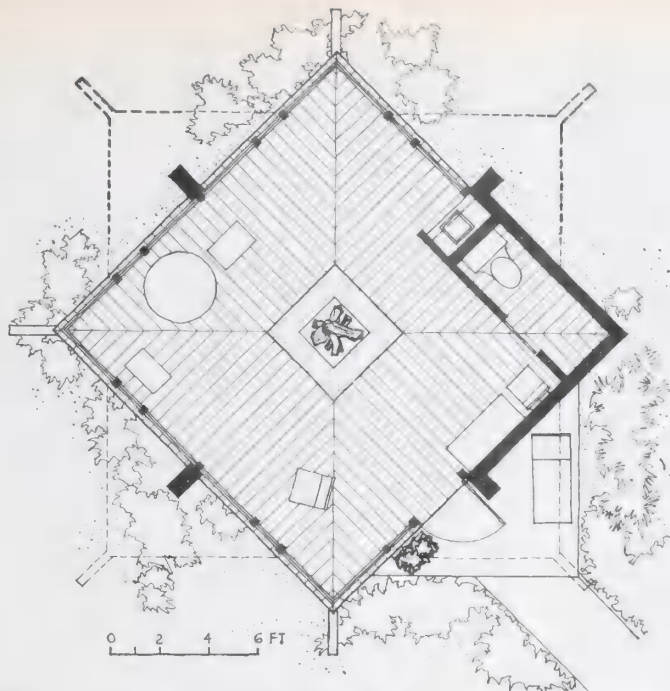

Designed as a vantage point for viewing the lake, the tall pines, and grandchildren playing on the beach, the pavilion also acts as a frame. Depending on where he is seated, this frame directs the viewer's attention to specific segments of the landscape, instead of permitting it to wander unfocused.

Except for the corner nestled into the hillside, space is enclosed with glass for protection against afternoon winds. When weather permits, jalousies and entry door are opened.

This retreat consists, in essence, of a square platform. The roof is a similar square, supported on four concrete block piers and turned at an angle to the platform. The pavilion contains minimum kitchen, dressing-room, and toilet facilities.

Mark of a good retreat — it's a lure, not just a refuge

● What makes a successful retreat? Details may vary from one to another, but the basic principle will not change: It's a place you want to go to, not because you have to get away from it all but because it offers positive values of its own—an uplift to the spirit, a new point of view.

The owners of this retreat had a house several hundred feet up the hill, but they wanted a vantage point down near the water's edge. Here they can view the lake and the surrounding pines and watch their grandchildren playing on the beach. It is a destination to which they can walk and be comfortable after arriving. It has fold-away cots for afternoon siestas or overnight sleeping and a small firepit for evening cook-outs and marshmallow toasting.

Located near the lake shore several hundred feet below their house, the shelter rests among the trees and marks the termination of the path. It is an objective, a place to which they can walk and enjoy a pleasant, relaxing afternoon.

OWNERS: Mr. and Mrs. M. Philip Davis

ARCHITECT: David L. Fowler

PHOTOGRAPHS BY JULIUS SHULMAN

An enclosed area in one corner (see plan above) provides a dressing area conveniently near the lake. At the left of this area are compact kitchen facilities—sink, refrigerator, storage space—for serving prepared meals and refreshments.

Designed for easiest maintenance, the pavilion is built of unfinished redwood and concrete block. Except for the glass areas, only a broom and a dust cloth are needed to put the place in order, even after it has been unused all winter.

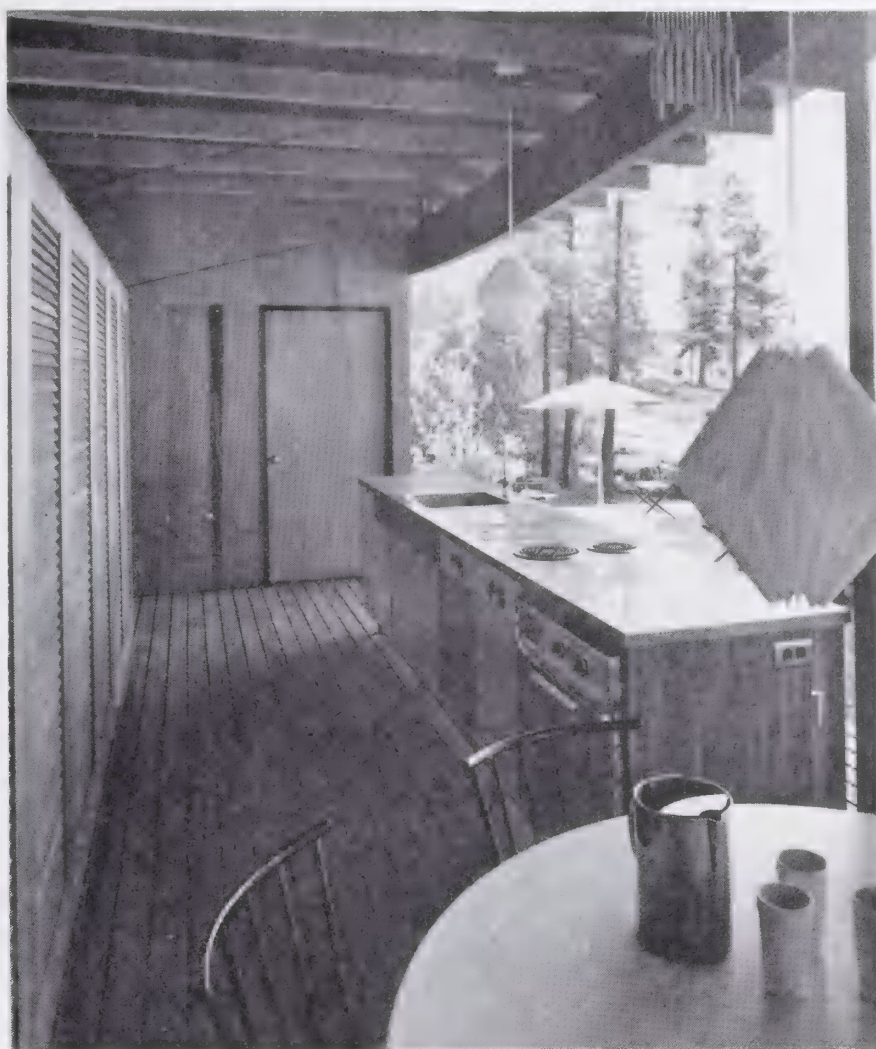

A far cry from the usual rustic week-end cabin, this retreat very carefully inserts the amenities of civilization into a sylvan setting. The best qualities of both are seemingly intensified by being placed in close juxtaposition. Here is a fresh look at how one may rough it in considerable style.

Retreat to the

"What do you do when it rains?" is a question often asked of the owners, but since these shelters must be compared to camp sites with even less protection, not to houses, the question is irrelevant. Sleeping is done in sleeping bags—on cots under the roof, on beds of pine needles, in tents pitched in the woods, or in treehouses built for the purpose. Heavily wooded terrain gives protection.

An area that serves during the day as a sheltered sitting area can also serve, as indicated in the plan below, for sleeping. Second sleep area, at far end, has canvas windbreak.

The kitchen consists of a stainless-steel-topped counter housing a sink, griddle, cooking top, and oven. It's put away for the winter by covering it with a tarpaulin. The door beyond opens to a lockable storeroom for food.

wilds BUT... keep the convenience of plumbing and a modern kitchen

● Getting away from it all is a part of the reason for a retreat, but getting-away-from implies a going-to, which completes the idea. Generally this going-to has as its basic impulse the desire for recreation in its original meaning—not time-killing amusement, but a need to recharge one's spiritual batteries.

As all the retreats included here suggest, this recreation is most often accompanied by a reduction to fundamentals. A person does not take to his retreat baggage filled with the impedimenta of daily life.

The two retreats shown on this and the following page (both are parts of one composition) were designed by Architects Royal McClure and Thomas R. Adkison, not as secluded spots for individuals but as retreats for their own families. If you judge them as places for summer going-to, you will find that living has been reduced to clearly defined—but not primitive—essentials.

As places to live in close contact with sky, mountains, and lake, these two closely related structures are not the product of wishful dreaming or idle speculation. They are a refined product based upon years of family camping experience that has embraced the Northwest from the San Juan Islands to the Rockies. (Please turn the page)

The plan of this retreat illustrates how open space can be quite simply defined as a place for various activities. Note how a change in level, a louvered wall, and the units housing storage and bathing facilities define the areas.

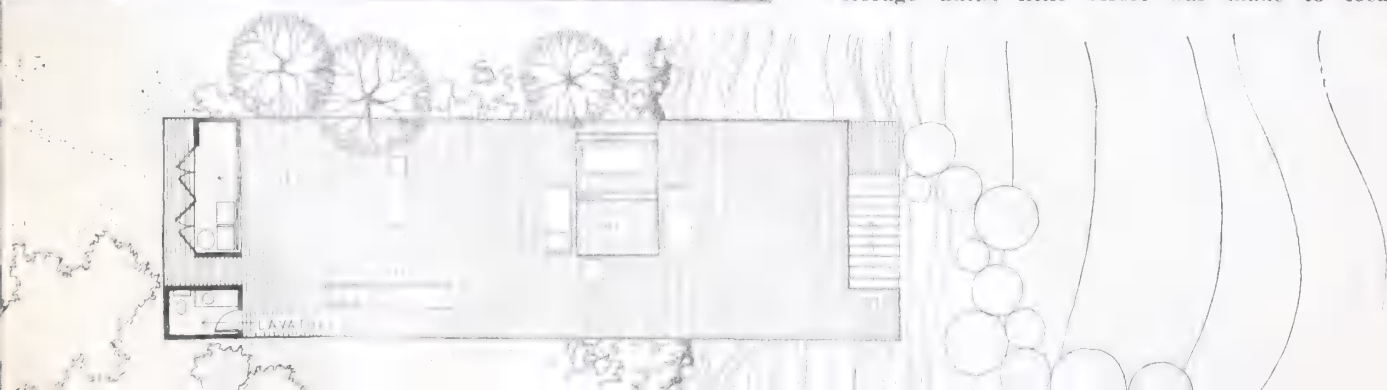

A rectangular platform, without a roof, marks the place to which this family retreats in the summer. A sunken pit provides seating. Beyond it are the kitchen counter and the enclosed structures that house lavatory and storage facilities.

The lockable storage enclosure (see plan below) has doors on both sides and, as part of the kitchen, contains an oven and refrigerator plus space for food supplies. At the left of the open passage is one wall of the lavatory enclosure.

In plan, one sees that this simple rectangular platform, elevated and partially projected over the lake, was designed as a flexible living area. Except for lavatory, kitchen, and storage units, little effort was made to locate activities.

This retreat for summer living makes possible a simple but civilized way of roughing it

● The owners of these platforms, particularly of the one without a roof that is shown here, know that they will be subject to the vagaries of summer weather. However, these are regarded as welcome and exhilarating experiences from which they gain more by being directly involved as participants than by remaining onlookers. Inclement weather has run them home not more than once a year.

In all their previous summers of camping experience, the "fly in the ointment" has not been weather: it has been food preparation and sanitation facilities—or the lack of them. In the plans and photographs shown here you can see that these problems have been solved simply and in contemporary terms. By means of these platforms and their accessories, a selected few of the amenities of present-day living have been carefully inserted, without affected rusticity, into a primeval setting. It has been done without compromising, either, and with a refreshing juxtaposition that by contrast heightens the qualities of both.

The families who use these platforms are quite consciously going to nature in its elemental form for the re-creation that it offers. But they are doing it without smoke-blackened pots and pans, week-old beards, and the other symptoms of decivilization that often accompany roughing it.

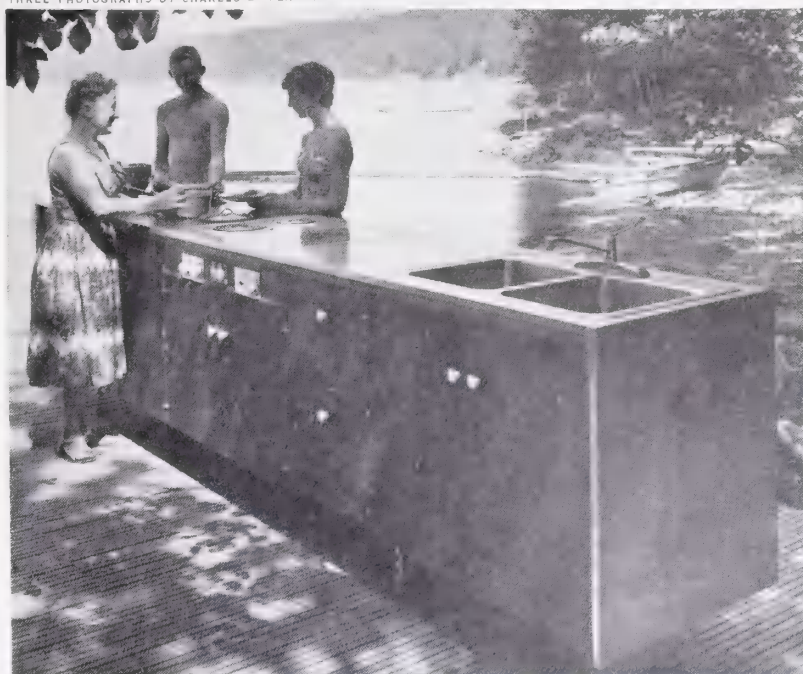

Located apart from the house, this simple wooden structure provides a dry place where children can play if the ground is damp, a quiet place to relax on summer afternoons, and, in the evening, a magical atmosphere for open-air dining.

A little garden house can be your haven

● In all eras of history, gardens have had small shelters that served as places of retreat. Some have been elaborately carved in marble. Few have been as trim and inexpensive as this little pavilion designed by Architect Saul Zaik in collaboration with the Western Pine Association. It was built as a spot to go to near his house, in a part of his property that was seldom used.

Such shelters have had many uses through the years. They have served as trysting places for lovers and as places to which maiden ladies retired to drink iced lemonade and read romantic Victorian novels. They have been places which children have transformed in their play and in their imagination into besieged castles or frontier outposts—and which their parents have, as seen here, transformed with the magic of light into delightful environments for open-air dining or entertaining on summer evenings.

The kitchen, containing sink, range top, griddle, chopping block, and granite slab for pastry, has counter top and end panels of stainless steel. The walnut plywood on the front and back of the cabinet has a protective, fiber-glass covering.

Resting on concrete piers, sturdy 3-by-3 wood posts support both the framing for the floor (made of spaced 2-by-4's) and the roof, not yet started in this photo. Except for the cedar shingle roof, the pavilion was built with white fir.

A scenic autumn landscape featuring a calm lake in the background, surrounded by trees with vibrant yellow and orange foliage. In the foreground, a campfire is burning brightly on a wooden platform, with several logs and a metal pot hanging over it. The scene is bathed in the warm, golden light of late afternoon or early morning.

A family who built their own little world on a lake

With particular pleasure, HOUSE BEAUTIFUL presents an alive and joyous corroboration of the principles by which we edit. It is the secluded lakeside world of Brigadier General and Mrs. Henry C. Huglin and ten-year-old Gregory, on Lake Barcroft, Virginia, twenty minutes from Washington. Its owners acknowledge that much of its inspiration and the courage it took to build it came from our pages.

Far more than a presentation of a house, this is a revelation of what we believe every home should be. Its owners, an instrument to achieve an orderly and pleasant life, opening up opportunities to enjoy every part of the world around them.

The Huglins regard their home as proof that any family can live where they want if they want it enough to build their own world.

tion, and self-doubt behind them, substituting their own ingenuity and labor for the money that no one ever has enough of. Says Jinnie Huglin: "You will never know what you can do until you try. Finding that out was one of the headiest experiences of our life."

An Air Force family, the Huglins have lived in a quonset in Korea, a prefab in Japan, an apartment in Paris, a bungalow in Florida—always far from the lakeside lot in Virginia where they hoped one day to put down roots. Six years ago, the General, Deputy United States Representative to the N.A.T.O. Military Committee and Standing Group, was assigned to Washington for three years, too little time, they thought, to build and enjoy a house. Deciding to sell the lot, they paid it a farewell visit. From the top of the slope, through oak trees and dogwood, they saw the lake glittering in the sun. A flock of Canadian geese took off across the sky. A family of ducks quacked. "Henry," said Jinnie impulsively, "now keep an open mind. Let's build anyway!" We let Jinnie tell the story from here.

"Through the kitchen door (far right) there's a 65-foot open vista through kitchen, family room, and Greg's room. On party occasions I close this up with a door that matches the wall. Japan taught me restraint, so I have few accessories, mostly unusual and made by me. The wall panel is part of a beaded Folies Bergère costume I found in the Paris Flea Market."

"Audacity is the only ticket!"

● "We just threw caution to the winds and decided to build," says Jinnie. "Financially, our timing was terrible, but, as Sir Winston Churchill said about attempting to paint, 'Audacity is the only ticket!' So Henry audaciously drew up the three-foot module plan we'd been dreaming of all those years while we were birds of passage. We borrowed money like mad so we could afford a good contractor and quality materials. But what we couldn't afford were the refinements we wanted—hand-finished Philippine mahogany walls, flagstone entrance steps, a retaining lake wall and beach, flagstone paths and a picnic platform, a pool on the upper terrace, landscaping and a drainage system for same on our steep site. When estimates for such goodies as these nearly blew our hats off, we knew there was only one way we could have them—and that was to do the work ourselves."

"We almost float on the lake. We see it from every room in the house but I think our favorite view is this 180° stretch of water and woods. The hearth is my handwork—squares of gray slate set in cement, painted with flat black enamel, waxed."

"We control the climate, and the seasons decorate"

● "Probably our greatest do-it-yourself triumph is the way the house takes advantage of our climate's good points and minimizes its worst. We did this with the guidance of HOUSE BEAUTIFUL's Climate Control articles, orienting the house to face due south. The woods shield it from the western sun.

"Our sheltered upper terrace is a sun trap, stretching our outdoor living into early winter. In fact, we live outdoors for nearly three quarters of the year. The cold north winds sweep high above us as we nestle down in our southern slope. In summer the white gravel roof reflects the sun's heat, and the wide overhang shields the windows. The entire house is shaded by great trees which we took special care to protect. I was on hand the minute the bulldozer arrived to clear the lot, and saw to it that our precious trees were neither mowed down nor had their trunks stifled with soil. As a result we have big oaks flourishing within three feet of our walls. We have air conditioning, but use it only occasionally on very humid days. In winter, the low and welcome sun shines through our windows so effectively that our gas-heating bills for 2,600 sq. ft. average only $35 a month from October through April. A humidifier keeps our indoor climate at a comfortable humidity level. Our north and west double-brick walls have vermiculite insulation.

"Outdoors, we have worked with nature to create a varied climate. Our bedroom deck captures every breeze, as does our cool lake-side beach, on the very point of our lot."

"So very close are we to the leaves, branches, and blossoms of the trees around us that we don't need much decorating in the master bedroom. The seasons decorate for us. Our great delight is the bedroom deck, just twenty-two feet above the lake. Here we often eat, sunbathe, fish, take 'moonbaths.'"

"Our bedroom decoration changes daily, from the pink and green of spring dogwood to the snow-white patterns of winter. Our deck is a perfect moon-viewing balcony. Or on summer nights we may light up the oak tree, towering 75 feet above us, and have coffee on the deck, listening to stereo music."

"From the top of the driveway you would never guess the open ringside seat on the lake's activities that our window-walled living quarters give us. In winter, we live with a perpetual Carrier & Ives print. The lake is our private rink. At night we turn on our tree lights and keep on skating."

"On our sloping lot, we built on two levels, filling in the space where the land falls away with a lower floor. This gives us a recreation room, two bedrooms, a storage-utility room, and the bonanza of an extra terrace. The main terrace, into which I built a black marble pool-fountain, is on a level with the land."

"My control-tower kitchen has its own private sky"

● "The kitchen is in the center of the house, and there's really no demarcation between it and the living and dining rooms. They are all similarly paneled, and this openness can be closed up with extra panels whenever we want to look formal. (We store these under a bed!) In this 'inner room,' I never feel as if I'm off somewhere in a clothes closet slaving over a hot sink, because from the sink I can see about 75 percent of the upper floor: I can view the lake, the upper terrace, and the sky; and I am within using distance of all the utilities from phone to laundry bin.

"Besides borrowing light from the rooms around it, the kitchen is always flooded with light from its 2½'-by-6' skylight. This, like the other skylights in the house, has added a new dimension of beauty to our living—the world above us. As we walk through the house, we are continually aware of the branches overhead, the clouds, the sky. Cooking on a gloomy winter's day, I have often looked up to see the first snowflake fall. The soft patter of raindrops on the glass overhead tells me that a storm is coming long before I hear it on the windows. And at night, I can see the moon and stars shining in my private kitchen sky.

"I'm told that 40 percent of a housewife's day is spent in the kitchen, but I know this housewife spends more time than that because the kitchen is such a pleasant place to pursue my innumerable (Please turn to page 100).

"Dining room opens to living room and the upper terrace. A step away from the kitchen, it becomes a little lake-viewing pavilion. Pass-through can be closed with a matching panel."

"In this light-flooded inner room I can keep an eye on practically the whole upper floor of the house. Over-sink window looks out to the upper terrace and to the lake beyond. Skylight (see also at right) has a fiber-glass panel to diffuse the light on very sunny days."

"We can entertain 250 at an official lawn party."

"I carry hors d'oeuvres for a raft cocktail party."

"Lanterns add glamour."

"We give lantern-lit suppers on the picnic platform."

"Entertaining is easy— in eleven different places"

● "No place in the world does more entertaining than Washington. The conventional 'do' is the formal reception or dinner, but our lake, trees, lawn, and terraces offer such a variety of natural party settings that we can ring lots of changes on convention with the more informal outdoor luncheon or dinner, the picnic, or alfresco cocktail party. We're particularly grateful to our little lake world for giving us the chance to show this informal side of American life to my husband's European colleagues in N.A.T.O.

"I've counted up eleven different spots in which we can entertain, each with its own atmosphere to suit the occasion. A party may be a hot-chocolate and doughnut feast on the long lurrace after a day on the ice and snow (we skate on our lake and ski on our slopes) or, on the same terrace, we may give a little lantern-lit dinner on a summer's evening, followed by a starry-night (Please turn to page 110)

◀ The Champagne Cup, chilled in a large urn and served in strawberry-and-mint-garnished wine glasses (see recipe next page), is typical of cups that can make entertaining easy.

It is fun for guests to serve themselves when drinks like this Cointreau Cup (recipe on page 75) are carted out to patio or garden in frosty brandy inhalers, urns, or pitchers.

11 Cooling Wine Cups to Slake Summer Thirst

If you want a vacation from tending bar, try these cups.

Mixed in quantity before a party, they encourage guests to pour their own. Lighter than cocktails, they are really thirst-quenching

● If you're tired of fussing around the bar during a party, switch to wine cups, a refreshing cooler for hot weather. (Wine cups get their names from the wines dominating the recipe—even though liqueurs and other ingredients may be present, too.) They are ideal for summer-parched guests who prefer not to be hit by strong alcohol in hot weather.

Wine cups may be presented in big brandy inhalers, silver or glass pitchers, or glass wine urns holding a gallon or more. Set up with glasses on a cart, they may be wheeled out to patio, terrace, garden, or poolside for guests to help themselves. The traditional serving glass used is either a stemmed four-ounce claret or six-ounce champagne saucer or goblet. Most of the cup's mixture can be prepared in advance and kept chilled in the refrigerator. At the last minute you need to add only charged water or sparkling wine, and ice. Don't save them for parties: mix a pitcherful for a few friends or take a thermosful on a picnic. (Please turn the page)

The cup is not a punch, which has come to mean anything potable from a spiked 7-Up to cranberry juice. The cup, originating from the custom of pledging healths and going back to early England (and, earlier than that, to Rome), is a traditional compound of champagne, brandy, or gin (now sometimes vodka), one or more sweet liqueurs, a charged water or sparkling wine, and, if wanted, a sweetener. It was originally a communal cup. Today, the annual feasts of the City and Inns of Court of London follow the custom of drinking from one magnificent silver cup, passed around.

Since time immemorial, the wine cup has been garnished with fresh sprigs of borage. This blue-flowered herb, according to legend, makes anyone who drinks of it more courageous. But you may substitute the rind of a cucumber, thinly sliced. Other garnishes you may use are mint, fresh pineapple sticks, almost any berry (unstemmed for eating by hand after they soak in a delicious cup), peeled white grapes, and spirals of lemon or orange peel. You may even drop in flowers.

You may make a cup of either sparkling or still wines, red or white. If you use a sweetener, carefully mellowed, since the liqueurs are sweet; use the finest of granulated sugar, dissolved in a little water before mixing.

For many recipes that call for soda water, you can substitute dry champagne and make a much more exciting—and more potent—cup. All of these recipes call for mixing with ice: be sure that you have plenty of hard ice cubes on hand.

The following recipes require nothing so exotic that you won't have it in your liquor cabinet. But it is also fun to use your own ingenuity and imagination as a mixer. It is important to prechill as many liquid ingredients as possible, as well as the serving containers.

Sparkling Burgundy Cup

- |                           |                           |
|---------------------------|---------------------------|
| 1 oz. peach brandy        | 1 26-oz. bottle sparkling |
| 2 oz. curaçao             | burgundy                  |
| 1 7-oz. bottle soda water | Sweetener to taste        |

Mix ice cubes and ingredients in a large, chilled pitcher, stir until cold; sweeten if desired. Pour into glasses, and garnish each glass with maraschino cherry and sprig of mint. Serves from 8 to 10.

Champagne Cup No. 1

- |                  |                           |
|------------------|---------------------------|
| 2 oz. brandy     | 1 26-oz. bottle champagne |
| 3 oz. triple sec | Sweetener to taste        |
| 1 oz. sherry     |                           |

Into large chilled pitcher or other server, put plenty of ice; then pour in liquid ingredients in order named. Stir until well iced; garnish pitcher with sprig of borage or mint, and each glass with a peeled white grape. Fill glasses. Serves 10.

- |                  |                           |
|------------------|---------------------------|
| 3 oz. brandy     | 1 26-oz. bottle champagne |
| 3 oz. triple sec |                           |

Have ready in each claret or champagne glass a few mint leaves and chilled, unstemmed strawberries (to be eaten by hand by their stems). Put ice into a large pitcher or other container, add brandy, triple sec, and champagne; stir, and pour quickly into glasses. Serves 8.

← You can mix in advance most ingredients needed for summer coolers like Sparkling Burgundy Cup (photograph and recipe, opposite page). Having them ready for last-minute additions makes party-giving easier for the host.

→ Use a cart to set up your glasses and ingredients for making cups like this Moselle or May Wine Cup (recipe below). This gives you a portable bar that can be wheeled to any inviting spot where your guests may gather.

Moselle Cup

- |                              |                                |
|------------------------------|--------------------------------|
| 1 24-oz. bottle Moselle wine | 2 oz. Benedictine or B. and B. |
| 2 oz. brandy                 | 2 oz. curaçao                  |
|                              | 1 28-oz. bottle soda water     |

Mix ice and liquid ingredients in a large, chilled pitcher or other container. Stir until well iced. Pour into glasses garnished with slice of cucumber rind. To turn this Moselle Cup into a traditional May Wine Cup (Maie Trank), scatter freshly washed violet, pansy, or anemone blossoms on top of the pitcher and put a leaf of the flower into each filled glass. Makes a picturesque cup. Serves 12.

Cointreau Cup

- |                       |                           |
|-----------------------|---------------------------|
| 2 oz. Cointreau       | 4 oz. gin                 |
| 1 oz. apricot brandy  | 1 7-oz. bottle soda water |
| 2 oz. French vermouth |                           |

Put ice into large pitcher, add liquid ingredients, stir until cold. Fill glasses, and garnish each with peeled grape or berry and sprig of mint. Serves 4.

Mint Cup

- |                             |                             |
|-----------------------------|-----------------------------|
| 2 oz. gin                   | 2 oz. white crème de menthe |
| 2 oz. French vermouth       | 1 7-oz. bottle soda water   |
| 2 oz. green crème de menthe |                             |

Put ice into large pitcher or other container, add liquid ingredients (using as much soda as desired), and chill. Fill glasses, and garnish each with a sprig of borage or mint. Serves 4.

Sherry-Champagne Cup

- |                             |                                |
|-----------------------------|--------------------------------|
| 2 oz. cream sherry          | 1 teaspoon bitters             |
| 1 oz. curaçao or triple sec | 1 12-oz. bottle iced champagne |
| 1 oz. maraschino liqueur    |                                |
| 1 oz. brandy                | 1 7-oz. bottle soda water      |

Put ice into a large pitcher or other container and add liquid ingredients. Stir until cold, and decorate pitcher with cucumber rind or borage. Fill glasses and garnish each with pineapple stick. Serves 6 to 8.

Cider Cup

- |                              |                             |
|------------------------------|-----------------------------|
| 1 quart cider or apple juice | 2 oz. curaçao or triple sec |
| 2 oz. apple brandy           | 1 12-oz. bottle soda water  |

Put ice and liquid ingredients into a large pitcher or other container and stir until cold. Pour into glasses and garnish with mint or slice of cucumber rind. Serves 10.

Pimm's Cup with Rhine Wine

- |                        |                           |
|------------------------|---------------------------|
| 3 oz. Pimm's No. 1 Cup | 3 oz. Rhine wine          |
| 3 oz. Italian vermouth | 1 7-oz. bottle soda water |

Put ice and liquid ingredients into large pitcher or brandy inhaler and stir until cold. Serve in glasses garnished with borage or cucumber rind. Serves 4.

Sauternes Cup No. 1

- |   |                          |
|---|--------------------------|
| 2 12-oz. bottles chilled French sauternes | 2 oz. brandy             |
|   | 2 oz. maraschino liqueur |

Fill a large pitcher or wine urn with ice and liquid ingredients; stir until well chilled. As a garnish, add 2 or 3 curled pieces of orange or lemon rind to pitcher and one to each glass. Fill glasses. Serves 8 to 10.

Sauternes Cup No. 2

- |  |                           |
|--|---------------------------|
| 1 12-oz. bottle chilled French sauternes | 2 oz. brandy              |
| 1 oz. triple sec or curaçao              | 1 7-oz. bottle soda water |
|  | Sweetener to taste        |

Put ice into a large pitcher or other container and add liquid ingredients, and sweetener, if desired. Stir until cold and garnish pitcher with cucumber rind. Fill glasses garnished with small clusters of white grapes. Serves about 6. For more data on accessories in photographs, see page 101.

BEFORE

Here you see how pleasant today's porches can be. These porches were added as part of a remodeling project. Formerly, the house all but ignored its outdoors and the good living it had to offer. The "before" photo at left shows you how the two porches were added to the gable ends as remodeling began.

Above, after remodeling, you see how the small-paned windows were replaced with large panels of glass, completing the opening of the house to the outdoors. The photo in the lower corner (shown in color on our cover) is the scene you see when looking out. The outdoors is a real part of the house.

Two new versions of the old-fashioned porch

1. A pair of glass-roofed arbors turns the focus of this house toward the outdoors and becomes its most pleasant feature

AFTER BEFORE

A porch cannot be built without considering the entire garden and the relationship of all elements in it. Plan, right, shows how this garden was organized. Elevation of the living room's deck creates a definition between it and the paved areas of the family-room terrace. Swimming pool does not appear in photos.

■ The porch is back, and it has changed. It still works like the old-fashioned porch, but it is more terraced and more intimate with the garden.

In the generation when the house shown here (and on the cover) was built, outdoor living as we know it had yet to be discovered. A house and its site were separate things. Today we know them as one, and the changes you see in this house are an expression of this change in our thinking. The house focus has been turned outward to its garden. Porches have become a bridge between indoors and out.

These aren't porches in the traditional sense. There is no roof weighing darkly close upon you. It is high above, and in this case pleasantly semitransparent, so the effect is arbor-like. You are sheltered, but you are aware that sky and foliage are close. The conception is freer. Where a tree grows, a roof opening lets it through. There are other differences.

The porch floor, really a terrace floor, goes beyond the reaches of the roof, blurring any sharp demarcation. House, porches, lawn, the scene beyond—all are part of an unbroken continuity, a smooth totality from which interfering or discordant elements have been eliminated. Where brush and a miscellany of trees interfered with a view of the lake, they were removed, and the view opened up. Where grades were awkwardly sharp, filling was done, extending the level areas around the porches.

The twin porches give two different kinds of living on two different levels. In each case their level matches that of the interior area they adjoin. There are no steps to create a psychological barrier between indoors and out.

2. A grand-scaled porch unites the house with the big scale of outdoors

■ The scale of nature is very big. The porch shown here is successful because it matches that bigness. It is no puny structure, scaled like a room, as porches have been in the past. Its proportions are in perfect harmony with its surroundings, and the wide-spreading shelter it offers is abundantly useful as well as beautiful.

The platform of the typical old-fashioned porch stopped where the roof stopped. This one reaches out so that the area becomes more than a porch—it is a terrace as well. There is no break between house and garden. They are joined, and the porch is the link. Judge for yourself how much this house gains in stature by this union with its site.

Wood divider strips add softening pattern to the concrete of this porch floor and relate it to the house structure. The porch floor is at the same level as the floors inside the house.

Easy curves lead you from porch into garden, as you see in the photo at left. Where does the porch end, the garden begin? You never know. One area merges with the next. It is a pleasant blending. The free-swinging curves of grass within curves of concrete create areas of special character in what would otherwise be an ordinary, undistinguished, flat expanse.

The steps of yesterday's porches were narrow and, typically, on one side only. Today's steps are on the grand scale appropriate to things outdoors. They suggest generosity, hospitality, and easy, lazy living—never the effort of climbing.

How the porch, with its related terrace area, exceeds the size of the rest of the house is clearly shown in plan at left. Note how the porch wraps around its wing of the house.

Window decoration (right) is given a custom look in this room through the use of a floral sateen border on the valance and along the edge of the linen curtains. Below is a similar border in an acanthus leaf design from Brunschwig & Fils, Inc.

Borders

The run-of-the-mill can be special if you make ingenious use of simple borders

By FRANCES HEARD

● It is a fact of economic life that inexpensive, ready-made soft goods for the home—tablecloths, bedspreads, curtains, slip covers, pillow cases, place mats, etc.—cannot incorporate fine detailing or special design work.

You have to accept this fact, but you may not realize that in the wide world of ribbons, braids, woven tapes, and printed borders lies the key to easy customizing of these ready-mades.

The border is one of the oldest forms of decoration. The lotus leaf, fret, arabesque, rinceau curve, beading, and egg-and-dart are all ornamental forms that date back thousands of years. Many of these same motifs, as well as more contemporary ones, are available in a full range of widths and colors, to be applied with the simplest of sewing stitches. You'll find them in notion shops; in the notions, dress-goods, or fabrics sections of department stores; and in fabric showrooms. On these six pages we suggest ways to put these borders to work.

Jofa's "Narbonne" cotton print (close-up at right) is an 8", precut, seamed-edge border. Below, it makes a special item of a typical director's chair. Right, the same print is combined with braid on a ready-made bedspread, giving a tailored look and breaking up the wide bed into pleasing proportions.

Variety in your table settings is easy with a collection of tapes and ribbons that snap onto underside of place mat (see example, above left). Same Conso woven tape was used above to give a special touch to the ottoman cover. It fits neatly between weltings.

Elegance is achieved in a bedroom using Scalamandre's medallion braid trim. It combines well with heavy linen on headboard, pillow covers, and bedspread to accentuate the classic formality of the bed.

Ordinary rug becomes important part of the room's decoration with the addition of a needlepoint border. Design and colors can be chosen to correlate with another pattern in room.

Braid comes in a preformed design, as shown here, or you can purchase plain braid and form the design yourself. This one, in a scroll pattern, gives an elegant look to an otherwise simple table setting (left). Below, lamp shade is turned into something special with the same braid.

Felt is an excellent material to use as a border, since it can be cut into elaborate patterns that require no hemming. These two photographs illustrate window shades treated with felt borders. Above, a novelty pattern is chosen for striped shades; right, border stripe repeats stripe in rug.

Inexpensive and easy to do, a Conso woven tape is applied to ready-made curtains in a double border. The loose weave of the border enables the background color of the curtains to come through. More elaborate hems could be made using a variety of borders. Same treatment would work on a bedspread.

How to benefit from The Intensive Use of Objects

Continuing House Beautiful's answer to America's great need:
More Storage Space

● What happens when you really run out of storage space, when you've added closets and cabinets and still haven't enough put-away room for the things you want to keep? One answer is to get more use from fewer objects. Make each new possession serve more than one function. Don't let an immediate need lead you into a collection of single-purpose, one-time-use objects.

This theory of multiple use should not be confined to the obviously functional gadget. It should permeate your shopping attitude so that you automatically look at a tablecloth as a possible wall hanging, at an ice bucket as a flower container, at a firewood box as a seat or a plant stand. So many things can lead double lives in your home.

One of the ways to recognize this category of possessions is to visualize the useful object apart from its obvious function. Would it have to be stored away, or can it stand on its own as a beautiful object (Please turn the page)

PHOTOGRAPH BY FRED BAKER ICE TONGS SOUP LADLE FROM JAMES

◀ Years ago, the ice bucket was a chrome or aluminum bowl, well fitted to hold ice, but nothing to be proud of. It was kept in the cabinet between uses. Today you can find objects of true beauty to serve the same function. They are so handsome, in fact, that you will find other uses for them, or simply keep them out to decorate the room. Shown above and at the left are two good examples of this multipurpose thinking, both from the new Tokaido group of accessories. Each is so handsome that it could serve, as shown, to hold flowers or flowering branches. Each, because of its clean, insulated lining, can be a hot- or cold-food container—perhaps a way to serve cold soup at a buffet. Sugi-wood bucket, left, about $32. Lacquer bucket above, about $40.

and be made to play a part in the artistic whole surrounding you? A new series of accessories, the Tokaido group, can give you some idea of what we have in mind. We show a variety of objects from this group, along with other suggestions, on these six pages.

Each has been photographed to illustrate its multiple purposes. But as you shop for yourself, do not be limited by what we suggest. Your own situation may call for a brand-new combination. This is not idle talk, for the HOUSE BEAUTIFUL staff is constantly seeing, in homes around the country, end-uses never conceived of by either manufacturers or design professionals.

However, to make a success of this calls for a new approach to shopping. It is not enough to know that you need an hors-d'oeuvres tray, for example. You will find dozens to choose from, all perfectly acceptable as trays. But among them, perhaps, will be a narrow one that might make an original centerpiece. Or it may be that there is a circular one handsome enough to hang on the wall over a hall chest. All these conditions must be carried in your mind's eye, as it were, while you are shopping for a tray on which you will ordinarily serve hors d'oeuvres. It may sound like work, but it really isn't. Answering the question "What else can I do with that?" can be fun as well as space-saving.

These tightly woven bamboo baskets are double-walled, making them strong enough to support fruit, yet look delicate enough to serve croissants. As they catch the light, they cast fascinating shadows. Each basket comes with a mustard-colored napkin square called a fukin. Tokaido, Great Neck, N.Y. About $7 each.

When is a tray not a tray? When it's a centerpiece or a beautiful background on a shelf. These two Tokaido trays are made of finely grained keyaki wood. The 34"-long one (background) makes a perfect table decoration: it costs about $22. The 21"-by-18" rectangle, $32, looks well on a sideboard or shelf. Hors d'oeuvres here on Tokaido fruit plates, about $12 each.

When you separate them (above), you have two generous ice containers, flower arrangement bowls, or what you will. As a stool-table, it stands 17" high with a 9½"-diameter top. When open, each bucket measures 12" across. Stool is metal with an antique-gold finish. From Carole Stupell, 54 E. 57th St., N.Y.C. About $40.

The Ancient Magic of the Zither

The versatility and unique sound of this instrument, all but forgotten for decades, is being rediscovered by an increasing number of enthusiasts

By ALICE DELMAN

● The haunting quality of zither music was beautifully demonstrated in the The Third Man about thirteen years ago. The movie was good but is best remembered for the unique sound of the instrument upon which its theme was played. "The Third Man Theme" has since become a minor classic, and interest in the zither is still on the increase.

The genesis of the instrument is lost in history. It was known in Egypt in 1700 B.C. and, in various forms, has been in use ever since. Its unique sound today combines the lively sound of melody strings played with a steel pick, and the gentle sound of open chords stroked with the fingers. "The zither speaks like no other instrument," said the composer Meyerbeer. "Next to singing, it is the most complete, from its sudden, melancholy notes to its swift, happy, teasing melodies."

Popular for the gay romantic quality of its music, the zither is the national instrument of Bavaria and is played widely in Europe. In America you hear it most often on records, in a few Viennese restaurants (Hapsburg House, The Walldorfkeller, and Gay Vienna in New York City), and as accompaniment to folk singing. The concert zither (opposite page) is one of the most difficult instruments to master. There are five melody strings (tuned A-A-D-G-C) on the fretted finger board, and from 27 to 37 accompaniment strings for chording. The range of six-to-seven octaves makes possible deeper tones, fuller harmonies, and a more varied repertoire than most stringed instruments. Most of us will be content to listen to the performance of the few masters of the concert zither. A list of recordings of concert music is on page 107.

The simplified zither shown on the right is another matter. It is easy to play. The strings are spaced farther apart, and there is no finger board to contend with. With the right hand, you pick out melodies on the chromatically tuned strings. With the left, you play the accompaniment on the pretuned chords. By simply stroking the chords, you can accompany the singing of simple folk songs.

The simplified zither may have from 33 to 46 strings, depending upon the number of pretuned chords it has. If you read music, you can follow the notes. If not, you can use number-music which is matched to the numbers marked on the instrument. Some zithers come with a number-music instruction book. Others have a note chart that fits under the strings and shows graphically how to play simple tunes. These instruments, complete with picks, tuning key, and instructions, cost about $20 to $35.

In some music stores, you may be shown an autoharp instead of a zither. The autoharp is about the same size and shape as the simplified zither, but it is designed to play chords only, not melody. It makes a fine background for folk singing and is one of the easiest of all instruments to play. There are narrow bars running parallel to the base of the instrument. Each of these is marked with a chord symbol. When you press down the bar, it mutes all strings except those that make up that chord. Hold down the bar, stroke the strings with a pick or fingers, and the chord will sound.

The number of bars determines the number of different chords that can be played. They usually come in five, twelve, or 15-bar models, and cost about $25 to $50.

Each string of a zither, or autoharp, is tuned individually, and, for enjoyable playing, all strings must be in tune. If you have a piano (in tune), this can be used for a reference. If you have relative pitch, you can tune by ear. Most people need a chromatic pitch pipe (about $3) to tune by. You set the pipe on the needed note, blow, and match the string to the note. The less variation in temperature and humidity, the better your instrument will stay in tune.

The zither's odd name is derived from the name of a classical lyrelike Greek instrument called the kithara. A similar instrument in ancient Rome was known as the cithara. The Italians called it a cetera, and to the German, who probably brought the instrument to this country, we owe the "American" word zither.

Sometimes it is confused with other instruments that are quite different but have similar names. One of these is the cittern, a four-string, round-bellied instrument frequently strummed in Elizabethan times by barber-shop customers awaiting a shave. Another is the gittern, a gut-stringed Elizabethan guitar which is in direct line of descent from the ancient lyre to the guitar we know today.

In some parts of the South, the multistring dulcimer, which is played with padded hammers, is called a zither. This is not to be confused with the three-string Appalachian dulcimer, which is plucked. It's no wonder that some people in the Southern hills take the easy way out and use the name zither for all stringed instruments.

The modern concert zither, with 30 strings or more, was developed in Munich about 130 years ago, and is regarded as a comparatively new instrument. The earlier versions had 17 or 18 strings. The added strings provided for the full twelve-tone octave, so more complex and brilliant music could be played upon it. During the last few centuries, thousands of classical selections have been composed for the zither. Mozart was sufficiently charmed by it to compose a canzonetta, "Play, Sweet Zither," for his comic opera Don Giovanni. And Johann Strauss wrote a delightful zither solo for "Tales from the Vienna Woods."

The zither reached the zenith of its popularity in America during the gay and sentimental nineties. Its soothing tone made it a favorite "parlor instrument." And it was frequently strummed at picnics and other small social gatherings. But soon after the turn of the century, it fell from favor here, perhaps because second-generation Americans found the piano, guitar, and other instruments easier to play.

American ingenuity, however, made a contribution to its comeback. The application of electronic amplifying systems to the zither has extended its use from the home and intimate café to more spacious restaurants and concert halls.

The appeal of a sound that has beguiled the human ear for more than 36 centuries is not to be lightly dismissed. The unique music of the zither is available on record, and should be part of any well-rounded collection. Concert zithers can be ordered from Germany, or sometimes found in antique shops. An instruction book is available, and some sheet music. For information on where to get records, music, instructions and instruments, please turn to page 107.

How to put the gracious gloss on hospitality

By MARION GOUGH

All about how to perfect those fine points of hospitality that make the guests glad they came and the hosts sorry to see them depart

● Let us ponder the signs of the season. From Ogunquit to Amagansett, from Orcas Island to Laguna, on every mountain lake and ocean strand, on bays, gulfs, and meadowlands, even in the roaring city's boom, humanity splits into its two summertime camps.

Behold the Hosts. Expectant, jovial, they wear their welcomes as exuberantly as their suntans and Bermuda shorts, lined up at railroad stations, docks, crossroads, and bus terminals, anxious to carry the suitcases, give up their beds, and otherwise pamper the incoming guests.

Regard the Guests. Flustered, hot but happy, and equally exuberant, they arrive, clutching their offerings of rare wine and soap made to look like little strawberries, and then, the rites of greeting done, lie star-scattered, as Omar Khayyám would put it, on the grass, the beach, the porch, and on all available sleeping surfaces.

This is the season when, sooner or later, if you are not one, you are bound to be the other. Now is hospitality most freely extended and—let us be honest—most frequently stretched to the breaking point. These are the Monday mornings when it is possible for the Smiths to wonder if the Joneses are really the same good friends into whose arms they fell so joyously on Friday night.

For this is the truth about hospitality. It is, like marriage, a sensitive plant. And given more than a few hours of polite and mannerly exchange, of shared meals and activities, of conversation and the vagaries of a commonly used plumbing system, it can become too mixed a metaphor to bear and tangled as the wire clothes hangers in too many guest-room closets.

Unless—and here is the burden of my message—both host and guest approach this intimacy with matching sensibility and sense. Somewhere between the wildland host's traditional exhortation "Please make yourself at home," and the reticent guest's antiphonal, "Oh, please don't fuss for me!" there is the perfect formula. Strike it, and the week or week-end or overnight stay becomes a lifelong bond.

Where should our admonitions start? With hosts? Perhaps, for the greater load is theirs. Who issued the invitation? Who opened wide their door? (We will catch up with them later with lists and check lists!)

But let us first examine the guest—the pampered, prepared-for cynosure of the occasion—and what it takes to be a good one. Shall he—or she, or they—arrive on the 9:50, when seven was agreed upon? Shall they arrive sans toothbrush, bathing cap, bedroom slippers, and allergy capsules? Or cigarettes or razor blades? Shall they bring, unexpectedly, small creatures in carrying cases ("I hope you won't mind; all he really needs is baby food strained through a linen napkin")? Shall the game-minded count on the use of the host's favorite racquet? The answer is too obvious to recite. But neither shall they carry with them the subtler, deadlier egoism of the personal crotchet—"I always sleep on the floor with my feet pointing east"; or the off-beat regimen (butter-milk and pilot biscuit, or dry white wine and eggs), or the confused and hectic travel plan which implies that this is a fine place to make one's phone calls in preparation for juicier hospitality somewhere ahead. Indeed, they shall not make themselves so much at home that they take over the house with their laundry, their dress-pressing, their hair-tinting. They shall make their own beds and keep their rooms in order, servants or no. They shall be on time for meals. They shall recognize what they can do to help—and also how and when to keep out of the way, and to make their own amusement. They shall not contribute unsolicited advice on how to baste the roast, run the boat, or tame the children. And better that they should completely forget to bring a bread-and-butter gift than to come without a merry heart and the good-humored willingness to take things as they find them. They will have the honesty to say, if they are asked, how they like their eggs or their coffee or the softness of their pillow, or if they'd rather take a nap than watch a polo match. Unasked—and this can happen—they'll muster the good grace to go along with whatever the host has planned for them, even if they feel more in custody than on holiday. And when the time comes to say good-by, they go, remembering the old Italian saw which bluntly likens the three-day guest to the three-day-old fish.

Now to those who play the infinitely more complex role of host. As initiators of hospitality (after all, no one asked them to ask you) they have taken upon themselves the triple assignment of lavishing creature comforts on the guests they have favored with an invitation, plus a schedule of divertisement, plus an emotional climate that nurtures the to-and-fro of easy camaraderie. And that's some assignment.

It is conventional in articles like this to take up the physical comforts first, sternly urging that everyone should spend a night in his (meaning her) own guest room so that she may correct such flaws as that corn-husk mattress, the lack of a reading lamp, and the absence of ash trays. Reference is made to fresh flowers and bowls of fruit, and often overlooked refinements like corn plasters and mouthwash in the bathroom medicine cabinet. We shall later make reference to such things, too. But in the meantime (Please turn to page 111)

isn't what it used to be

Even the name has changed. Today, there are many special-purpose adhesives, each designed to do one job better than it has ever been done before

By DAVID X. MANNERS

● The business of sticking things together has changed. Once, you merely reached for the glue in the little bottle. It was all-purpose. Now there is a special, better adhesive for almost every job you undertake.

This need not confuse you. It isn't difficult matching the right adhesive to the job. The accompanying chart shows you how. After that, all you have to do is apply the adhesive according to directions and you've got it made.

You don't need every adhesive on the chart. For average household use you'll usually need only two or three of them. But it's good to know about the others for problem jobs where the usual stuff won't do.

The number-one adhesive on your shelf will undoubtedly be "white glue." You can buy it almost anywhere in squeeze bottles of various sizes. The bottles have a plastic tip that makes putting the stickum where you want it a mess-free operation. White glue does more things and does them more easily than any other adhesive.

But not all white glues are alike. Technically, all are polyvinyl acetate. But formulations differ and so does quality. Some are recommended only for porous materials. Others can be used for glass and metals as well. None is waterproof. Read the labels and be guided accordingly. Almost all are nontoxic, nonflammable, and safe for children to use.

Another adhesive you will want is epoxy. The word

"miracle" has been applied to this adhesive so many times most people think it can do anything. It can't. Epoxy is unsurpassed for gluing rigid materials. It cannot, however, be used on flexible materials. Its "peel strength" is low. If you get under a film of it, you can strip it off like a banana skin. It must be mixed just right and applied just right, and it is both expensive and toxic. Definitely, epoxy is not an adhesive to use when something else will do the job just as well. But where nothing else will do, nothing does it quite so well as epoxy.

Epoxy hardens by chemical action, not by evaporation of solvents. That is why it is so effective on nonporous materials (where solvents have difficulty escaping). Use epoxy for fastening fixtures to concrete or tile walls without use of screws. Use it to repair broken porcelain, ironwork, leaky metal pipes and tanks. This is the type of thing it does best.

Epoxy is a two-part adhesive. Both parts must be mixed in exact proportions before the adhesive is ready to use. One new variety of epoxy comes in twin dispensers that look like hypodermic needles. They dole out their contents drop by drop to simplify getting the right proportions. It is an extremely fast-setting formulation.

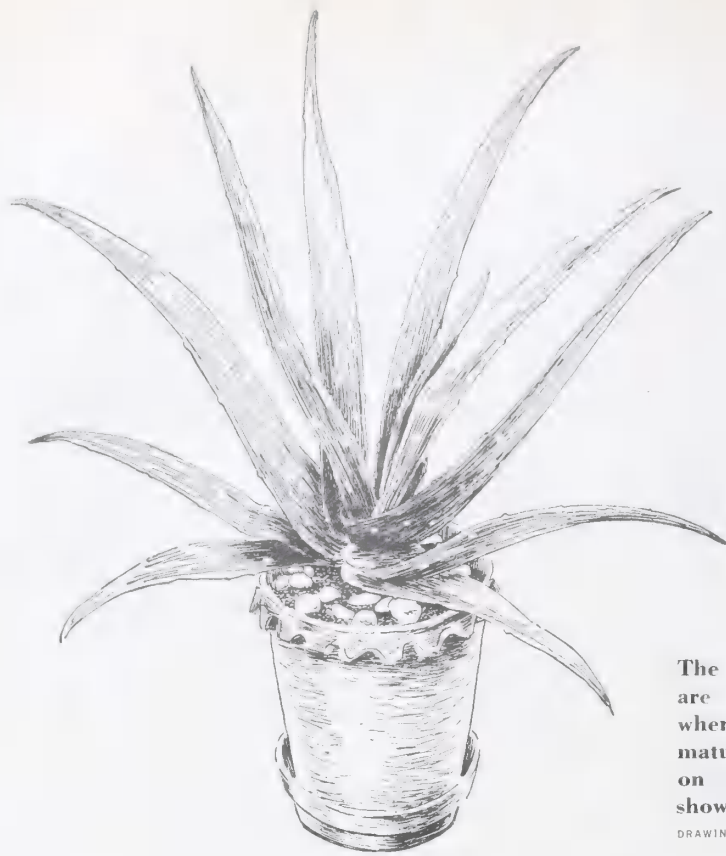

Epoxy is completely waterproof, but if your prime requirement is for a waterproof bond (Please turn to page 103)

The Best Adhesive To Use

The Job and the Glue	Use it for	How it handles	Advantages and Disadvantages
All-purpose use: WHITE GLUE	Porous materials like wood, fabrics, paper, pottery. Also some nonporous materials.	Needs no mixing. Ready to use. Usually comes in squeeze bottle with applicator spout.	Easy, fast-setting, odorless, safe. Minimizes clamping. Not waterproof or resistant to heat.
Absolutely waterproof joints: RESORCINOL	Outdoor furniture, boats, sporting goods, crockery, most plastics, rubber, oily woods.	Comes in two parts, must be carefully measured and mixed.	Excellent resistance to heat, cold, fungi. Requires strong clamping. Dark color. Toxic.
Strongest joints: EPOXY	High-strength joining of metals, glass, ceramics, brick, concrete, wood, many plastics.	Comes in two parts, must be carefully measured and mixed. Hardening greatly speeded by applying heat.	Waterproof. Doesn't shrink. Good hole-filler. Don't use on flexible materials, or where stress can peel it from surface. Expensive. Toxic.
Instant bonding: CONTACT CEMENT	Plastic laminate counter tops, veneers, rubber, thin metal.	Cement must be allowed to dry on surfaces to be joined. No repositioning of work is possible once parts touch.	No clamps needed. Heat resistance to 325°. Flammable (but also available non-flammable). Odorous and toxic.
Gluing at chilly temperatures: CASEIN GLUE	Wood to wood, cement, or plaster. Fabrics and leather to wood, fiberboard, and other porous materials. Very good for rough work.	Comes in powder, is mixed with water. Clamp 4 to 5 hours.	Can be used at any temperature above freezing. Inexpensive. Good joint filler. Strong but brittle. Low moisture resistance.
Superior wood joining: PLASTIC RESIN	Cabinetmaking. Furniture repairs. Boat building. Load-bearing joints.	Comes in powder, is mixed with water. Clamp 4 to 10 hours at 70°.	Highly resistant to water. Joints stronger than wood. Doesn't stain acid woods (oak, mahogany). Not for oily woods (teak). Doesn't fill. Not for loose joints.
China and glass: HOUSEHOLD CEMENT	A transparent waterproof bond of moderate strength.	Comes in tube, ready to use. Bonds in 2 to 3 hours. Full strength overnight.	Easy to use for minor, quick repairs. Toxic, odorous, flammable, sticks to fingers. Damages furniture finishes.
Hard plastics: PLASTIC CEMENT	Plastic radio cases, toys, etc. Some brands will work on both hard and flexible plastics.	Sets well enough for handling in 10 minutes.	Waterproof, clear. Not for polyethylene.
Vinyl plastics: VINYL CEMENT	Play pools, rafts, inflatable toys, beach balls.	Sets in 1 to 3 hours. Let dry overnight before using.	Seals small holes without a patch. Flammable.
Rubber goods: PLASTIC RUBBER	Mending rubber rainwear, boots, shoes, toys, sealing cracks around plumbing fixtures.	Requires 24 to 48 hours drying for maximum strength. You may want to apply more than one coat.	Comes in both black and white. It's real rubber. Will fill holes. Flammable. Toxic.
Fabrics: FABRIC CEMENT	Rips, tears, moth holes, cigarette burns, reinforcing worn spots in cotton, wool, synthetics.	Comes in tube. Fast drying.	Holds up under washing and ironing. Non-toxic. Nonflammable. Not for articles to be cleaned with carbon tet.
Making surfaces pressure-sensitive: SPRAY ADHESIVE	Mounting artwork, paste-ups, displays, decorations. Adheres to paper, foil, fabrics.	Comes in aerosol can. Spray on surface to be mounted.	Can be repositioned for several hours, then makes positive bond. For light materials only. Expensive.
Metal: EPOXY METAL	Repairing appliances, toys, plumbing. Filling holes in radiators, tanks. Joining metal and many other rigid materials.	A two-part adhesive material. Sets in 2 to 4 hours at room temperature, cures overnight.	Doesn't shrink. Has great strength, hardness, adhesion. Requires careful mixing and handling. Toxic.
Metal: METAL PASTE (steel or aluminum)	Same as above, but has less strength.	Ready to use. Dries to metal hardness in 3 to 4 hours. Allow overnight for full cure.	Aluminum takes to 600° heat. Rustproof. By rubbing with copper can be given copper finish. Flammable, toxic.
Concrete: EPOXY MORTAR	Building with or repairing blocks, brick, stone, slate, concrete, terrazzo. Bonds anchor plates to masonry without drilling holes.	Mix two parts, then apply with trowel, putty knife, or caulking gun. Cures overnight at 70°.	Watertight, leakproof. Easy to use. Versatile. Application not recommended above 90°. Expensive.

The leaves of Aloe vera are marked with white when young. As the plant matures, spines develop on the leaf edges—as shown in drawing at left.

DRAWING BY ZUE MARTIN

Ever hear of the first-aid plant?

Aloe vera, a dramatic-looking succulent, is a house plant that will also do wonders for burns, cuts, and abrasions

By GERTRUDE B. FOSTER

• A guest at a party thoughtlessly folded back the cover of a pack of paper matches to strike a light. The flare ignited the whole packet and before he could drop it in an ash tray his thumb and forefinger were painfully burned. The hostess quickly seized a cactuslike plant from the window sill, cut off a succulent leaf, and applied the cut end to the burn. A transparent mucilaginous gel from the leaf brought instant relief of the pain and dried in a few minutes without stickiness.

As other guests gathered around to watch this unusual first-aid treatment, the hostess explained, "I always keep Aloe vera in the house for first aid. I remember how my mother in Sweden used it in the kitchen for burns."

The next day, I called the guest who had been burned and treated with a house plant to see how he was. He reported that the pain was not in the least red and the burn had gone completely. After such a vivid demonstration of its worth, he wanted to know more about this amazing plant.

The aloes are members of the lily family found in dry, tropical parts of the world. Most are from Africa, where there are about 180 known species. The common name is pronounced al-o, and rhymes with hallow. The scientific name is pronounced in three syllables, a-lo-e.

Aloe vera, the true aloe or Barbados aloe, is one of the plants from which the "bitter aloes" of the drug trade are extracted. This medical substance is the dried juice and is used as a purgative and tonic. Other medicinal aloes, such as socotrine, hepaticus, and Indian are derived from such species as A. perryi, A. chinensis, and others.

A. vera is called the Barbados aloe because it was extensively planted in Barbados and other islands of the West Indies. Curiously enough, it is this native of warm climes that Scandinavians hand down from generation to generation as a house plant.

This plant commonly called American aloe is a century plant is not truly an aloe. Its botanical name is Agave americana. The same century plant probably refers to the long period of time between flowerings. When it does bloom, the flowers are tightly clustered on tall stems. The leaves of the agave are veined, and are not so thick and succulent as the aloe's. The leaves of the true aloe are not veined, and the young plant has quite noticeable white markings. These markings recede as the plant gets older, and spines develop on the edges of the leaves.

Aloe vera will flower occasionally if properly grown. The yellow or reddish tubular flowers are carried gracefully on stems about a foot tall.

The succulent leaves of Aloe vera are one of nature's perfect packaging miracles. Break a leaf off the fleshy stem from which a fan of sessile leaves radiate, and the plant quickly seals in the vital juices. Even the cut segment will heal over the end where it is sliced and retain its plumpness to remain green for several days. In a refrigerator it keeps for two or three weeks. The gummy juice first exuded from the cut leaf of aloe contains the active principal—aloin. When dried, this is the material used in medicine. The transparent pulp from a fresh-cut leaf does the work of healing cuts and burns.

Rodney M. Stockton, a chemical engineer vacationing in Florida in 1942, suffered a severe sunburn. The fact that doctors could do little for the burn to help the regeneration of the damaged tissue caused him to search for a remedy to answer such a need. He found it growing in the dooryards of many Florida homes where Aloe vera made a handsome flowering plant. In 1947, Mr. Stockton moved to Florida to work seriously on the problem of making the healing gel of Aloe vera available to others. A report in the Journal of Industrial Medicine and Surgery, August, 1959, showed that the Alo-Crème Ointment he developed could change a deep thermal burn, within 48 hours, to a minor first- or second-degree burn by the rapid regeneration of tissues. The burns healed 50 percent faster than when using the "open exposure" or other accepted methods of medication. Healing took place without gross scar tissue.

It took World War II and the tragic consequence of radiation burns to supplement the reputation of Aloe vera for external use. The value of aloe gel for X-ray burns and other skin troubles has sparked a new industry for a Florida coastal town. The stabilization of the inner pulp of aloe and its separation from the aloin has permitted its incorporation in a whole line of cosmetics as well as in a burn ointment. Modern techniques of agriculture, combined with the sandy soil and mild climate around Fort Lauderdale, Florida, permit quantity production of aloe. It is used in shampoo, sunburn lotions, and a burn ointment that has been given government contracts after testing at Los Alamos proving ground under the auspices of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission.

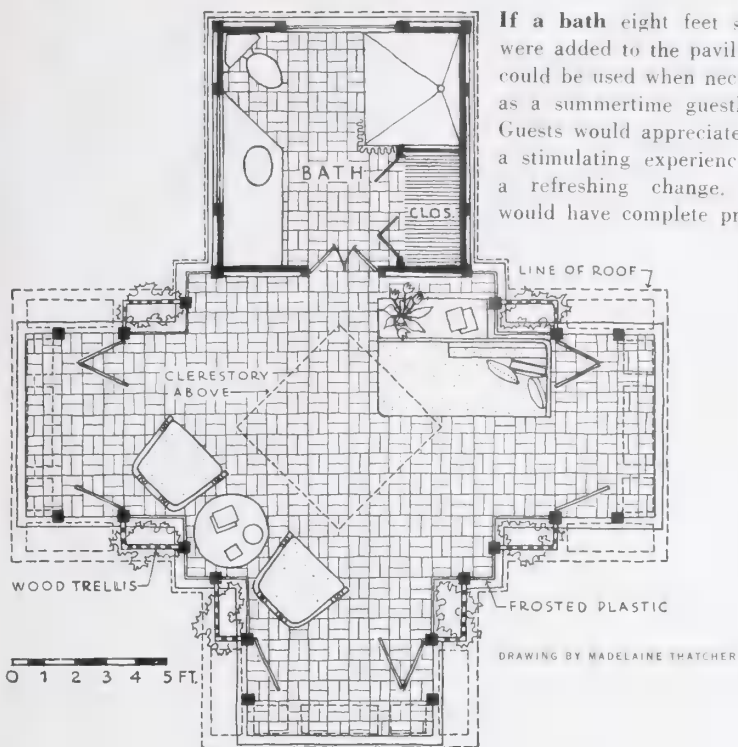

I recently burned two fingers by grasping the handle of a skillet that had been in the oven. I applied the juice of a cut leaf of aloe to one finger, and plunged the other into cold water. At the time, the cold water stopped the pain completely—but only as long as I held the finger in it. The other finger, treated with aloe gel, felt comfortable when I was applying the cooling mucilage but smarted as it dried. However, in ten minutes, when it became necessary to use both fingers again to get dinner off the stove, the one that had been immersed in cold water was the more painful and reddened. The skin of the finger treated with aloe gel did not turn red and soon felt the poignant cries of the seagulls.

From Maine to Connecticut this is the country of traditional Americana—of clam chowder, the baked bean, blueberry pie, Indian pudding and the succulent lobster, of architecture called Salt Box, Cape Cod, Georgian, Federal (and Wedding Cake and Gingerbread), of sail-spotted harbors that smell of iodine and creosote and hemp, of people who speak economically in their inherited seagoing vocabulary. There is an atmosphere here of early industriousness, mixed with strong draughts of romance, for out of these ports sailed the clipper ships, the China traders, and the whaling vessels that went to meet peril, often captained by boys in their twenties. There is fascination here and edification for every member of every family who visits this land on holiday.

For a capsule experience of a whaling boom town of the 1800's, when whale oil lit the lamps of young America, no family should miss the museum town of Mystic Seaport in Connecticut. It's a reconstruction, but by no means ersatz, for the buildings, shops, and the exciting square-riggers and schooners that line its river-inlet harbor are the real McCoy, simply transplanted to their present sites. The fastest ships that sailed round the Horn were built in Mystic—a note of special interest to native-born Californians whose family heirlooms are usually reputed to have made the trip.

MYSTIC Seaport is open all year, but activities are usually more varied during the summer. The shops, the smithy, the chandlery, the sail loft, the rope walk are manned and operating from April through November. The square rigger Joseph Conrad is used as a training ship for Boy and Girl Scouts. Here can be seen the last of the whalers—Charles W. Morgan—and the schooner Bowdoin, the ship which participated in Admiral Richard E. Byrd's Arctic explorations.

The Seaport, which has been wholly the result of private effort on the part of those interested in saving America's old maritime records and ships' models, has a splendid marine library and the Mallory Memorial Marine Museum. And certainly the most popular among the younger set is the Panchen Junior Museum where they can "touch and try" such wondrous devices as the ship's wheel, explore the shell collection, and come away with a shell as a souvenir. The Planetarium, enough to enthrall all potential navigators or stargazers, young and old, puts on two shows a day, at 2 and 4 P.M., and has an Arctic and Antarctic museum in its basement. Mystic Seaport, off Route 27, is open from 9 to 5, admission $2 for adults, 50¢ for the kids. Should it rain, kids can have the thrill of doing the rounds like old salts, in slick sou'westers.

THIS YEAR, from July 1 to August 9, the Ninth Annual Summer Institute of American Maritime History will be held there—a six-week course of lectures and seminars on America's seaports, commercial and naval activities from Colonial times through the present. Under the sponsorship of the University of Connecticut and the Frank C. Munson Memorial Institute of American Maritime History, with prominent educators conducting procedures, the course counts for six graduate credits for graduate students who successfully complete it. It's an opportunity to do some serious learning in an appropriate atmosphere. Tuition fee is $75. For more information: Stuart Manning, Director, The University of Connecticut, Summer Session Office, Storrs, Conn.

Just to the east is Stonington, another of Connecticut's early whaling towns, now a resort of breezy, picturesque beaches.

If you want to thrill yourself and your young with the amazing contrast between yesterday and today, a jump from wind-powered sail to atom-powered leviathan, it's an easy drive southwest to Groton, headquarters of the North Atlantic Submarine Fleet. You can visit the base and tour a submarine. You must, however, write ahead to the Commander for admission. Also in Groton is a Submarine Museum, maintained by the General Dynamics Corp.

Across the Thames River in New London, drive farther to the southwest and you are in the Connecticut River valley, where the countryside and little towns, some of them once of big importance, all have a snug inland warmth, yet still smack of the sea. Old Lyme, where they used to say that every house was a sea captain's home, has the tree-lined, white-church-spired look of traditional New England, is now home to many artists who have long since recognized its beauty.

On the east bank of the river, on the road that heads toward Hartford, there's the town of East Haddam, worth a detour if only to see some of the most intricate and incredible gingerbread houses the Victorians ever produced. Here, on the river bank, is the Goodspeed Opera House, lately remodeled and ready to put on summer theatrical productions in a gaslight atmosphere. Not far off is William Gillette's Castle, now a state park and open to visitors. Ferry to the west bank and drive from Chester, through the old mill town of Deep River which still preserves its gingerbread which was once a mark of prosperity, to the charming, tight-streeted little port of Essex, where the Federal houses and their trim white-picketed dooryards are barely a step from the sidewalk, and the movie theater recalls the arched and porched pretensions of grand-scale, 19-century boat-houses. The little harbor itself, at the end of Main Street, floats with sailboats and yachts, and the Griswold Inn, its bar and dining room constructed whole-hog from the innards of a ship's cabin in massive, arch-roofed, dark wood and brass, specializes in such local fruits of the sea as Niantic scallops, and 19th-century-size slabs of roast beef.

THE OLD Dartmouth Historical Society and Whaling Museum in New Bedford, Massachusetts, a place-name synonymous with whaling, and a town that delivered a major part of the country's oil in pre-Texan days, is mecca for any down-to-the-sea-in-ships buff. One of the prize exhibits there is a panoramic painting done by two local painters, Benjamin Russell and Caleb Purrington. It is 8½ feet high and 1.275 feet long, rather like a gigantic horizontal scroll, which depicts in graphic fashion a whaling voyage that took its intrepid participants around the world, presumably in the 1840's. Indicating, besides their battles with the whales, their battles with the seas and the wonders that were found on such exotic shores as Brazil, Cape Horn, Fiji, Hawaii, and obscure South Pacific Islands, the Panorama was something of a Cinerama in its own time, a gripping travelogue that toured the country, opening up the wonders of the world to inland Americans. You can see this innocent, ambitious piece of art here, along with other marine works of Benjamin

Russell and the museum's collection of whale-associated artifacts from harpoons to scrimshaw—the carved and etched whalebone that was, like netting and knitting, the whaleman's therapeutic hobby. The museum's address is the homey-sounding 18 Johnny Cake Hill. Admission is 75¢, children 25¢, and it's open daily in July and August from 9 to 5, from 2 p. m. Sundays.

Since all this whale-hunting is more easily feasible by car, we're reminded that the latest edition of the Mobil Travel Guides is available. There are six volumes, each $1.50, covering the Northeastern, Middle Atlantic, Great Lakes, Southwest and South Central, Western, and the Northwest and Great Plains States, their object to set motorists in safe and sound directions towards recommended dining and lodging facilities. Added attractions in this edition are bound-in tickets to certain museums and sightseeing attractions which entitle the purchaser of the guide to discounts in admission fees, from 20 percent to 50 percent. (Mystic Seaport is one of these.) The guides can be bought at bookstores or Mobil service stations.

GLUING ISN'T WHAT IT USED TO BE

a better choice is usually resorcinol adhesive. Resorcinol is far less expensive than epoxy and easier to use. For outdoors it is the adhesive. Indoors or out, it is especially good for oily woods like teak, and for withstanding heat and cold (from 40 below to heat that will char wood). Resorcinol requires very tight clamping, but if you have the clamps, this is no particular problem or drawback. Like epoxy, resorcinol is a two-component adhesive. A resin and a hardening agent are mixed to prepare the adhesive for use.

FOR SIMPLE household repairs such as mending china, where a waterproof adhesive is required, you will want "household" or nitro-cellulose cement. It's an oldie that's still good. A tube of it is probably in your fix-it collection right now. Resorcinol is not suitable for china. It has a dark color, makes a visible bond line. Household cement is ready to use as it comes from tube, dries crystal-clear.

There is some overlapping of adhesives, to be sure. For many jobs, more than one adhesive can work satisfactorily. But when requirements are special, the number narrows down. For bonding plastic laminates to counter tops, for example, only contact cement will do. Shop the adhesive shelves at your hardware store. You will find special ones for rubber, for fabrics, for metals, for applying weather-stripping, for modelmaking.

Plastics have become such an important part of our daily lives it is not surprising that special adhesives have been formulated to use on them. For repairing most hard plastics, get "plastic glue." Polyester plastics are best repaired with polyester syrup, the same resinous material from which the product itself is made.

How can you tell what kind of plastic it is you are trying to repair? It may be difficult. The simplest solution is to try your adhesive on it and see if it works. On some plastics almost nothing seems to work. For vinyl plastics (such as play pools, beach balls, inflatable toys) you can use either an all-purpose plastic glue or a special vinyl patcher. If the plastic case on your radio gets broken, visit your electronic repair shop. They may stock a special adhesive for just such a predicament.

There is a whole series of adhesives especially formulated for use in construction. Casein glue is low in cost and precisely tailored for rough construction tasks. It fills poorly fitting joints and can be used at any temperature above freezing. "Builders' adhesive" is used for such jobs as cementing wood sills to concrete floors or furring strips to walls. "Epoxy mortar" is called on for a variety of holding jobs that require the ultimate in strength.

IN THE FINISHING of a house, there are special adhesives for each type of resilient floor tile. Ceramic tile can be installed, indoors or out, with a new adhesive that also serves as stainproof grout for the joints. There are adhesives for acoustical tile and for wall coverings. Even wallpaper has an improved adhesive—cellulose.

What has happened to animal glues? The old hot-glue pot, you'll find, has disappeared from most woodworking and maintenance shops, replaced for the most part by white glue. For fine furniture-making and cabinetwork, and whenever there are moisture problems, plastic resin usually gets the call. Animal glues still have extensive use commercially, but principally only for such tasks as laminating plywood and making corrugated boxes.

New adhesives are constantly appearing. One of the newest is a spray type that will make paper or fabrics pressure-sensitive, in the same way that cellophane tape is pressure-sensitive. Another is a gum that can be kneaded into small balls and used for mounting posters and the like on walls without marring them. Still another is one selling at $5 for one-third ounce and which lays claim to being the strongest made. It's certainly the most expensive. But still it's only two cents a drop, and each drop has the potential strength of supporting 5,000 pounds, so it may be a bargain at that.

AN ADHESIVE is only as good as the way it's used.

Follow directions. If the label says it should be applied only when the temperature is 70° or better, don't expect prime results if you use it and the thermometer is only 50°. If the label says use it on porous materials, don't try to stick metal with it.

Clean it up. Before gluing, remove old adhesives, scaly paint, dirt, and grease. They are enemies of adhesion.

Press it tight. Bring surfaces into intimate contact. The larger the gluing surface, the stronger the glue line. Roughening of surfaces to be glued (when possible) usually will improve bonding qualities. Modern adhesives are designed for ease of use, and many of them minimize the need for clamping. But you do have to be careful to hold glued parts in position. If you don't have clamps, you can often do the holding with nails, screws, rope, string, rubber bands, tape, even spring clothespins. Ropes can be tightened with a stick like a tourniquet. This is especially effective in regluing loose chairs.

Let it dry. If you rush it and use it before the joint has fully cured, you may break the bond. You'll certainly weaken it. If you are in a hurry, you can often use heat to speed drying. Shine a heat lamp on the work. Even setting it in the sun can help.

using the sauce, add to each  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup: 2 tablespoons fresh parsley, finely chopped, and  $\frac{1}{2}$  hard-cooked egg, finely chopped. Mix these in well and use sauce as directed.

Zucchini Provençale

2 cups olive oil
2 lbs. unpeeled zucchini, sliced  $\frac{1}{8}$  inch thick
12 anchovies
 $\frac{1}{4}$  cup lemon juice
1 teaspoon freshly ground pepper
3 cups chopped parsley

In a skillet heat 1 cup of olive oil till it is smoking. Add enough zucchini slices to cover bottom of pan. Turn zucchini slices so that they brown lightly on both sides. Drain on paper towels. Repeat till all zucchini slices are cooked.

Place remaining olive oil in blender (or use a mortar and pestle). Add anchovies and lemon juice. Turn the blender on till all is reduced to a fine anchovy sauce. Add pepper.

Spoon a little of this anchovy sauce into an attractive serving casserole—it doesn't have to be heatproof. Sprinkle some parsley on top of the sauce. Arrange a layer of cooked zucchini on top. Spoon a little more sauce on top of the zucchini. Follow with a generous covering of parsley. Continue to make alternate layers of zucchini, anchovy sauce, and parsley till all the zucchini has been used. Allow this to mellow in the refrigerator at least a week. Serve at room temperature.

Stuffed Peppers, Sicilian Style

8 small green peppers
4 cups tiny cubes of soft white bread
 $1\frac{1}{4}$  cups olive oil
2 cloves chopped garlic
8 chopped anchovies
 $\frac{1}{4}$  cup chopped parsley
 $\frac{3}{4}$  cup chopped ripe olives
3 tablespoons capers
3 tablespoons currants or chopped raisins
Salt and pepper to taste

Remove stems and seeds from peppers so that they may be stuffed. If they are large, cut them into halves. If bread is very fresh or of the very soft variety, place little cubes on a flat baking sheet and allow to dry out slightly in a 350° F. oven.

Combine bread cubes with 1 cup olive oil and all remaining ingredients, tossing lightly.

Stuff peppers, being careful not to pack the stuffing. Spoon a little more oil over each pepper. Bake in a 350° F. oven for 45 minutes. Serve at room temperature.

Imom Bayeldi

(An old Armenian recipe.)

2 large eggplants or 4 small ones
1 cup olive oil
2 large onions, chopped
1 green pepper, chopped
4 cloves garlic, chopped
1 cup chopped celery
1 cup chopped celery leaves
1 cup chopped parsley
 $\frac{1}{2}$  cup tomato purée
 $\frac{1}{4}$  teaspoon crumbled bay leaf
 $\frac{1}{2}$  teaspoon oregano
1 teaspoon dried mint
 $\frac{1}{2}$  teaspoon sugar
Salt and pepper to taste

If eggplants are large, cut them into quarters. If they are small, cut them into halves. Brush cut sides with olive oil. Place in a 300° F. oven and bake till centers are soft and lightly browned.

While eggplants are baking, prepare the following stuffing: sauté onions, green peppers, garlic, and chopped celery in olive oil till the vegetables are soft but not brown. Add chopped celery leaves and parsley. Stir till leaves are wilted, then add tomato purée and spices. Add sugar, then salt and pepper to taste. Cook a few more minutes. Set aside till needed.

When eggplants are tender, allow them to cool so that they may be handled. With a small knife, make an incision lengthwise, down the center of the cut side, being careful not to cut all the way through the eggplant. With your fingers, press soft pulp away from incision on two sides so that a good-size hollow is formed. Using a spoon, fill the hollows with the prepared filling.

Arrange stuffed eggplants in a pan, close together. Sprinkle with additional olive oil if filling looks dry. Bake in a 350° F. oven 45 minutes, basting two or three times with the oil in the pan. Serve at room temperature. The stuffed eggplants freeze very well. If time is a factor, this recipe may be speeded up. The eggplant is sliced  $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch thick and, after it has been baked till tender, the slices are placed in a casserole, alternately with the stuffing, and baked as the individual servings are. This doesn't look as pretty, however.

Mushrooms Stuffed With Tarama Salad

$1\frac{1}{2}$  lbs. medium-size white mushrooms
 $1\frac{1}{2}$  cups vinaigrette sauce

$\frac{1}{2}$  cup tarama (salted cold roe—available by mail from Trinacria) or use  $\frac{2}{3}$  cup red caviar

Juice of two lemons

1 slice onion

2 slices white bread, crusts removed, soaked in water till soft and then squeezed dry

1 to  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cups olive oil (approx.)

1 tablespoon chopped parsley

Pitted black olives (optional)

Remove stems from mushrooms so that they may be stuffed. Place mushrooms into a bowl with vinaigrette sauce. Toss and allow to stand at room temperature for 6 hours or up to a week in the refrigerator.

Prepare tarama salad: Place tarama or red caviar in blender. Add lemon juice, slice of onion, and squeezed-out bread. Then add  $\frac{1}{4}$  of olive oil and turn blender on. Add more olive oil gradually, while blender is working. Use enough olive oil to make a mixture which looks like a very thick, pink mayonnaise. Add chopped parsley.

After mushrooms have been kept in vinaigrette, remove them and drain well. Using a pastry bag, fill the hollow in each mushroom with tarama salad. Sprinkle with additional chopped parsley, or garnish with a small piece of black olive. Serve cold.

Eggplant with Pesto

Pesto, a deliciously pungent green sauce, will keep in your refrigerator for many weeks. It is a stand-by in much the same way that a good vinaigrette sauce is. Pesto may be used warm to dress noodles or spaghetti, or cold on vegetables, such as eggplant.

2 cups olive oil (approximately)

1 large eggplant, cubed

1 cup fresh basil

1 cup parsley

4 cloves garlic

$\frac{1}{2}$  cup pine nuts or walnuts

Heat 1 cup olive oil in a skillet till it smokes. Sauté eggplant cubes in olive oil, turning them frequently, till they are all golden brown. Drain. Transfer eggplant to casserole. Bake in a 350° F. oven about 45 minutes, or till cubes are all very tender. Cool slightly.

While eggplant is baking, prepare pesto: Place remaining olive oil in blender. Add some of basil leaves and parsley. Turn blender on. As leaves are puréed, add more. Add garlic and nuts alternately. If necessary, use more oil so that all the leaves may be used. The end result will be a thick green sauce, of a consistency slightly thinner than mayonnaise. Keep in the refrigerator in a covered container.

When eggplant has cooled slightly, pour 1 cup of pesto on top and toss very gently so that eggplant cubes are not mashed or broken. Serve at room temperature.

Scandinavian Stuffed Tomatoes

4 cucumbers

2 tablespoons salt

2 tablespoons sugar

1 cup sour cream

$\frac{1}{2}$  cup mayonnaise

$\frac{1}{2}$  cup chopped dill

8 small tomatoes

2 hard-cooked eggs

Peel cucumbers. Cut in half, lengthwise. With a spoon, scoop out seeds, and slice thin. Place in bowl, sprinkle with salt and put in refrigerator for at least two hours. After two hours, pour off water which has accumulated and press out any additional water, so that cucumbers are dry. Add sugar and stir. Combine sour cream and mayonnaise. Pour over cucumbers and toss lightly, adding half of dill. Place in refrigerator till needed.

Remove a circle from the stem ends of the tomatoes. Carefully scoop out pulp and turn upside down on paper towels so that any juice may drain. Stuff each tomato with cucumber mixture. Sprinkle remaining dill on top of each tomato and garnish with a slice of hard-cooked egg.

Balkan Vegetable Casserole

2 cups olive oil (approximately)

1 cup eggplant, unpeeled, cut into 1-inch cubes

2 tomatoes, sliced  $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch thick

1 cup zucchini, cut into  $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch slices

1 cup green pepper, cut into 1-inch squares

1 large onion, sliced and separated into rings

1 cup celery, cut into 1-inch slices

1 cup shredded cabbage

1 cup green beans, cut into 1-inch slices

1 cup carrots, cut into  $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch slices

2 potatoes, peeled and cut into  $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch cubes

1 cup white seedless grapes

Salt and pepper

4 cloves garlic, sliced

2 cups chopped parsley

1 teaspoon oregano

1 teaspoon basil

$\frac{1}{2}$  teaspoon crumbled bay leaf

1 teaspoon sugar

Take your largest, most attractive baking dish. Pour a little olive oil into it. Make individual layers of all the vegetables and the grapes, seasoning each layer with salt, pepper, garlic, parsley, oregano, basil, bay leaf, and a little olive oil. Use the sugar on the layers of tomato.

- 1 cup celery, cut into 1-inch pieces
- 1 cup fennel, diced
- 2 cups chopped onions
- 1 cup cauliflower pieces
- 1 cup small mushrooms
- 1 cup green pepper, cut into 1-inch pieces
- 1 clove garlic, chopped
- ½ cup tomato purée
- 1 cup dry white wine
- 1 lb. bay scallops
- ½ lb. cleaned, shelled shrimp, cut into halves
- 1 teaspoon dried basil
- ½ cup chopped parsley
- Salt and pepper to taste
- ½ cup green olives
- ½ cup black olives
- ¼ cup capers
- 8 anchovies
- 4 hard-cooked eggs, quartered

In a heavy saucepan, heat oil till it almost smokes. Add celery, fennel, onions, cauliflower, mushrooms, green pepper, and garlic. Toss and continue to cook till vegetables begin to soften. Add tomato purée and white wine. When mixture begins to simmer, add scallops and shrimp. Simmer till sea food is cooked, no more than 8-10 minutes. Add basil, half of parsley and salt and pepper to taste. Toss in olives and capers. Chill at least several hours.

Before serving, sprinkle with remaining parsley and garnish with anchovies and hard-cooked egg quarters.

Greek Stuffed Tomatoes

- 8 small tomatoes
- 2 lbs. fresh spinach
- 1 small onion, minced
- 1 clove garlic
- ¾ to 1 cup olive oil
- ½ cup pine nuts
- 1 teaspoon chopped capers
- Salt and pepper
- 1 teaspoon MSG
- 1 teaspoon sugar

Remove tomatoes by removing a little from the stem ends. Carefully wash and dry and turn tomatoes inside down on paper towel — that way you can drain. Wash spinach well. Place in a saucepan, cover, and allow it to steam in its own liquid over a high heat. When it is wilted, drain well and squeeze out water. Chop fine.

Sauté minced onion and garlic in half cup of olive oil. When vegetables are soft, add pine nuts and continue to sauté till pine nuts are lightly browned. Add to spinach along with capers and half of remaining olive oil. Toss so that ingredients are evenly distributed. Season with salt and pepper and 1 teaspoon MSG. Sprinkle the inside of each tomato with salt, pepper, a pinch of sugar and MSG. Stuff tomatoes with spinach mixture, packing them firmly. Arrange tomatoes in baking pan. Spoon a little olive oil over each tomato. Bake in a 375° F. oven for 30 to 40 minutes, or till skins of tomatoes are wrinkled. Baste once or twice with pan juices and oil. Serve cold.

Monju Oza's Carrot and Pepper Pickle

This was the innovation of an Indian friend. It is delicious with simple broiled foods, as well as with Indian dishes. It keeps very well in the refrigerator.

- ⅔ cup peanut oil
- 2 teaspoons whole mustard seeds
- 2 teaspoons ground cumin seed
- 2 tablespoons curry powder
- ¼ teaspoon cayenne pepper
- 3 carrots, cut into thin slices
- 3 green peppers, cut into 1-inch squares
- 3 tablespoons brown sugar
- Salt and pepper
- Juice of two lemons

In a deep saucepan, heat peanut oil till it smokes. Add mustard seeds. Cover saucepan and turn heat up high till mustard seeds have made a popping sound and look almost black. Turn heat down. Add cumin, curry powder, and cayenne pepper. Add sliced carrots and green pepper, stirring into the spiced mixture. Cook only till vegetables begin to change color. They should not entirely lose their crispness. Stir in brown sugar, salt, and pepper to taste. Remove from heat and add lemon juice. Let it cool to room temperature before serving.

Spinach, Roman Style

- 2 lbs. fresh spinach
- ¾ cup olive oil
- 8 scallions, sliced
- 4 cloves garlic, sliced
- Salt and freshly ground pepper
- Lemon wedges

Wash and trim spinach. Drain and wrap in towels so as much moisture as possible can be absorbed.

In a large, heavy skillet, heat olive oil till it is smoking. Toss in spinach. Immediately mix with two wooden spoons so that the wilted part is brought to the surface and the uncooked part comes in contact with the hot oil. As soon as all the spinach is wilted, remove from pan. If oil seems diluted with water, turn heat up high and let water cook away. Lower heat. Add sliced scallions and garlic. Sauté till soft. Pour over spinach. Season with salt and pepper and toss lightly. Serve at room temperature, with lemon wedges. Sometimes, hard-cooked egg slices are used to garnish this dish.

Peppers Mediterranean

- 8 frying peppers
- 2 medium-size tomatoes, cut into halves and sliced thin
- 2 cloves garlic, sliced
- 2 medium-size onions, sliced thin
- 8 anchovies
- MSG
- 1 teaspoon oregano
- Salt and pepper
- 1 cup olive oil (approximately)
- ½ cup chopped parsley

Cut frying peppers in half lengthwise. Remove stem and seeds. Place side by side, hollow sides up, on a flat baking sheet. Into each pepper place a slice of tomato, several slices of garlic, a slice of onion, and on top of all half a strip of anchovy. Sprinkle with MSG, oregano, pepper, and very lightly with salt. Spoon a little olive oil on top. Bake in a 400° F. oven for 30 to 40 minutes, or till peppers look wrinkled and other vegetables are lightly browned and soft. Garnish with parsley. Let it cool to room temperature before serving.

Zither music on records

Ruth Welcome, one of the finest zitherists, has a number of good recordings on the Capitol label.

Susan Reed is a folk singer who plays a zither with some songs on Elektra and Columbia records.

Anton Karas, composer of "The Third Man Theme," has done a record of that name on the London label and another title for Period.

Hans Hansberg and his zither band do a spirited performance for United Artists.

John Esterman, who plays zither music for movies, has a record on the Warner Brothers label.

Adolph Kukler plays pure unaccompanied zither on the record "Papa Plays the Zither," on the Opportune label, available by mail from Bremen House, 218 E. 86th St., New York, N.Y. Price is $2.98 plus 50 cents handling.

Instruction books and music

The only authoritative instruction book for the concert zither, Method for the Zither, was published in 1888. (Carl Fischer, N.Y.C. $2.50.)

Classical music arranged for the zither can be ordered from Martin Dopplehammer, 315 E. 55 St., N.Y.C.

Semiclassical sheet music can be ordered from the Mielke Music Shop, 242 E. 86th St., N.Y.C.

Number music for the simplified zither is available from Schmidt-International, 87 Ferry St., Jersey City, N.J. Send 10 cents for a catalog of more than 1,000 familiar selections. Some sheet music for the simplified zither is also available from Schmidt-International.

The book Play and Sing, by Richard Berg (Edwin H. Morris and Co., New York, N.Y.) has popular songs arranged for the simplified zither and is probably available through your music store.

Where to get instruments

Simplified zithers and the auto-harp (sometimes called a chord zither) are carried in most music stores and in mail-order catalogs.

The concert zither is another matter. Sometimes you'll find one in antique shops, but the only sure source is to order from Germany. Mr. Frank Schuck, 542 E. 79th St., New York, N.Y., is the American representative of Adolf Meinel, considered the finest practicing zither maker. Price, depending on decoration, is from $200 to $500.

Less expensive concert zithers can be ordered from Eastern Music Co., 33 Union Square, New York, N.Y. Prices range from about $75 (with case) to $150, depending upon the fancy trim and decoration.

YOU CAN HAVE WHAT YOU WANT

projects. The top of the dryer is my favorite worktable. I can put another coat of paint on a lamp while I defrost the refrigerator. Or between loads of laundry, I can stretch a silk scarf on a square of plywood, bind its edges with one-inch black dress belting, and end my washday with an unusual wall decoration. Meantime, I have stretched my day's horizons, too.

"I am a big 'project' woman, always involved in them, turning wallpaper rollers into lamp bases, attempting collages of shells or match boxes, or covering cushions with odd bits of fabric too lovely to let wither away in bureau drawers. I do not like a lot of 'things,' but almost every wall decoration in the house is of my manufacture—chiefly because the only way I knew to get style on a shoestring was to create it myself. I've turned striped madras bedspreads into recreation-room draperies, gluing on extra stripes where I thought they needed stronger accent. I've combined the parts of a gilt-foil Christmas tree to add height and color to the bed wall in our room.

"And since I love the sound of falling water, I've tackled the building of two successful pools. There's a picture of the black-marble terrace pool which I surrounded with bamboo and sometimes float lilies in. But my succès fou—which, sad to say, seems to defy photography—is a little four-flight waterfall at our entrance door, concocted of four plastic bowls which I covered in chicken wire and then in lamp-black cement and connected to a recirculating pump. My first go at it was a miserable, crumbling failure, because I was such a green-horn that I had used stale cement. But—never say die! I tried again and it works like a charm. Thus one learns.

"Actually, I am in utter sympathy with the lady who sighed, 'Oh, to be naked in Bergdorf-Goodman's, with a checkbook!' but I have discovered that, failing the checkbook, you can have what you want, if you set your heart and hands to it.

"Other housewives have often said to me, 'Oh, but I couldn't do that—I can't sew, or grow things, or paint a wall.' My answer, based on my own experience, is, 'How do you know you can't unless you try?' These little inside-the-house projects of mine are done with whatever I have at hand, chiefly for amusement, and since they cost little I have no reservations as to re-

Entrance side of the house faces north. Its warm, non-committal wall is off-white brick, lighted by clerestories. Living rooms open to lake on south side. All that's visible from the road is our sun-reflecting white gravel roof.

Henry's flagstone steps, 24 of them, three feet wide, lead into the house. They represent about eight tons of stone, each hand picked, and placed in cement. A grueling job, but rewarding because it gave us exactly what we wanted.

tiring them if my tastes change—and I think, incidentally, that we might as well be dead if our tastes don't change. My tools are few—a hammer, wire cutter, screw driver, a stapler, glue, scissors, cans of spray paint, cheap paint brushes I throw away after using (a decadent luxury), needles and thread. But most important of all are the telephone directory and the telephone, for the most difficult thing in this world seems to be to find out who has or does the little things you need. Who will sandblast a wallpaper roller? Where is scrap marble sold?

"After I've ferreted out 'where' I've usually had to find out 'how' because I've had no particular training in doing these things. But I've used libraries and asked a multitude of questions. Mainly I've just gone ahead and tried. I think it's a mistake to wait till the children are grown—or till you can have a well-equipped workroom—or till you can enroll in that course in creative pot-holders. You may have missed a good deal of fun and creative satisfaction in the meantime.

"Having to participate personally in the making of our house accounts, I know, for this conviction of mine. At the beginning, we simply didn't know our own strength. We proved to ourselves that we could do what we set out to do, and this makes the house that much more precious to us.

"I showed up every day during construction. The contractor tactfully suggested I wasn't needed, but I just as tactfully stayed on to observe and learn. And since I knew the plan and specifications well, I could make time-saving decisions on this cost-plus job.

Lower terrace is not only for entertainment. It also functions as an outdoor family workshop. Here, 15 feet from the lake, we saw, sew, iron, type letters, do homework, hold cub scout meetings.

Terrace pool is my handiwork, made of black scrap marble which I broke into smaller pieces and set into black concrete. It's 8' by 3' by 13". A "Little Giant" recirculating pump creates the illusion of water descending from the bamboo planting. Greg's room opens to the terrace. He falls asleep to the music of the waterfall outside his bedroom window.

Bamboo of the metake running variety is our only planted shrub, and, I think, the unexplored miracle plant, disease- and insect-free. We use it everywhere, have the largest stand of it in the East, in clumps from one foot to 15 feet high. I planted it in white gravel to keep down weeds. See how close trees are to the house.

"There's no sense in pretending that our own projects weren't back-breaking. We had moments of dire despair, as on the 95° day in hottest July when Henry, trying to lay the 24 flagstone entrance steps on a ten-day leave, almost gave up in exhaustion because the work was so heavy and going so slowly.

"We became masters of cleaning out undergrowth, mixing cement, hauling flagstone. Up to the waist in water, we cleaned out the rubble of dead tree trunks and fish hooks on our lake front. Henry hauled 17 tons of stone from the stone yard to the beach to build a 250-foot retaining wall. I hauled the lake-front debris and who knows how many tons of dirt to fill in the slope, shaping it into a usable terraced lawn. I built wood bunkers to hold it in place and prayed it wouldn't rain and demolish everything. I made the tree-shaded picnic terrace (shown on pages 60 and 61), setting flagstone in gravel.

"We learned and grew in the process. My fingernails didn't, however. Almost every evening I would have to show up at an official function, looking, I hoped, well groomed, yet one jump out of my blue jeans, and always in white gloves—so that no one could see the condition of my hands.

"Sometimes I get the impression that people don't believe we did all we say we did—but we did. The truth is, we surprised ourselves. Never have we made such a daring decision as to build a house to enjoy for three years (we've already had a three-year extra dividend of time since Henry's assignment was extended) but never has anything so exceeded expectations."

"Summerize" — an important mid-summer Davey check-up of your trees to forestall damage, disease. And now's the time to do it!

For now is the crucial time when every overlooked dead branch is an invitation to disease-bearing insects. Expert removal of infected wood could save your tree. And what better time for Davey experts, with the latest techniques and equipment, to brace old limbs heavy with full foliage. (A rough summer storm could be disastrous.) Weak V-shaped forks should be cabled and strengthened now, too. And deep-root feeding, using special tree food developed for exclusive use by Davey experts, could bring your trees renewed vigor and loveliness long before leaf-fall time.

EVER HEAR OF THE FIRST-AID PLANT?

fine. The other finger took four or five hours to get back to normal.

Species of aloe have a long history of application for wounds, burns, eye infections, and dermatitis in Africa, India, Asia, Malaya, the West Indies, Central and South America, and Mexico. It is also used on the skin to ward off insects, and in Africa it is used in veterinary practice. In the Philippines, where the pulp of aloe is steeped in wine to make a hair tonic, the split leaves are also employed to massage the scalp and condition the hair.

Dr. Creston Collins and his father, C. E. Collins, were successful in blending the pulp of aloe into an ointment as long ago as the 1930's. Dr. Alexander Farkas of North Miami Beach is working on a powdered form of the processed leaf, which is brought into solution by mixing with water. This will be a convenient way to market aloe but the dehydrated herb is expensive and must be refrigerated until used.

The best way to keep Aloe vera at hand for emergency first aid is to grow a plant on a window sill. It doesn't need sunlight directly on the plant. In fact, even where it is cultivated in quantity, taller trees are interspersed among the rows to give partial shade. A tip of the leaf may be cut from the lower portion of a potted plant without damage to the rest of the leaf or other leaves. As long as the central pair of leaves is unimpaired where the growing tips are situated, the side shoots may be cut as needed all winter long.

John Evelyn, great seventeenth-century English gardener, directed his servant in the care of aloe:

"Aloe cannot be watered too much in summer nor too little in winter: And when it does then require it, expose it rather in the air, so as no rain fall upon it; this will fill and plump the plant without watering; which in that season will kill it; then house it again."

He was saying, in effect, treat aloe rather like an African violet. Water it from below, keep it warm, and do not let cold water strike the leaves. Yet it can be planted out in the garden in the shade of a small tree or bush to get plenty of rain in the summer. If left in the same pot several years with the pot sunk in the garden bed, it will bloom from time to time. Be sure to bring it indoors before danger of frost. Little offshoots will give you new plants to be potted for gift-giving, or you can start it from cuttings. To get a plant to begin with, you can order from Mrs. E. Roberson, Garden of Memories, Box 107, Hagerman, Idaho; Helen's Cactus Garden, 2205 Mirasol Ave., Brownsville, Texas; and Logee's Greenhouse, Danielson, Conn.

A wide assortment of cosmetics and skin-care preparations, using the gel of the Aloe-vera plant, is available. It is manufactured by Aloe Creme Labs, Inc., Fort Lauderdale, Florida.

cruise aboard the S. S. Playpen, the electric raft that glides noiselessly across our lake where motor craft are taboo.

"The most spectacular party we ever gave was what the invitations called a 'Chinese Dinner Dance,' given on the night of a full moon, with the fireflies flickering and white lanterns hanging from every beam and tree. We set the tables on the lawn and near the reflecting pool, which flashed back with lantern light. What made it all the prettier was that some of the guests came by boat across the lake, with paper lanterns hanging from their masts and reflecting in the dark water as they came. We danced to Henry's stereo, which can be piped to the outdoors (we skate to music in the winter), and our buffet dinner menu was Chinese-inspired.

"We find the combination of water and lantern light irresistible, and a sure-fire glamorizer of summer-night parties, so we seized the chance to buy 80 Japanese paper lanterns from a shop that was selling out. They range in size from some as big as Greg to small ones about 15 inches long, and we string them up around the house and hang them in the trees.

"The flagstone dock at the water's edge is a delightful place for a foursome brunch, lunch, or tea party. We bring down the chafing dish and cook at the table. Pepper steaks work great on this.

"We can have a mobile cocktail party for eight on the raft—and frequently do as a pre-dinner interlude. And the novelty of it as the scene of a children's birthday party can't be beat. One Christmas, it became a sort of Santa's sled, with Henry a hearty, padded Santa Clause delivering presents to our friends around the lake.

"The lawns and terraces furnish plenty of free and open space for official cocktail parties, which may number as many as 250. I've evolved a standard cocktail-party menu—cold lobster mould, hot crab and cheese, and two kinds of tiny meatballs (mixed with whisky or gingersnaps). The menu is simple enough so that I can do the catering myself, and merely hire three waiters to take care of the serving.

"The real heroine in all my entertaining is the Hotray, which holds foods at eating temperature while I enjoy the party. I have two long ones and wonder how I ever entertained without them. We even bring ours down to the lake front, on wintry days, load it with chili or soup and between whirls on the ice have a hot snack. It's as important to my party meals as the pots and pans. Before guests arrive I cook and place the meal on our king-size tray. Soup, a beef and kidney stew, French bread, Italian green beans and tiny potatoes are a frequent menu. While we're having cocktails in the living room, on the terrace, the raft or lawn, the dinner stays at exactly the right temperature, my kitchen stays clean and uncluttered, and I stay calm. When we're ready to eat, I mix the salad, pour the wine, and the meal is ready.

"The dining room can take a sit-down dinner for six comfortably, but we can have larger sit-down meals and more formal ones by bringing the table into the family room, which is right next to the kitchen and provided with a buffet, so it amounts to an extra dining room. The table extends, of course.

"Wherever we've gone we've tried to collect objects that will make interesting table settings or serving pieces. We were particularly entranced by the pottery of Vallauris, the French Riviera village Picasso revived, and I acquired some mottled gray-blue marmites which marry off remarkably well with some gray-and-black tea cups we got in Japan. I can do an all-wood barbecue table setting with olive wood bowls we got in St. Paul de Vence, our favorite town in France, and wood plates we got in Atami in Japan. Trays, trays, and more trays, in every shape and color, are always on my shopping list because they save countless steps and give us freedom to eat and serve anywhere. My favorites come from a supermarket.

"Our most provocative props are two wonderfully lopsided cork bowls Henry picked up in Portugal. Our favorite use for them is to fill them with popcorn and let them float deliciously from swimmer to swimmer on the lake!"

they seem like putting the cart before the horse. It's that emotional climate we'd like to address first. For if a guest doesn't feel at ease, on good terms with himself and the people around him, no amount of eiderdown or ash trays or fruit in the bedroom is going to make him glad he came. It is usually the host's sin of omission rather than of commission which reduces the guest to this sorry condition. There are case histories to prove this.

Consider a few.

"Oh, we couldn't be more casual," carols the hostess on the phone as the guest tries to feel out the appropriate-wardrobe situation. "We live in our bathing suits." And forthwith the trusting guest tosses suit, toothbrush, and a few denim garments into the suitcase—only to find herself at a Saturday night cocktail party on the boat, or at a dance at the country club, or at a cozy supper tendered by a friendly neighbor, all of them reminiscent of a fête galante at Versailles, with the gentlemen suavely turned out in black tie, the ladies casually draped in chiffon and sable, and the guest, naturally, in thong beach sandals and an ill-becoming dress borrowed from the hostess.

"Tennis, everyone!" shouts the jovial host shortly after lunch, omitting to mention that he has organized the entire summer colony into an impromptu tournament. In this the guest becomes the star performer—comic, that is—because he has not held a racquet in his hand since the gym teacher graded him the most uncoordinated child in the school.

Fair warning—that's what every guest has a right to expect—and you can extend this to include such vital information as the hour he is expected to show his bright and morning face for breakfast, the schedule of coming events (and a chance to express a little free will in the matter, in case, say, he'd far prefer to spend the afternoon lolling in a well-shaded hammock than out broiling his winter-white body on a blistering beach).

We would suggest that it might not be amiss for the host to post on every guest-room door certain rules of the house, which would take care of such matters as how to turn the air conditioner off or on, and any idiosyncrasies of the plumbing, the water supply, or the electricity which guests can unwittingly snafu, especially in country houses. Guests should be given the message if they are in a household that skips lunch.

ANY GUEST worth inviting wants to feel that his presence isn't putting the household out of commission. There are few who can feel at ease when all they see of the hostess is her flushed and nerve-racked face on her occasional distracted sorties from the kitchen and her hot stove. Any honest, upright, red-blooded guest wants to help. Granted that it's often more harrowing than helpful when guests insist on taking a hand in domestic operations, the kind hostess learns how to say "No, thanks" gracefully, or philosophically regards this as a kind of guest-morale-builder. Though they may fling your grandmother's Rhine-wine glasses around as if they were confetti and get all confused in sorting out the wet from the dry garbage, just remember that it does make them feel needed, bless their well-meaning hearts.

There are a few things that they can be expected to do, however. No feminine guest in this day and age should be affronted if asked to make up her bed and keep her room in presentable condition. In our book, anyone who doesn't do this cheerfully has flunked the eligible-to-be-reinvited test.

In the matter of food, the frank and forthright approach again can save mutual embarrassment—or even a nocturnal S.O.S. for the nearest physician. Nothing is more dreadful than that moment of truth when the guest allergic to lobster discovers that the pièce de résistance is guess what. Just as well to find out in advance, by the simple expedient of asking, if those quirky favorites of yours—say cucumbers, avocado, and crabmeat—make acceptable guest food.

As for the physical comforts: Canvassing some veteran guests of our acquaintance we have come up with a roster of oddments that at one time or another might have made a guest happier had they been in or near the guest room when needed.

The well-known bedside lamp and ash tray. A clock. Adequate empty drawer and closet space, so you don't feel as if you're prying into other people's possessions. Honest-to-goodness clothes hangers. Wastepaper basket. A choice of hard or soft pillow. Extra blankets—or at least some indication where they might be found. A pin-cushion. Needles and thread. A scissors. Nail file or emery boards. Short-haul bedtime reading material—who could finish The Rise and Fall of the Third Reich in a week end? To spare the guilt complex that comes of opening a travel-dusty suitcase on a clean bed, a luggage rack or bench.

Extra refinements: the welcoming flower and fruit offering, a Thermos of ice water, a Thermos of hot coffee (this and the fruit make a good bedroom-breakfast), an electric fan, pretty hand fans, an aerosol insecticide.

In the bathroom cabinet, toiletries people are likely to forget: suntan oil, razor, deodorant, shampoo, hair spray, nail polish remover, aspirin, and the eternally forgotten toothbrush.

AND THE host most likely to succeed is the one with a closet full of seasonal lendables—bathing suits, beach coats, sunglasses, sun hats, scarves—plus puzzles, games, water colors, or crafts projects which may intrigue the guests into self-entertainment and are nothing short of lifesavers on a rainy day.

DECORATOR'S DIARY

Ideas from the home-furnishings market that solved one decorator's problems and may solve yours

"I wonder if you're old enough," mused Mrs. Walker, thinking aloud, and I felt my eyebrows go up.

"Old enough for what?" I asked.

"Old enough to remember the name of the very special kind of curtaining my grandmother had at her bedroom windows—a kind of cotton net, it was, that filtered light beautifully and always looked fresh because it could go into the family washtub without a lot of extra care and cleaning commotion. It's exactly what I'd like to use on that glass wall in the living room, but I haven't seen anything like it for years."

It was my turn to do some musing, trying to recall the decorating vocabulary of my own grandmother. "Was it marquissette, Nottingham net, point d'esprit, Cluny net?"

Mrs. Walker shook her head. "I've been all through that list, and it's none of them."

"Well, whatever it is," said I, remembering that the glass wall was not one inch less than 15 feet wide and eight feet high, "when we find it, we're going to need a bale of it, because any net curtain hangs like spaghetti unless you allow at least twice-and-a-half more fabric than the window measurement calls for. And let me also remind you that the most maddening, skittish material in the world to cut, seam, and hem is net. Not that I'm trying to sell you off the idea."

"Which, of course, you are," answered the perceptive Mrs. Walker, "but you haven't a chance of succeeding."

I'll show you, Mrs. Walker, thought I to myself, that this modern world is full of replacements for your grandmother's esoteric net curtaining. And forthwith I started my rounds of every fabric house I knew that purveys sheer white curtaining. My handbag bulged with swatches of likely substitutes by the time I got to the showroom of the Unika-Vaev Corporation, a firm that specializes in imported decorative fabrics.

Surveying the sheer goods, I found my eye caught by a Danish-made net curtaining, patterned in a geometric design densely woven into the sheer background. It was labeled "Bobinette No. 7," described as 100 percent diolen, which is the European name for a man-made, polyester drip-dry fiber. The label also indicated that the fabric was 88 inches wide, yet priced in the neighborhood of $12 a yard—an almost-too-good-to-be-true state of affairs. It meant we could drape the 15-foot wall with lavish fullness, using only seven lengths. The fabric is easily worked because the solid patterned areas give the net substance and tame its skittish behavior.

I'm not as great as I think I am if I can't sell the lady on this, I thought.

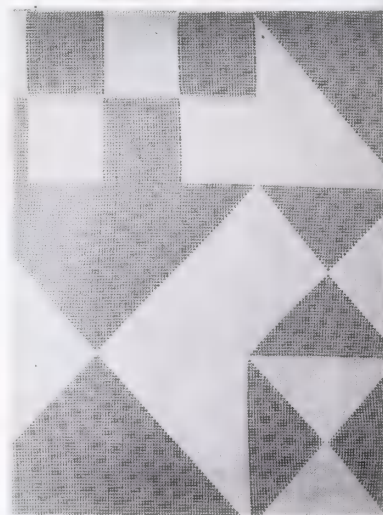

But that turned out to be the last thing I had to do.

"That's it!" she said, the minute she had the sample length in her hand and examined the net weave. "It's Grandma's bobinette, brought up to date. Somehow I knew they'd never let a good thing like that go out of our lives."

Indeed, this firm has not. They have another pattern. "Bobinette Number 1," woven in circular solid designs for moderns who prefer their geometry more rounded.

DECORATOR'S DIARY

"You're here," said brisk, white-haired Mrs. Walsh, "to help me make a Sybarite of myself, in my new two-room apartment." At this point the phone rang, and I tried to concentrate on the pattern of her particularly beautiful, creamy-white Chinese rug.

She hung up, smiling. "One of my crapehanger friends," she explained, "calling up to offer her sympathy. She thinks I should now be in a state of acute melancholia because I'm giving up this old house and this mixed bag of furnishings I've been looking at for years. But now that my last child is married and on her own, I can hardly wait to get into that little apartment and live a magnificently selfish life of ease. I intend," she said, "to spend most of my time on a chaise longue—something I've never owned. If I won't look like Madame Recamier, I'll at least feel like her. I'll read all the books I've never got around to, from Kenilworth to Ian Fleming. I'll try my hand at modern needlework, in the Mariska Karasz manner. I'll play my piano whenever the mood strikes me, and every so often I'll go out to see the world.

"And you, by the way, are my first luxury. There's a limit to what I can salvage from these twelve rooms to put into two. But if I try to make the choices myself, I may bog down in sentimentality and try to save the whole lot. So will you, ruthlessly, do the picking and choosing—and what's left I will turn over to the auctioneer."

Looking through the twelve rooms, I saw what she meant by a mixed bag. There were good, bad, indifferent, and choice pieces, a typical lifetime accumulation of things one gets so used to seeing that one hardly sees them at all. But a disinterested stranger, who doesn't know that the hideous old rocker belonged to a loved grandmother and couldn't care less that this is the bed all the children were born in, can weed out the best in a flash. These, destined for the new living room, were the Chinese rug, a Coromandel screen, the spinet piano, a black and tawny Paisley shawl, a pair of black-lacquer Queen Anne chairs, a fairly new Danish teak-framed sofa upholstered in black leather, and some antique brass jardinières, which I foresaw as holders for some tall house plants.

For the most part, Mrs. Walsh concurred in the choice.

"But don't forget the chaise longue," she said. "Where will we find one that won't look too fussy in this tailored room?"

I didn't have to give this a second thought, because I suddenly realized that in making my choices I'd had in the back of my mind one of those sophisticated rattan pieces Elinor McGuire has designed for the McGuire Company—a graceful unbedroomy piece which is chaise longue and sofa simultaneously, thanks to a raised arm at one end which extends along the length of the piece as a back rest. In walnut-colored rattan with rawhide bindings, its foam-rubber upholstery covered in gold silk, it's urbane enough to mix with period furniture. Yet its reversible padding and two Dacron-filled cushions invite chaise-longue lounging whenever the owner wants to curl up or cat-nap.

This gives Mrs. Walsh, who admits to a gregarious bent, two sofas in the living room, hence plenty of seating in a relatively small space. But meantime, when she's alone with her whodunits and needlework, she can make like Recamier, gracefully covered with her Paisley shawl.—M.G.

The Wine Lovers' Dictionary

Another excursion on our continuing journey, alphabetically speaking, through the world of wines, with a famous expert as our guide

By FRANK SCHOONMAKER

HUDSON RIVER. Table grapes of native American varieties have long been grown in the Hudson Valley, especially on the west bank between Newburgh and Kingston, and a few rather halfhearted and not very successful efforts have been made to produce wine. The one interesting, surviving vineyard is a fairly new one—Mr. Everett Crosby's High Tor.

HYBRID. In viticulture, the result of a cross of two grape varieties. Botanically, the idea is a fairly new one, less than two centuries old; applied to the grape, it is wholly revolutionary, since the wine-bearing vine has been almost entirely propagated by cuttings rather than by seeds since the dawn of human history. Most hybrids are an attempt to combine the best qualities of two quite different parent vines, or to produce an offspring able to contend with some special problem, such as the phylloxera, without compromising its superiority. Considering the fact that there is hardly such a thing as a pure strain of grape or one consistently able to transmit its specific qualities to its seedlings, this is a monumental problem, and it is surprising that so much definite progress has been made. There is no doubt, for example, that a number of the newer hybrids are capable of giving better wine in our eastern states than any of the original "native" varieties: hybrids also provide quite passable wine for home use in many parts of France. In France, these crosses usually bear the name of the hybridizer, often plus a serial number, such as Seibel 5279, Couderc 4401, Baco No. 1, Bouschet, and Müller-Thurgau; in other countries they have a bad tendency, like illegitimate children, to claim the name of their illustrious parent, however few of his or her characteristics they may possess. As a result, wines are often presented to a somewhat confused public under names that sound familiar but to which the wines have no well-authenticated right. Thus we have Goldriesling and Mainriesling in Germany, Emerald Riesling and Ruby Cabernet in the United States.

Mr. Philip Wagner of the Baltimore Sun and of Boordy Vineyard has done much to popularize the better hybrids in America. Extensive experiments in hybridizing are being carried on by the University of California's College of Agriculture, at Davis, California and by similar establishments in several continents and at least a dozen countries. It seems certain that much of benefit to the wine drinker will eventually result, though how soon is another question.

SAFETY THRESHOLD—high heels glide right over GATEWAY II's flat threshold. In rainy weather, weep holes carry water outside . . . keep rugs safe from moisture.

Open, PPG's GATEWAY II Door stretches your living space out onto the lawn or patio. Closed, it seals out unwelcome weather, stands as a bright, living mural of the ever-changing seasons.

Although moderately priced, GATEWAY II is quality throughout. Its slim, handsome lines harmonize with any decor. Snugly sealed against the weather, it slides smoothly, quietly on sealed ball bearings and nylon wheels.

GATEWAY II is available with strong, safe HERCULITE® K safety glass or TWINOW® insulating glass. The screen—tough, noncorroding fiber glass—may be ordered to mount inside or outside the sliding door.

Open your home to beauty, with PPG's new GATEWAY II Sliding Glass Door. For the name of your nearest dealer, write Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company, Room 2035, 632 Fort Duquesne Boulevard, Pittsburgh 22, Pennsylvania.

DAYDREAMS

Beneath a host of beguiling, fanciful daydreams, the mind of a child is simple—uncluttered—even serene. Well cared for and warmly loved, today's child has few fears, almost no worries.

Many things contribute to this sense of security. One is the protection enjoyed by children and parents in a well-built home . . . a home that can withstand the elements and keep the family safe and comfortable. The makers of BESTWALL and CERTAIN-TEED building products know the importance of home protection. Their research facilities are dedicated to the improvement of products including fine quality roofing, siding, fiberglass insulation, sheathing, walls and ceilings. For example, the fire-resistance of Bestwall's famous "Firestop" Gypsum Wallboard has been substantially increased over its previous high rating . . . and Certain-teed roofing shingles meet or surpass the new higher standards for safety and quality established by Underwriters Laboratories.

For greater safety, protection, beauty and value in materials for building and remodeling, it will pay you to see your Bestwall Certain-teed dealer—or write direct to ICE BUCKET. Except in restaurants, ice buckets seem to be used less and less generally in this day of electric refrigeration; this is to be regretted, for white wines and rosés and Champagnes are far better served in a bucket. Prechilling, however useful, does not accomplish the same end; chilled wines lose their freshness and sprightliness and charm as they warm up during a meal, and the last glass rarely tastes as good as the first. Of red wines, particularly if brought to table at slightly below room temperature, the opposite is of course true: they improve as they warm up and taste better and better, as they should.

Many ice buckets are poorly designed, and the wine in the neck of a Rhine or Moselle bottle, for example, never gets chilled at all. In such cases it is perfectly correct procedure to put the bottle in the bucket neck down for ten minutes or so, before the capsule is cut away and the cork drawn.

IMPÉRIALE (M-pay-ray-ahl). Oversize bottle, in which Clarets of great years are occasionally laid away, for slower development and longer life. Holds as much as eight ordinary bottles.

INFERNO (In-fair-no). Perhaps the most famous of the five classic red wines of Valtellina, produced along the northern edge of the Lombardy region of Italy, not far from the Swiss border.

INGLENOOK. Famous old California vineyard, at Rutherford, in the Napa Valley. The first vines were planted in 1879 by Gustav Niebaum, a retired Finnish sea captain and one of the first directors of the Alaska Commercial Company, and the impressive stone winery was constructed a decade later. The property still belongs to Captain Niebaum's collateral descendants, including John Daniel, Jr., who directs it and has been an important figure in California viticulture since the end of Prohibition. The production is not large; the entire emphasis is on varietal wines, and on quality. Particularly noteworthy are Inglenook's Cabernet Sauvignon, Pinot Noir, Pinot Chardonnay, and Traminer, but a few others are produced including a Charbono (from the grape of that name), a Red Pinot (from the Pinot St. Georges) and sound, less expensive wines sold under the name Navalle.

IONA. Native, Eastern, red-purple grape, but giving white wine, rather widely planted in the Finger Lakes district. It takes its name from Iona Island, in the Hudson not far from Peekskill, where it was first grown.

JEREZ (Hair-eth). Attractive and prosperous little city in Southern Spain, on the main road and main railway line from Seville to Cadiz: the birthplace of Sherry, which is called Jerez or Vino de Jerez in Spanish. The vineyards that have made the city's fame and its wealth lie mostly to the west and southwest of the town, out of sight of the highway; many of the streets run between the high, white, windowless walls of the bodegas in which Sherry is stored and aged.

JEROBOAM. Oversize wine bottle, holding as much as six ordinary bottles, in which Clarets of great years are sometimes laid away. The jeroboam is also used for Champagne but here the wine is fermented in regular bottles and then "transfused" just prior to shipment. This of course has a tendency to shorten its life.

JESI or IESI (Yay-zee). Town in Central Italy, not far from Ancona. The surrounding villages produce, from the Verdicchio grape, one of the best Italian dry white wines, Castelli di Jesi.

JOHANNISBERG. World-famous little village, and its even more celebrated castle (see Johannisberg, Schloss, below) overlooking the Rhine in the heart of the German Rheingau. Its production figures are hardly impressive—there are only 66 acres in the Schloss or castle vineyard (part of these are usually non-productive through the rotation of replanting) and only about 200 more under vines in the whole township. These would be hard pressed to supply the whole world's demand for Johannisberger, and commercial wines so labelled, with no indication of specific vineyard site, or producer's name, or estate-bottling, may legitimately be looked on with skepticism. The name Dorf Johannisberger is no better, since dorf, in German, simply means village. On the other hand, the true Johannisbergers, with vineyard name and Original-Abfüllung, are of a quality hardly surpassed and not often equalled in the Rheingau, wines of extraordinary grace and breed and bouquet. The more dependable Lagen, or vineyard names, are these: Klaus, Hölle, Vogel-sang, Kläuserpfad, Kläuserberg, Kläusergarten, Kahlenberg, Goldatzel, etc. Leading producers include Graf von Schönborn, Geromont, Landgraf von Hessen (formerly Krayer Erben), Anton Eser, etc.

JOHANNISBERG RIESLING. Name usually given to the true Riesling grape in California to differentiate it from other varieties which, in fact, are not Rieslings at all—the so-called Franken Riesling (really the Sylvaner), the Gray Riesling (really the Chauché Gris), the Emerald Riesling, the Goldriesling and the Mainriesling, all of which are crosses, giving wine of lower quality.

JOHANNISBERG, SCHLOSS. Germany's most famous vineyard, spectacularly situated on one of the steepest of the Rheingau's hillsides, commanding an incomparable view over the fertile and busy Rhine Valley. According to tradition, it was the Emperor Charlemagne who first ordered vines planted on its slope (having observed, from his palace at Ingelheim across the river, that snow melted sooner there than elsewhere); by 1100 a Benedictine abbey had been constructed on the site, and when church properties were secularized in 1801, this became the property of Prince William of Orange. The Congress of Vienna ceded it to the Emperor of Austria, and he bestowed it on Prince Metternich; it is still the property of the Metternich family, and their home. The present castle, however, is new, the old Schloss having been bombed during the last war, and almost entirely destroyed.

JULIÉNAS (Jule-yea-nahss). One of the most important communes and one of the best wines of the Beaujolais—perhaps less fruity than Brouilly and less engaging than Fleurie, but a firm wine of unusual distinction, balance, and fine texture. Total production is between one-fourth and one-half million gallons a year.

KAEFERKOPF (Kay-fer-kopf). One of the rare wines of Alsace to carry a specific vineyard name. The Kaeferkopf is in the commune of Ammerschwihr, and yields admirable Rieslings and Gewürztraminers.

KANZLERBERG (Kahnz-lehr-bairg). Remarkable vineyard in the town Bergheim, Haut-Rhin, producing some of the very finest wines of Alsace, Gewürztraminers especially.

KARTHÄUSERHOFBERG. Celebrated vineyard on the Ruwer, in Germany.

KAYSERBERG (Kayz-zerz-bairg). Picturesque and justly famous little wine town in Alsace. Its Rieslings and Gewürztraminers are of top quality, and it is the birthplace of Dr. Albert Schweitzer.

KEUKA, LAKE (Q-ka). One of New York State's Finger Lakes, and perhaps the most important of all, as far as wine is concerned; the little town of Hammondsport is at its southern end, and the three wineries where Taylor wines, Great Western, and Gold Seal are produced are all nearby.

Now, clean the air in your home of dust and pollen...electronically

New electronic air cleaner from Honeywell removes up to 95%* of airborne dust and irritants

Why just hate dust? Let Honeywell's new electronic air cleaner help you do something about it. It fits in the return air duct work of any forced air heating, ventilating or air conditioning system, removing up to 95% of airborne dust and other particles passing through the system.

It catches millions of tiny particles that pass right through ordinary filters (the kind you probably have). It's these bits of smoke, grease and grime that carry soiling power to smudge furnishings, put a dingy haze over windows and mirrors. Nothing will remove the bigger particles of dust that settle before they enter the system except your dust cloth, but these are easy to whisk away.

Air cleaning has been proved practical for years in hospitals and other buildings where clean air is vital. Now the same benefits can be yours in a system of practical home-size and price. On a 3-year FHA loan, it costs as little as $14.38 a month, installed.

What a wonderful difference it makes! Air passing through the system will be freed of up to 99% of the pollen†—tobacco smoke and other particles will also be effectively removed. Mirrors and windows will stay sparkling—draperies fresh and clean—longer than before. You'll save on cleaning bills, too. You won't throw away the dust cloth, but you'll surely reduce dusting.

If you don't have a forced air system in your home, you can get cleaner air in single rooms with the Honeywell Portable.

So why just hate dust? Do something about it. Send in the coupon now for more information.

*As measured by the National Bureau of Standards Dust Spot Method.

†Electronic air cleaning is not a treatment. Be sure to consult your doctor. Ask him what it may do for you.

KIEDRICH (Key-drich). Little vineyard town of the Rheingau, set back in the hills between Rauenthal and Hallgarten, producing excellent wines which, like the Rauenthalers, deserve to be as well known abroad as they are in Germany; fruity, racy, spicy, they are truly admirable in good years. There are some 320 acres of vines, and the best plots are Gräfenberg, Wasserrose, Sandgrub, and Turmberg; the leading producers: Graf Eltz, Dr. Weil, Freiherr von Ritter zu Groenesteyn, and the State Domain.

KORBEL. Famous old winery in Sonoma County, California, especially known for its Champagne, one of America's best. Founded in 1881 by four brothers of this name, who had emigrated from Czechoslovakia and made a considerable fortune in lumber, it remained a family enterprise until quite recently; the first vines were planted around enormous redwood stumps near Guerneville, in the Russian River Valley, and the stone winery there dates from 1886. Czech wine makers were brought over from the Viticultural School of Melnik, near Prague, and imposed their high old-world standards, planting only the better varieties of vine and adhering rigidly to French methods of Champagne making. A few table wines and fortified wines were produced in the past but these, decidedly less good, have been discontinued.

KUECHELBERGER (Cue-kell-bairg-er). Light and fragrant red wine of the Italian Tyrol, produced just outside the attractive resort town of Merano, and a great favorite there. It is made from the Schiava Meranese grape.

LACHRYMA CHRISTI (La-cree-ma Kris-tee). Celebrated white wine (a little red, less good, is also produced) grown on the slopes of Mt. Vesuvius, near Naples. Made from the Greco della Torre grape, pale gold in color, it is a bit softer and less austere dry than the wine of Capri, produced nearby, and in character and flavor not too far from a fairly dry Graves. The name, of course, means "Tears of Christ" and there are many stories to explain its origin. The lovely Bay of Naples country has been called a "fragment of Paradise," and, according to one account, the Lord, returning to earth, found this heavenly corner of the world "inhabited by demons" (presumably the Neapolitans); touched and distressed, He wept, and where His tears fell there sprung up green vines—the vines of the Lachryma Christi vineyards.

Unembellished by such pious legend, a sparkling Lachryma Christi is made in many parts of Italy, including Piedmont; it may not, of course, carry the words "del Vesuvio" on its label unless it comes from the original, delimited vineyard zone.

LAFURIE-PEYRAGUEY, Château (La-fo-ree-Pay-rah-gay). First Classed Growth of Sauternes. One of the best vineyards of Bommes and one of the most impressive châteaux of the Sauternes district. Full-bodied, golden, very sweet wine, typical Sauternes.

IT'S WORTH MENTIONING

By JULIE POLSHEK

Stacked or in single use, this unusual wicker ottoman has distinctive interest as room décor; 22-inch diameter (8½" high) lends importance, gives roomy area for leg-propping or sitting. Made in Formosan Islands; hand-woven over strong bamboo framing. Totes by bamboo edge at base for use at pool, beach, or wherever; interior holds cushion, bathing gear, etc. $25 each with cushion. Designed for Living, 131 E. 57th St., N.Y. 22.

For buffet spreads, Serv-A-Dish trays and liners can stack alongside food appointments ready for coupled use. Your guests have the convenience of a stable lap unit; you have the convenience of disposable plates. Luxurious golden trays are heavy-gauge metal, 10¾" square. $3.95 for 4. Plastic-coated liners are compartmented, tasteless, hold hot foods. 48 for $2. Available directly from St. Regis Paper Co., Box 706, Marion, Indiana.

If you refinish antiques, this scraper's value is apparent; assorted edge shapes are designed to handle the gamut of involved stripping encountered on period furniture or frames. Blades can be used in push, pull, or whittling motion, in off-center placement for paring. Made of hardened high-speed steel; precision-ground 90° edges; 1¼" square. Set into pressed-wood handle. $2.50. Maute Co., Box 27, Williamsville 21, New York.

In playroom, Fiesta Stor-A-Way ideally serves the small fry and fosters neatness; the 40-inch-high rack keeps playthings sorted and reachable in multicolor cartons, very gay en masse, very presentable in room use. Cartons are 11" by 11" by 10"; attached flap closes them. The nine occupy a 3' by 1' ebony metal rack structurally sway-proof and strong. $12.95; Gimbel's, New York 1, New York.

THE ORIGINAL PORTRAIT KIT

We, the originators of oil-portrait number kits have enabled thousands of people with no prior experience to paint quality portraits of loved ones. Our exclusive system gives you the finest reproduction at the lowest possible price. No misshapen abstracts. From your photo or color slide (any size) every brush stroke area is outlined and numbered on a fine mounted 16" x 20" canvas (standard portrait size). Twenty-four cups of individually-mixed artists oil paints marked for the numbered areas are provided with screw cap lids to preserve freshness. The kit also includes: an artists palette, fine brushes, brush cleaner, and a color reproduction with instructions to show you how to make each brush stroke for maximum effect. Please indicate hair and eye coloring. All photos returned unharmed.

SELLING BY MAIL CAN BE PROFITABLE

Many successful businesses have been started on a small scale through mail order advertising. What makes mail order selling so profitable for so many people?

1. Minimum initial investment. You invest your money only where it pays off; in ads like those you see in this section of HOUSE BEAUTIFUL.
2. Controlled inventory. You stock only what you are advertising and selling at the moment.
3. Nation-wide Sales. Your mail order advertising reaches prospects throughout the country, not just in your community.

WANT TO LEARN MORE? HOUSE BEAUTIFUL, first in mail order advertising, is first in mail order know-how. We tell you what we know in our special kit called "Mail Order Facts". No charge! So write today to be in on the big Christmas season.

the renaissance of a lovely island

If you're looking for unspoiled, unspoiled, fascinating on every touristic count—

Sardinia is your answer

By HELEN BARSKA

Not lace doilies, but Sardinia's festive breads, pane artistiche. In this untraveled country, the village dance is no tourist show.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY E. P. T. CAGLIARI

■ An island of purple mountains, flowered valleys, and green forests; of spiny rocks, granite cliffs, arid deserts, and beaches of fine, white sand—a small and lovely speck in the peacock waters of the Tyrrhenian Sea, off the western coast of Italy. This is Sardinia—once a mighty sea power, yet practically ignored by the world at large for the last several centuries, its resources unplumbed, its people mired in poverty. Now it is enjoying a renaissance, a re-emergence from the shadow into the sun. Like all rebirths, this one was long in evolving. Swamps have been cleared and roads rebuilt; ancient cities have been dug up, medieval palaces restored, native arts and crafts revived. As of now, there are remarkable things to see; better yet, there are the facilities to make (Please turn to page 112)

This atrium is a thoughtfully composed bit of nature seen from all the main living areas of the house. Though it is outdoors, it is entirely surrounded by house. All the rooms that look into it seem much bigger, thanks to its 24' by 24' space.

The atrium, a little bit of outdoors that is yours and yours alone

■ In 1959, HOUSE BEAUTIFUL chose for its Pace Setter a radically new kind of house. It was built around four sides of a central court, and in explaining the house we emphasized the advantages of this inward-turning idea. We ventured to predict that it would become "a significant prototype for the next decade" (the 1960's) because it offered its residents "more control over their environment than has ever been known in America." We explained that the open, but enclosed, court was a time-proved device (called an atrium) common to city houses of the Greeks and Romans. Now, barely four years later, we can report that the atrium house has taken hold in every section of the country.

What is an atrium? It is an outdoor space surrounded entirely by house, which means it is truly private. Unlike a patio or a terrace, it is not subject to the scrutiny of your neighbors. The glass walls that look into this space need not even be curtained, since it is completely cut off.

The atrium idea can have a dynamic effect on floor planning. What it does, in effect, is to add space to every room that looks into it. Visually, it creates an illusion of great vistas even when the enclosed floor space may actually be quite limited. By making outdoor living possible within the house walls, it lets nearly every room participate more directly and more intimately in it.

As garden space, the atrium may be formal or informal. It may be paved, grassed, or landscaped with planting beds. It is a small enough area so that it may be a precious, carefully composed bit of outdoors, easy to control and easy to maintain. Even the climate in the atrium will be milder, allowing you to grow more tender plants.

In the 32 pages that follow, you'll see how the atrium is being used by different families and in different climates.

As seen from the street, the house reveals little; it is an inward-turning house. Only the main entrance is emphasized.

The tall planting at the right of entrance screens the kitchen entrance and the stairway to service area in basement.

An atrium for all the seasons

Although living in a region drenched with rain, the occupants of this house can enjoy the advantages of an atrium the entire year

By CURTIS BESINGER

Just within the entrance (it is on the north side of house) is a vestibule, an area separated from entrance hall (see plan). Kitchen and powder room are on opposite sides of it.

ALL PHOTOGRAPHS OF THIS HOUSE BY MAYNARD PARKER

● Even though you may live in a climate that does not favor the use of an atrium, you may still enjoy many of its benefits with a roofed and enclosed garden room.

This house, built in the cool, rain-drenched coastal region of the Pacific Northwest, is one example of how it may be done. It was designed by Architect Roland Terry for owners whose primary requirement was a gardenlike space protected from the vagaries of the weather. They had enjoyed entertaining in the garden of their previous house when possible. Now they wanted to be able to count on doing so.

To meet this requirement, the garden-atrium of their new house was put under a high, skylighted, trellislike roof. In short, their atrium looks like the outdoors, but in reality is indoors. The living areas of the house are grouped around this space. Outdoor terraces on the south and west sides of the house link the atrium to the outdoors. The result is that the atrium turns what is essentially a small house into one of spatial magnificence.

Seen from the exterior, the house is inward-turning and noncommittal. It tells little about itself. But it does indicate immediately that the owners value privacy and have discriminating taste.

You enter the house through a clearly defined vestibule (see plan, page 65), with a doorway to the kitchen at one side (for the maid's convenience in answering the door and admitting the guests). On the opposite side is a powder room for guests. You move from here into the reception area. At one side of this is a small, intimate library with a built-in bar. On the opposite side is the living room.

On the south side of the house, opposite the entrance, the openness of the atrium gives way to a more enclosed sitting area. You can relax here by the fire on chilly days or in the evening, yet enjoy the feeling of being close to the outdoors.

Though the climate in its area (the Pacific Northwest) is not suitable for an open-air court, this house nevertheless has the advantages of the inner-court house. Skylights flood its great central space with natural daylight, and the clerestory windows open for ventilation if needed. All the important rooms of the house open onto this area and gain immensely from it.

AN ATRIUM FOR ALL THE SEASONS continued

As you enter the living room, you are immediately aware of the gardenlike space that is a continuation of it. This garden space is separated from the living room by only a wall of glass. And, although you have entered the house, you feel that you are in an outdoor environment. As you move from the nine-foot-high space of the reception area into the fourteen-foot-high space of the living room and atrium, the space seemingly opens up. This space is filled with a mellow light from the translucent skylights overhead and the clerestory windows on two sides. From here you can see the sky and the tops of the trees through the clerestories. You also see the terraces with their walls and planting. And you relate this to the luxuriant planting and the fountain and pool at one side of the garden space. These all add up to (Please turn the page)

◀ You enter from the 9'-high space of the reception area into the 14'-high space of the living room. This is separated from the gardenlike atrium by a glass screen. The doors in this screen open the living room to the atrium when desired. Dining area (seen in the background) also opens to atrium.

In the living room, generously proportioned couches provide a conversational grouping near fireplace, which is at left. The living room is very much secluded within the house. The only outside windows it has are those in the high clerestory. Otherwise the "outdoors" into which it faces is the atrium, a space completely under the control of its owners.

At the west side of the atrium and near the formal dining area, which opens to it, is an outdoorlike area for informal dining. Add to this the informal sitting area (page 59) and you can appreciate how many different kinds of living the atrium offers.

the sensation of being outdoors. It is here that the owners may entertain even though it is raining. In a sense, the garden has become their entire house.

They may move outside when the weather permits; the terraces are simply continuations of the inner garden. That on the south adjacent to the master bedroom has been raised to give a view toward the nearby lake. On the west, but shielded from the street on that side, is another terrace that traps the warmth of the afternoon sun, so it is comfortable and cheerful even when the air is cool.

Since the house is on a town lot with streets on two of the sides and nearby houses on the others, these outdoor terraces with their walls and planting serve also as buffers to secure privacy. In addition, certain rooms were placed to provide greater privacy and seclusion. The living room, surrounded by rooms on all sides, opens only into the atrium. The master suite (Please turn the page)

The secret of the atrium's soft filtered light is in the twelve plastic skylights. Dimmer-controlled night-lighting is also provided in domes.

On the south, a paved terrace continues the atrium to an enclosed outdoor area. By these exterior links the atrium's seeming openness is extended.

The plan of what is essentially a two-bedroom house reveals how the central roofed garden gives the house an unexpected and delightful spatial grandeur. Though the principal rooms are of average size, being turned inward for privacy they share in and are enlarged by the atrium's seeming openness.

The drawing at left shows how the high space of the atrium, and of the living room which is a continuation of it, rises above the roof of the surrounding rooms and makes possible the clerestory windows (see following page) which ventilate this central space and contribute to its pleasant lighting.

is at the point most remote from the two streets. The guest room is protected by its own private walled garden.

A problem that may occur in any compact house plan is that of securing cross light and ventilation in all rooms. In this house, the problem of light is quite satisfactorily solved by the atrium. But, since the atrium is enclosed, there could have been a lack of adequate ventilation. In order to prevent this, some of the sash in the clerestory are hinged at the top and equipped with remote-control operators so that they may easily be opened. The operators are concealed behind doors in the paneled walls of the atrium and living room. These windows, being hinged at the top, may be left open in rainy weather to ventilate the garden as well as cross-ventilate the other rooms.

Since this garden is heated in cool weather—but not to the temperature of surrounding rooms—it is a place in which tropical plants could be planted and thrive.

Construction and equipment information on page 119

In the clerestory, some of the window sash may be opened for ventilation. They are operated by conveniently placed controls concealed in the wall paneling of atrium and living room. Each side of each room may be operated independently.

This view from the guest room shows how rooms at the corners of the atrium are visually related to it. Pairs of doors that meet at the corner (see plan) seem to disappear when open. Spacious grandeur of the house may be better appreciated if plan is studied for long diagonal views like this.

In a large house that has complex space requirements, hallways are usually a necessity. But too often circulation is through a long, dark tunnel. Here the atrium brightens and dignifies the traffic ways.

As you enter (below), you become aware immediately of the visual importance of the atrium. And in walking about within the house you are never far from the center of it, as you can see in the plan above.

The Atrium

Modern man tends to reject certain ideas simply because they are not new.

This atrium—as atriums in Pompeii—serves as the core of circulation within the house

● Most of the houses in our parade of atriums are small houses, since one of the atrium's great assets is that it can optically increase the size of the room looking into it.

But this house is a big, formal house—even though you can count only nine rooms on the plan. And big houses present circulation problems, such as: How can servants go from the kitchen to the front door without passing through any major rooms? Older large-size houses solved these problems with hallways—long, dark, gloomy, and for-

Opposite the entrance the gallery is wider, so it can be more than a passage for movement. Small furniture groupings are quite in scale here. Not designed to be lived in but rather to be looked at, the central space is a source of visual and audible delight.

as a Core of Circulation

bidding. Even if they weren't dark, they always seemed depressingly tunnellike.

In this house, the atrium is the heart of a hall system in addition to its obvious aesthetic function. It is a point of reference, and it is of such size and importance that it is the dominant space of the house as well as the core of circulation within it.

When you enter the house, the first thing to attract your eye is the light-filled central space, with its fountain and planting. As you move about, enjoying the pleasure of walking in the gallery, you soon learn where the main rooms are in relation to this space. They all have direct access to it. You know where you are: you aren't lost, as you sometimes can be in modern buildings.

Unlike the preceding house, with its somewhat restricted site bounded by nearby streets and houses, this house occupies a much larger site and one that is less hemmed-in. But this has not removed the need and desire for seclusion.

This house is not as inward-looking in character as the preceding house; it does have a highly developed outer area. Still, its atrium indicates a desire for privacy. The cloistering of space and its treatment as something rare and precious is an essential aid to securing privacy. This atrium, although a public part of the house, does give privacy to persons moving about between the rooms, but it enables them to feel that they are out-of-doors. And it provides privacy between the various areas of the house. As the dominant element of the house—the device that ties it all together—it is also an element that separates the various functions of the house.

As can be seen in the plan, the living room and the master suite are completely separated from the service areas. Between these are bedrooms for guests, well separated from the gallery by baths and entrance vestibules. The fourth side of the atrium is the wall separating it from the terrace and swimming pool. Without the desire for seclusion and a definite separation of the entry from the pool, the fourth wall could have been entirely glass.

This atrium, treated formally and classically, provides light and sun for what is actually a hall. Large houses always present circulation problems, and the traditional hallway tends to create long, dark passages reminiscent of a tunnel. Here the hall wraps around the atrium and is wide enough for small furniture groups to be arranged in two corners. Three rooms look into this cheerful space.

An atrium can lengthen your outdoor season

Here is one—both a windbreak and a sun pocket—that has been tailored to its special climate needs

● If houses were more knowingly designed, their owners could enjoy at least a third more outdoor living than they now do. The house shown on these pages was designed specifically for the warm climate of Tucson, Arizona, normally favorable to outdoor living. But there are hazards, principally wind and sun. Both problems have been dealt with in this atrium. The north wall is glass, shutting out the wind in winter while admitting the welcome sunshine. Draperies can be drawn for privacy when needed. The sliding glass entrance panel may be left open to create a breeze on rare still days. The atrium roof opening is actually not large—it is only 41 percent of the total atrium. Well-placed planting reduces heat radiation from flagstone paving.

Built on the former tennis court of the house next door, this house has a garden limited to the private and enclosed atrium (photograph, right). Because the lot was narrow, the entrance to the garden is through a door to the rear of the carport.

How to have your private bit of outdoors off a city street

● If you want a private outdoor space, it may not always be possible to have an atrium completely surrounded by rooms, as in the preceding examples. On a narrow lot, the width that might be required for rooms at either side could reduce the atrium to little more than an unusable light well. However, as the example shown here illustrates, there are other ways to achieve the out-of-door privacy and other advantages of an atrium.

This house and its adjoining garden were planned for a family with two children. Since they do not often have the opportunity to go away, they wanted a garden retreat in the city itself. The site they found for their house was the former tennis court of a large house in San Francisco. It had a desirable view of the bay to the north.

Because of this—and the owners' dream of having a brick-paved terrace where they could entertain—a person not familiar with San Francisco might assume that the garden and terrace could have been placed on the north side of the lot to take full advantage of the view. But a person familiar with the city and its weather knows that to use an outdoor living area there it must be well protected against the chill northerly winds.

Because of the wind and the (Please turn the page)

In San Francisco, a view facing north to the bay also means an exposure to the chill northwest winds. Here a protected outdoor area was gained by the placement of the two-story portion of house on the north side of site. View to the bay may still be seen through the windows of living room.

The L-shape, enclosed living areas of house form two sides of the court. The back wall of carport, through which one enters, shields the area from street. On the fourth side, a trellised wall of the former tennis court was utilized, completing the privacy.

narrowness of the lot, enclosed living areas were placed on the west and north sides of the property. The two-story northern part serves as a barrier against the wind. In the resulting plan the living room has both the distant view and an intimate, close-up view of the enclosed garden. And the garden, carefully designed to be lived in as well as seen, is one that is quite intensively used.

The brick paving was placed at the same level as the floor of the house. This makes it possible to move in and out freely and to wheel teacarts for serving meals. A continuous drain with a metal grille cover was set between paving and walls of the house to eliminate any water problems in sudden heavy rain. A minimum of clearly defined and easily maintained planting was added to the old gray cedar already on the site. One unexpected result of all this has been that, with no previous gardening experience, the owner's garden with its limited area is becoming a hobby and an anticipated source of pleasure.

From the living room, one has an outlook in two directions: to the north a wide, sweeping view of the bay; to the south a more intimate view (right), the garden. This place, protected from wind and capturing the sun, is an intensively used outdoor room, a spot where meals are often served and where, because it is limited in space, gardening is a delightful hobby, not a burdensome chore.

A fence is another way to create an atrium

PHOTOGRAPH BY MAYNARD PARKER

This entrance court, defined on three sides by the house, is closed on the fourth by a fence and covered service walkway leading from the opposite end of the carport. It screens the kitchen entrance from the view of guests approaching house.

● The house that is U-shaped in plan is a common architectural type in many parts of the country. However, if this arrangement is built on a typically small suburban lot, the space inside the U rarely has privacy. This is true whether the U faces the street, the rear, or the side.

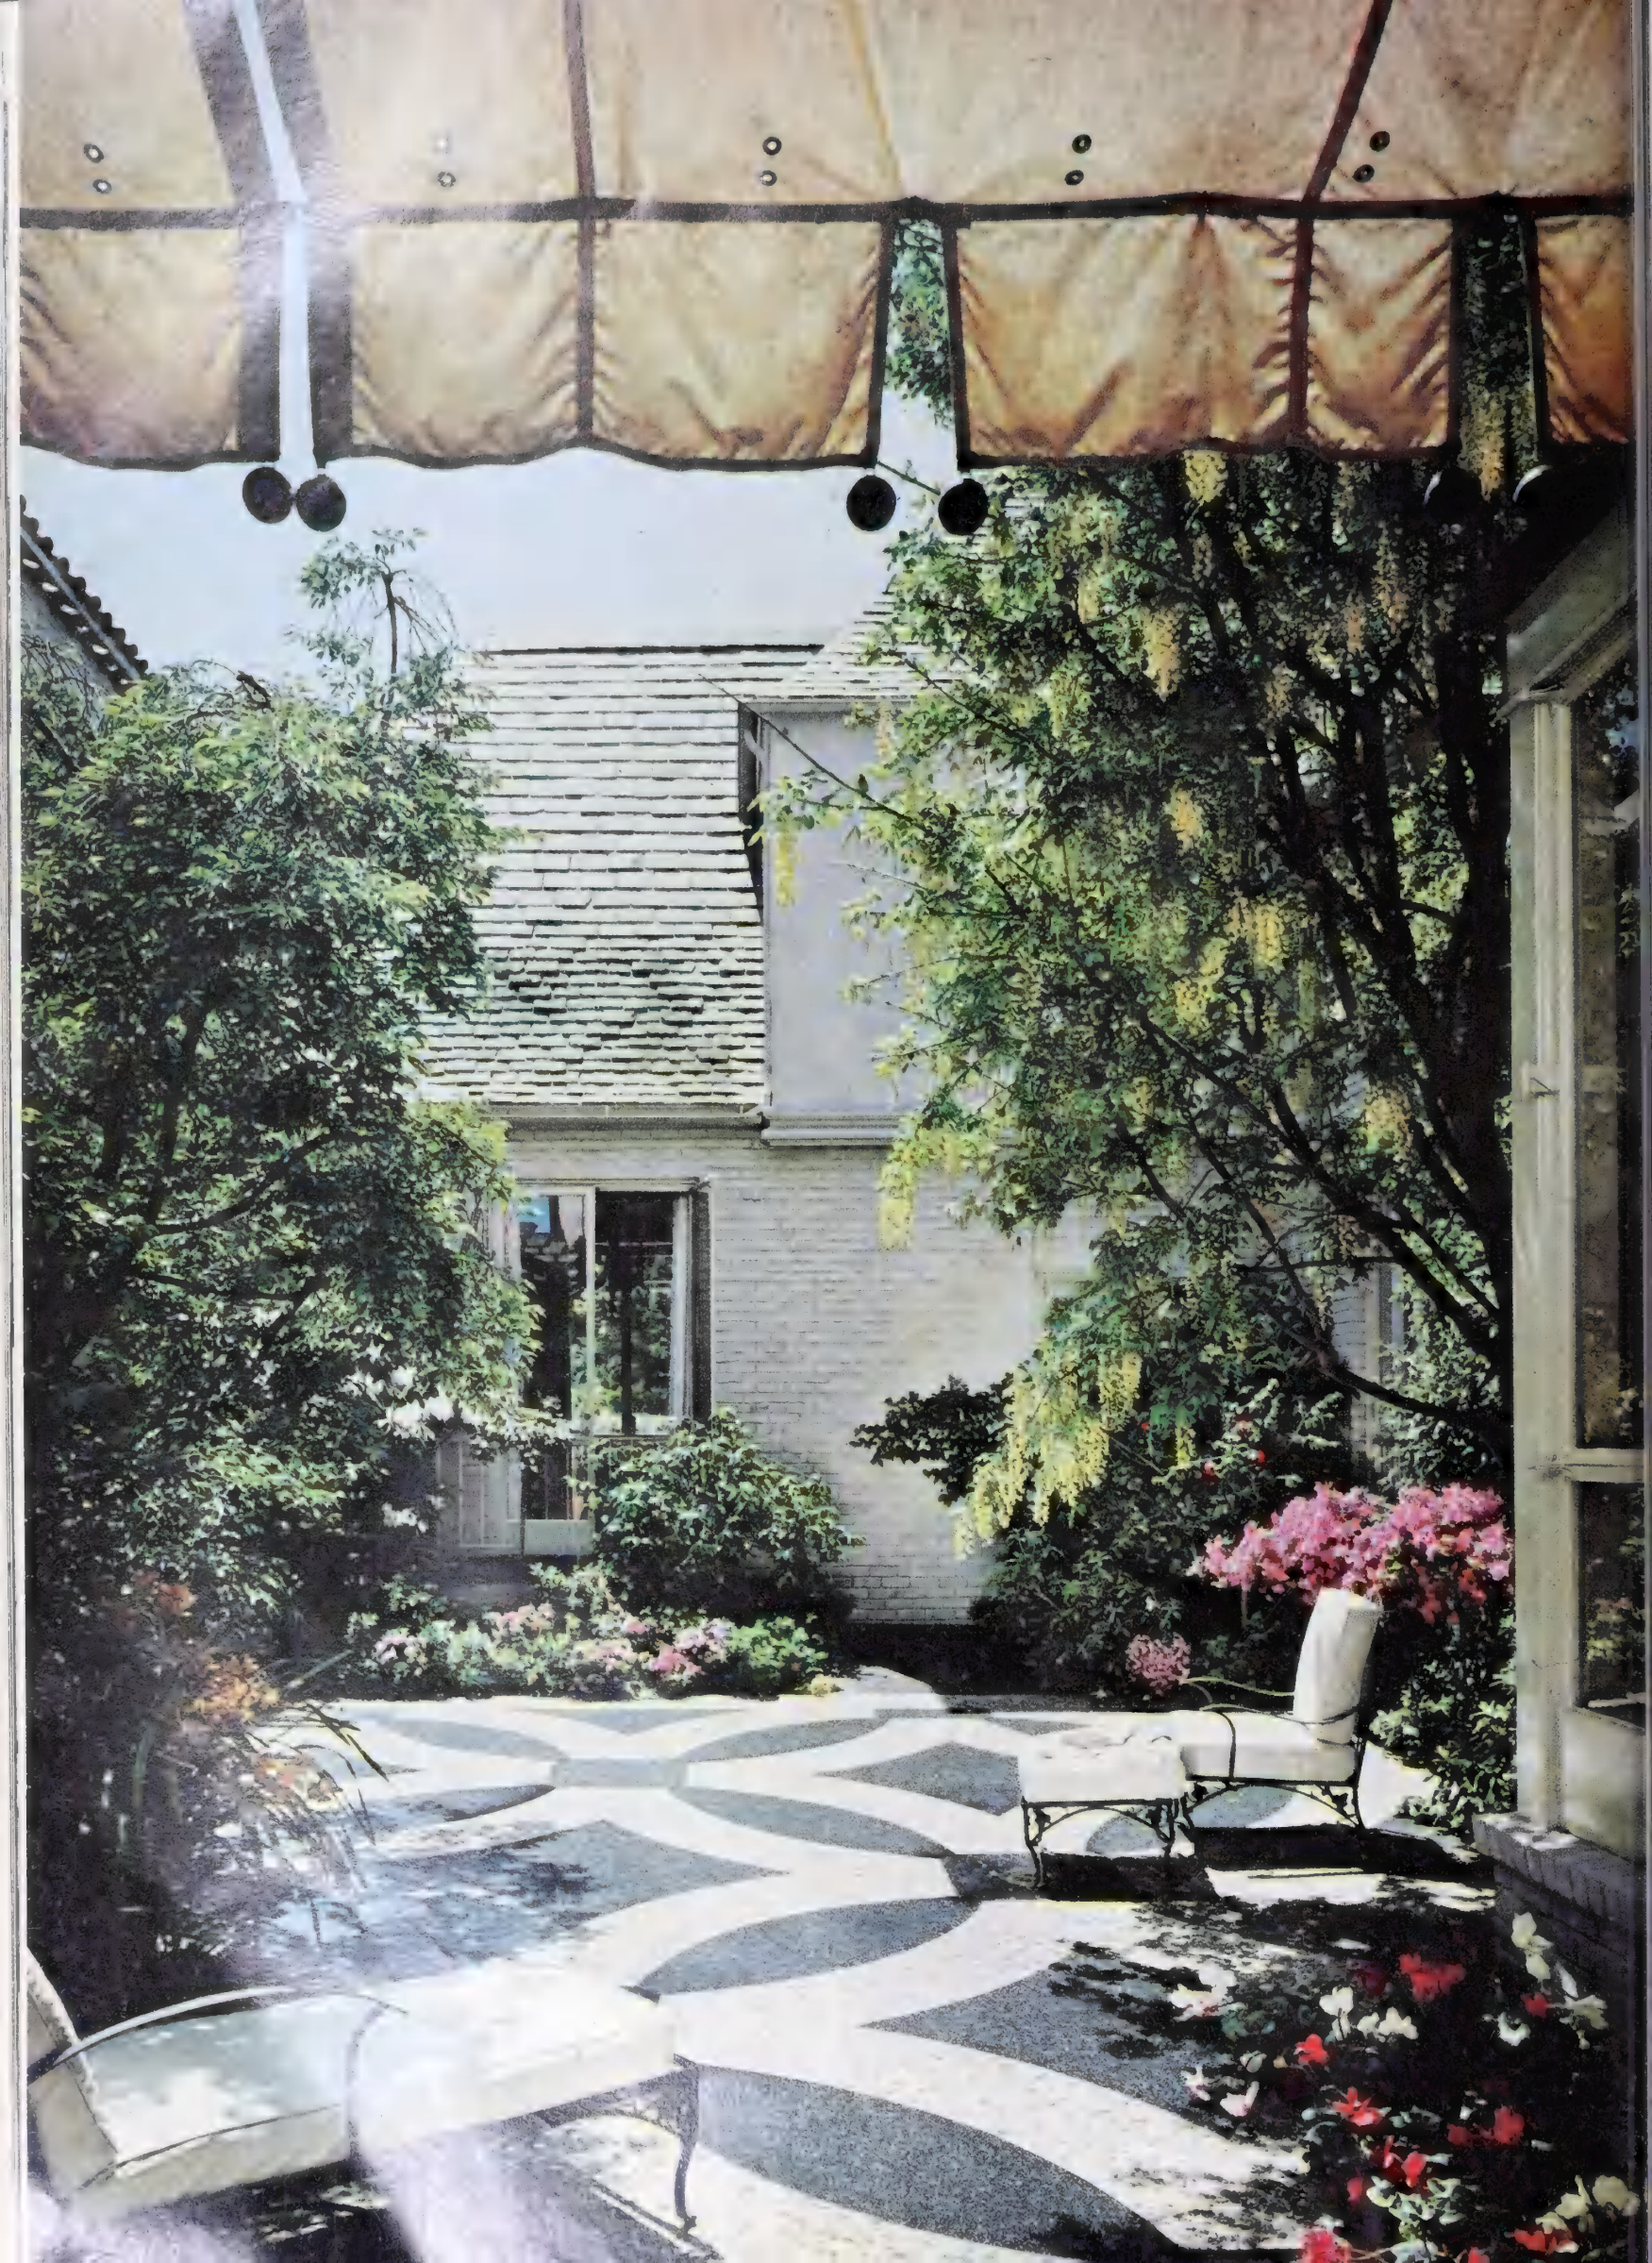

The addition of a fence across the open end of the U (the fourth side of the plan) will give it many of the advantages of an atrium. It completes the enclosure so that the rest of the house can open itself to the court without fear of inspection by neighbors or unexpected intrusion from outside. It restricts the landscaping necessities so that the garden inside the court can be a pleasure, not a chore. It creates a fully enclosed sun pocket that will allow a much longer outdoor living season for the owners. And it does all this for the cost of the fence alone.

In considering the kind of fence to use in such a situation, it is important to remember that you may be cutting off an important source of summer breezes. If this is true, use a louvered or other open-work fence that cannot be seen through, yet provides ventilation.

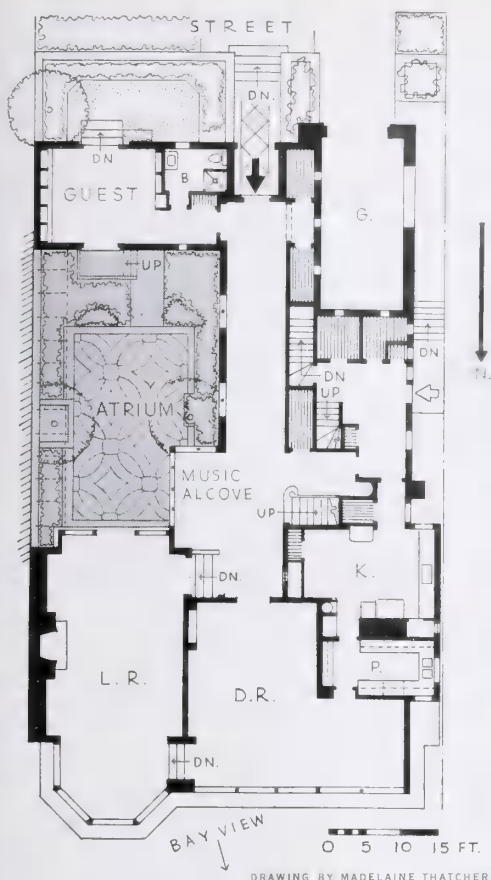

The house seen in the photograph above has achieved the advantages of the atrium in this way. Though the house itself wraps around only three sides of the court, the open end has been closed off with a high fence that has a covered walkway on its far side. This walkway leads to the service entrance, so the fence has a second purpose—to shield the main living areas from service traffic. The court itself is designed as a heavily used living area landscaped for minimum maintenance. Although house had a spectacular view of bay, there was no place to live outdoors comfortably. Now activity revolves around atrium.

● A full-fledged atrium is a new idea in our time and can usually be achieved only in a newly designed house. But the values of atrium living can often be discovered in existing situations. The house shown here is in San Francisco. It was originally built on three sides of a narrow lot, around an old-fashioned garden. As with so many houses of its vintage, there was almost no way to reach the garden and no pleasant place to sit when you got there. In remodeling the house, the garden became the new focus for the old rooms. Glass doors now give access to the court from the two wings, while the glass-enclosed music alcove is almost in line. On the fourth side, a rose-covered trellis softens the blankness of a neighbor's wall.

Tricks to speed up the breeze

CLIMATE
PROJECT

• The really oppressive hot summer weather of any place comes with the same kind of wind; in fact, it is this wind that makes the weather so hot. At least, this is so in that part of the U.S. that has moist-hot summers (see map). This area gets oppressive summer heat whenever the continent-wide weather situation starts feeding tropical sea air into the U.S.—from the Gulf of Mexico, the Caribbean, the waters around the Bahamas. The air comes to you, depending on where you live, as a south wind, or a southeast wind, or a southwest wind.

You probably sometimes get another sort of hot weather that is accompanied by a northwest wind. Then the sky is very clear, the sun is very strong, and the thermometer may go very high. But that kind of summer heat is not so bad, because the air is dry, and because the nights are cool. What makes the eastern heat waves so bad is the moist-warm-hazy heat that comes with a southerly wind.

So, in talking about summer discomfort, in planning a house against summer heat, Easterners really deal with a quite clear-cut problem. About nine out of ten of your really hot oppressive days are exactly alike. On every really hot day the wind comes from the same direction, the sun shines from the same angles, the haze in the air is about the same. Even the time of day that clouds form and disappear, the time of day that the wind rises and dies down again, the time of night that it perhaps changes direction—all that is very much the same for all really hot days.

And that is what makes "Climate Control" possible. For if you take a good hard look at that hot summer, the pattern falls to pieces. It turns out to consist of a sun at such-and-such an angle, and a wind from such-and-such direction, and so on. Then you can shade off the sun and scoop in the wind, and presently your summer is much cooler—even without adding a fan or refrigeration. Then you can turn a lot of marginal weather into comfortable weather with natural ventilation and save your mechanical refrigeration aids for the real sizzlers.

From Bryan, Texas, where heat is heat, comes some hot news about cooling breezes. Briefly, it's this: You can now build a cool, well-ventilated house simply by following a few rules and avoiding a few common faults. And even in an existing house, you can get a better hot-weather breeze by a few simple tricks with windows.

All this has been discovered at Texas A. & M. That famous school is one of those (the University of Wisconsin is another) that makes a special effort to be directly useful to the people of the state: improving Texas cattle, Texas school buildings, Texas oil wells and water wells, and so on down to Texas houses.

It was natural for William W. Caudill, Research Architect, to start this research with ventilation. Summer heat is so fierce and so moist in the Gulf Coast plains that breeze is the most important comfort factor. He and his associates worked mainly with the wind-tunnel, the research tool of the airplane designer. They exposed a model to a wind, which was made visible by smoke streams. Then they checked their results in full-scale houses. And so, under carefully controlled conditions, you can experiment with shapes and angles to your heart's content.

We'll report the Caudill findings in the order in which they can be most easily explained. Some are tricks you can use right now, even in a rented apartment. Some require building a new house from scratch. They're all worth knowing.

Their first finding: The breeze through a room does not necessarily flow in a straight line from the "in" window to the "out" window. (By "in" window, we mean the window where the breeze comes in—or a door, or a louvered opening.) In many rooms the air flows around sideways in a curve. In even more rooms it goes high overhead. In any case it is likely to miss the people in the room. This strange be-

The principle behind this graceful roof causes a natural forced draft through the space below by literally sucking air out of the top. A traditional form developed in the East Indies, its benefits will serve in any hot, humid climate. Drawing at left shows how double roof keeps inside ceiling cool.

Expanding warm air between roofs creates upward current. This draft within the roof causes suction over center opening in ceiling, drawing a continuous flow of air through and out of the space below. Tremendous overhangs provide deeply shaded living and work area open on all sides.

through your house

By WOLFGANG LANGEWIESCHE

havior of air has to do with such factors as wind direction, the size and shape of the walls, pitch of the ceiling, roof overhang. It's the kind of effect that is easy to explain once you know what it is—but very hard to predict. The point is that the breeze is probably missing you in your present house or apartment. Quite likely, you can make your summers much cooler simply by making sure that the breeze doesn't miss you.

How do you find out? Investigate the air flow with cigarette smoke. If the breeze goes around you, why can't you simply rearrange the furniture and put the people where the breeze is? If the breeze flows too high overhead (the more frequent case), you'll have to do some more fundamental doctoring, which I shall now explain.

Their second finding: Just where the breeze goes in a room depends entirely on the location and design of the "in" window. The location of the "out" window—high or low, to one side or the other of the room—is much less important than everybody had thought. The "in" window has a strong directive effect upon the breeze in the room. So if the breeze misses the people, it's the "in" window that must be doctored.

Their third finding: Since it is so common for the breeze to cross a room too high, doing nobody any good, it follows that the "in" windows are commonly set too high. Of course, there are reasons. The main one is that the window serves a triple purpose—to let in a breeze, to let people look out, and to put decent daylight on desks, kitchen counters, etc. For the third purpose, you want them high. So most windows are middling-high.

Of late, many architects have begun to divorce the three functions. They get working light by skylights, and breeze

Some people need this article more than others

Summer ventilation is no particular problem here. Keep the house from heating up by shading as much of it as possible. Shade walls with wide roof overhang, whole house by planting. Use reflective roof.

through louvered openings set between floor and window: you can see this is a good idea. So for the best delivery of the breeze you want a low-set window, with a low sill line. This is just the opposite of popular thinking, which for hot climates favors high ceilings and tall windows that very likely have high sill lines.

But you can't move your windows down in your present house or apartment. You may have trouble getting them low enough even in a new house. Therefore you may want to try and make the breeze from the window blow downward a little.

Main room, left, shows ventilation between ceiling boards. Deep overhang, above, permits openness even in heavy rains. Canvas-roll blinds block driving storms. Shutters and louvers screen bedroom.

What research shows about airflow

When wind flows around a house, it builds up pressures in some places, suctions in others. Lively ventilation in the house comes by taking air in at place of pressure, letting it out at place of suction.

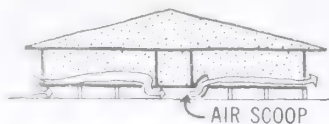

Suction areas are often found at the side of a house, and what we call cross-ventilation does not necessarily mean that the inlet and the outlet of air flow have to be exactly opposite each other.

Architects have recently tried to increase the air flow through a house by special devices. Three systems (overhangs, deflectors, shed roofs) were tested in a wind tunnel and found to make no difference.

This illustration shows that the inlet window determines where the breeze will travel inside a room. The exact location of the outlet window does not have much effect upon the direction of the airflow.

Ventilation does not have to be by windows only. Two unusual ways to get air into a house and out again are: 1. Outlets in the floor in windward rooms. 2. Intake scoops in the floor in lee-side rooms.

Wind scoops on the roof to scoop in a breeze are not a new idea. They have long been used in houses. The tool does revolve so that it always faces into the wind has long proved to be the most satisfactory.

TRICKS TO SPEED UP THE BREEZE THROUGH YOUR HOUSE

Their fourth finding confirms that: You can direct the breeze down by deflector vanes. Drawings show this and tell the whole story better than any words could. These vanes might be louvers added to the window, like Venetian blinds, or you could use the window glass itself as directional vanes, as with жалюзи. If you use louvers or Venetian blinds, you have one basic problem. To keep out sunshine, sky glare, and possible showers, you want to turn them upward; but if you use them to bring down the breeze, you want them turned downward. This means that in the daytime you can't do both jobs at the same time: keep sun and sky glare out and bring the breeze down. Better to use outside devices, like awnings, to do the shading, and leave your windows with the single task of breeze control. Then you can tilt your louvers down either day or night—particularly at night—because you want to force the breeze down to the level of the bed.

About using the window itself as a louver, Caudill and company make an interesting point. Many types of windows in commercial production today have some kind of directive effect. Casement windows can deflect the breeze sidewise. Louver windows can deflect it downward—or can be set to do so providing the louvers have a 110° pivoting capacity. (Many brands do not, so shop this point carefully.) Caudill says: Don't pick your window type just at random. Pick for each window or for each side of the house the type of window that does the job that needs to be done. Maybe on one side of the house you want to scoop the breeze sidewise into the rooms: Use casement windows. On another side maybe you want to push the breeze downward: Use a window type that will do that. It can very well be done by the жалюзи-type window with glass louvers. Then there is the awning type. This window has many advantages, but unfortunately most deflect the air upward. Now one manufacturer, in response to the Texas research, is developing an awning window that will swing out and finally up, thus becoming a down-deflector. Main idea is that every type of window does something. Pick the type that will give you the greatest manipulatability of air.

Their fifth finding: If you want the breeze to come in at one end of the room, you've got to let it out at the other end; that's really obvious. Yet, people keep building rooms with great big openings to let in the breeze—and small openings to let the breeze out. This is the most common fault of houses from a ventilation viewpoint. The small exit chokes off the airflow.

With outlet doubled (lower), breeze goes 25% faster at A, 25% at B, and 43% at C.

The "out" opening of a room should be bigger. Get this point clear: Direction of airflow in the room depends on the inlet windows, but amount of flow depends on the outlet!

Now the trouble is that the average house doesn't go clear through from front to back: the air flows into one room, then through a door into a hallway, then through another door into another room, and then out through a window. And the doors, even if open, choke off the flow. So Caudill advocates louvered partitions between rooms. Of course he's talking from a part of the country with an extra-long and extra-hot summer and no serious winter. For many parts of the U.S. it might not be worth the loss of privacy and the possible winter drafts. But then again, you could set solid panels over these louvered openings in winter, much as you use storm sash over windows.

Their sixth finding: In the evening the breeze is often slack, and you wish for more breeze. Well, you can get more breeze very simply by closing windows. On the side of the house where the air flows out, leave everything open. But on the side where the air comes in, close everything except one window. In front of that one, then, you put your chair, or your dining table, or your bed. Now all the air that flows through the house has to squeeze through that one small hole. The total air flow through the house is less than it would be with everything open, but the flow through that one window is more—air flows where it counts—on you. The air speeds up at this squeeze point.

This is an application of an aeronautical law: "The smaller the hole, the faster the flow." The fancy title for it is The Venturi Effect. You could also call it The Squirt Idea. Works with flowing water, too. Rivers speed up in the narrows. Little boys put a finger on the water tap to get a small but very fast flow and make a wonderful farflung mess. The nozzle of a garden hose works the same way.

Their seventh finding: This is practically the same idea, with an attic fan used instead of natural breeze. To get immediate comfort from an attic fan, close all the windows in the house except one. Then put your chair, bed, table right in front of that one. Now, as the attic fan pulls air out of the house, new air has to rush in through that one window, and it comes in as quite a breeze. If you opened more windows, you would get less breeze through each.

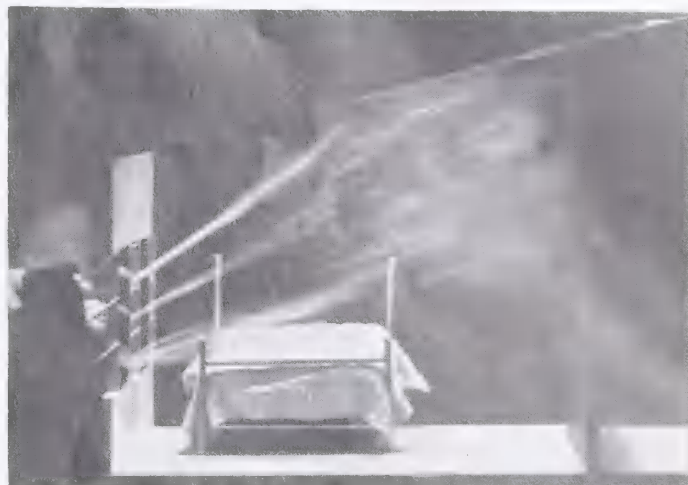

This is not, of course, the official idea of an attic fan or exhaust fan. The official idea is to suck hot daytime air out of the top of the house so that cool night air will flow in at bottom and will gradually well up inside the house, filling it with coolness. So, though it may seem wrong to close the house up on a hot evening, try it, one room at a time.

Their eighth finding: You can get more breeze through a house by careful planning. Put the outlet openings into locations where they not merely let the air out, but suck it out.

Here is the general idea. As air flows over and around a building (or around any other thing, as, for instance, the wing of an airplane), it sets up pressures on some places and suction on others. (A suction on the rounded top-surface of the wing is what holds an airplane up.) On the front of the house—I mean the side that faces the wind—there is a pressure. On the sides of the house there may be suction. On the back of the house, too, there is usually suction. Now, if you can locate your big "out" openings in places with extra-strong suction, you'll get extra breeze, and speeded-up breeze through the house!

Strong suction areas are quite likely to be on the side of the house. "Cross ventilation." (Please turn to page 114)

Crucial points are height of window and its ability to send breeze across bed

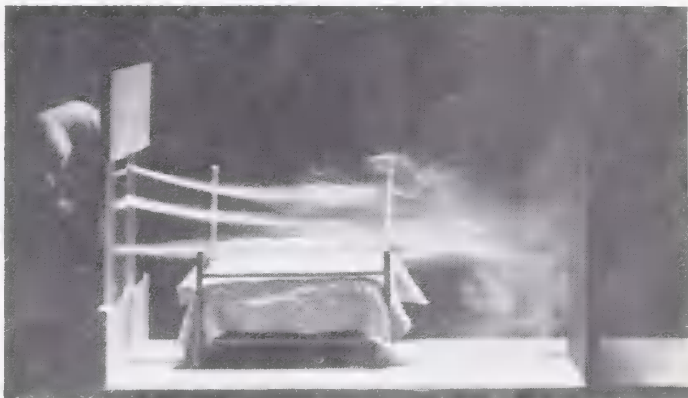

This shows the method of investigation used at the Texas Engineering Experiment Station, where model houses were put into wind tunnels. Smoke stream blown in from outside makes airflow visible.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY ROLAND CHATHAM

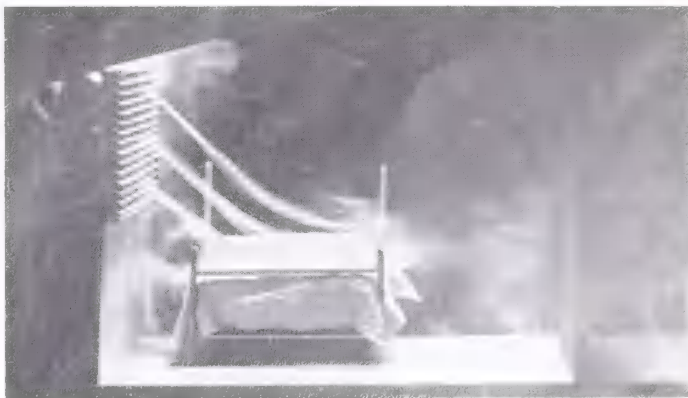

Typical fault: Window here is too high, so breeze misses the bed entirely. Sleeper lies in a pocket of dead air. Deflecting vanes installed in the window would help remedy its high location—but not entirely.

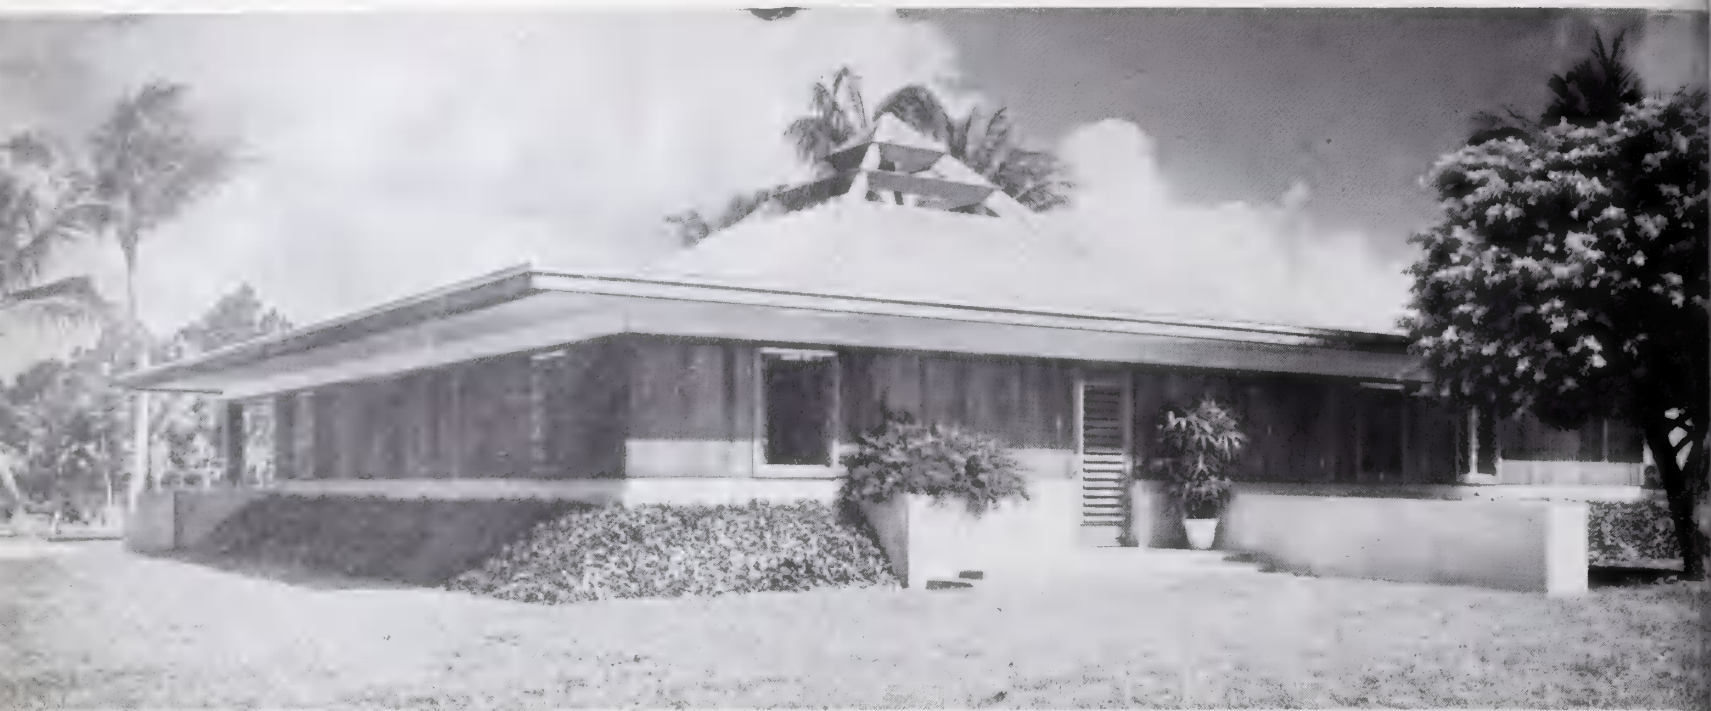

Better position of window would be just above level of the mattress. Breeze then reaches person on bed. A taller window, with lower part openable, is how situation would be handled in average house.

A more practical remedy: deflector vanes built into the window itself. Jalousie-type windows, with enough flexibility so they can slant inward and downward, are ideal in climates where they are practical.

ALL PHOTOGRAPHS OF THIS HOUSE BY EZRA STOLLER ASSOCIATES, COURTESY POPULAR MECHANICS

The first thing you notice about this house is the open pyramid peak of its roof. Next you may observe how remarkably few windows it has. The two are related. Both work together to keep the interior of the house breezy and comfortable when most people are seeking relief with mechanical air conditioning. The secret is, the house is really not short of windows. But they are interior ones, facing an interior atrium under that open pyramid peak. By having these big, unimpeded outlets for breeze and only small intake openings, the house sets up a suction that invites cooling breezes in and out.

How an atrium can increase summer comfort

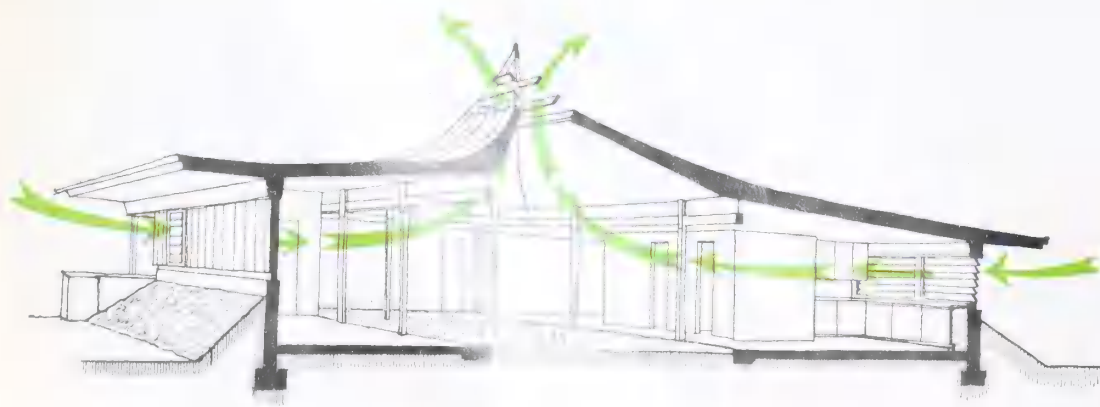

The wind is loath to enter a space where it will have trouble getting out. This Florida house has several conditions that invite the wind to enter briskly when wanted ● Houses in warm-moist climates could be made quite comfortable if the outside breeze could be made to flow through them willingly. Particularly is this so in the coastal regions of Florida, where the winds are quite positive and brisk during the summer months.

But winds are like shy animals—they don't like to enter unless there is an easy exit. So the trick in getting a breezy house is to think more about giving the winds large and plentiful openings to escape through. This means the exit holes must be as large as or larger than the entry holes.

This Florida house does an excellent job in providing a way for the wind to exit from the house, thanks to a partially roofed atrium. The doors leading to the atrium provide 538 square feet of openings, as against 176 square feet of openings in the outside walls. The opening at the top of atrium is 178 square feet and occurs nearly seven feet above the ceilings of the rooms. This hole is the final exit point for the wind, of course, and the conditions leading to it are very similar to the flue of a chimney. One of the world's most efficient ventilation devices, a chimney sucks air up and out with no mechanical aid.

So the ratio of entrance openings to exit openings is very favorable in this house. For no matter how the jalousies on the outside walls are manipulated (Please turn the page)

The semi-roofed atrium works like a chimney. Its draft is created by the natural tendency of warm air to rise and of winds to create points of pressure and suction as they pass a house. Just as a hose squirts more forcibly as you shut down its nozzle, so the breeze becomes stronger as you reduce window openings, providing outlets are bigger.

(and assuming the doors to the garden atrium are all open) there will always be bigger exit openings than entrance openings. For some of the outside windows will always be acting as exits too.

Another favorable condition is the fact that all the outside windows are jalousies, meaning there are a lot of degrees of opening possible. Therefore you can narrow down the opening on the windward side of the building, which would cause the wind to speed up more as it entered.

This speeding up of the wind as it enters a narrow opening might be called the "breezeway principle." In the hot, tropical places of the world—whether they have dry or moist climates—you see the people living and sleeping in the doorways and hallways of (Please turn the page)

The house is only one-room wide, and the interior wall of most of its rooms can be thrown open completely. A breeze entering almost any exterior window has a direct, clear route through the room and out and up through the atrium. In chilly weather, or when air conditioning is in use, all doors to the atrium are shut. The peak opening is never closed.

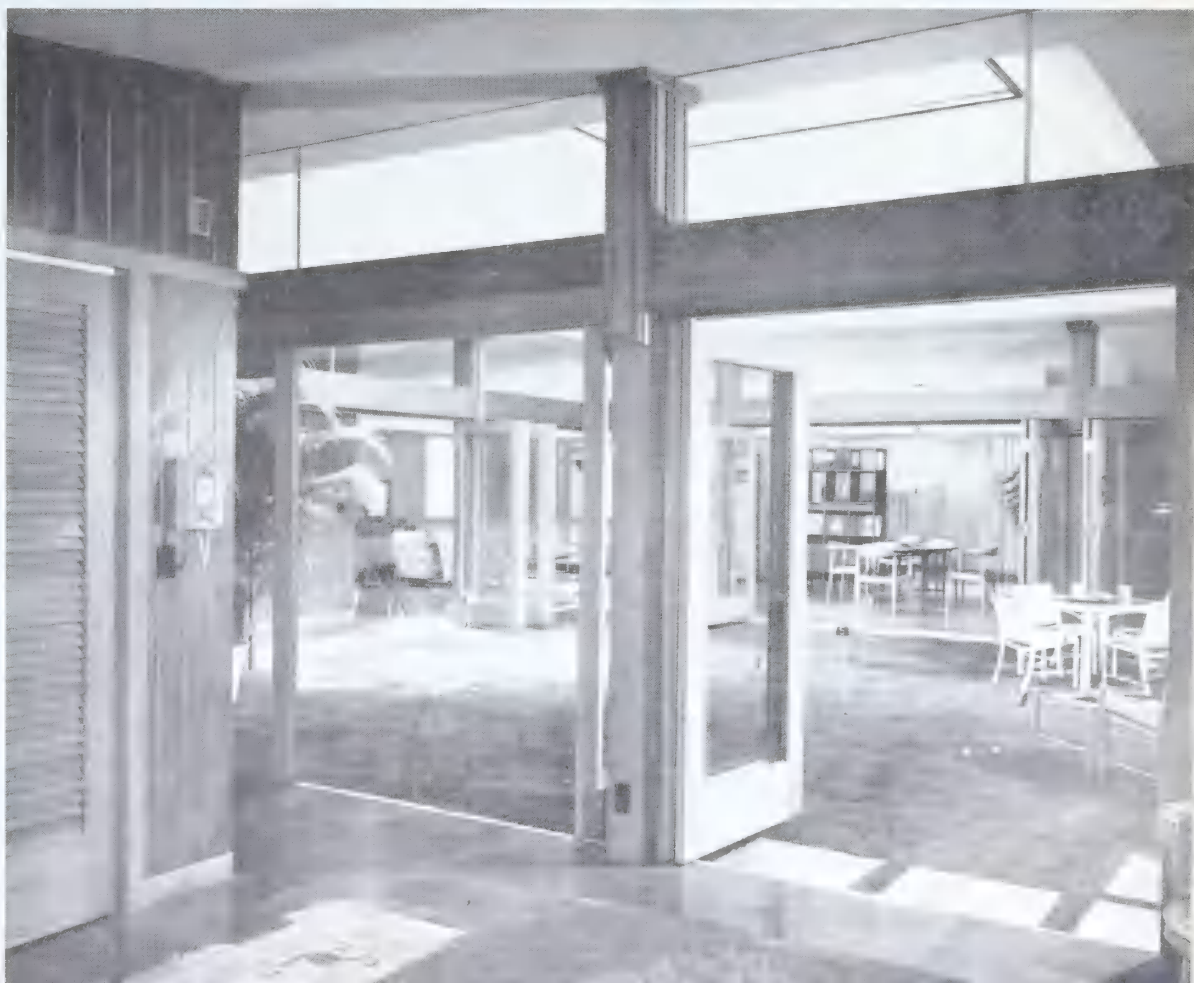

The atrium gives every room in the house an outdoor feeling and makes every room seem bigger. Bugs never trouble it, as its open-to-the-sky peak is screened. The atrium ceiling itself serves as a protective overhang for all interior areas, shading all walls and permitting natural ventilation even during hard rainstorms. Here the atrium is planted to grass, serves as a practice putting green.

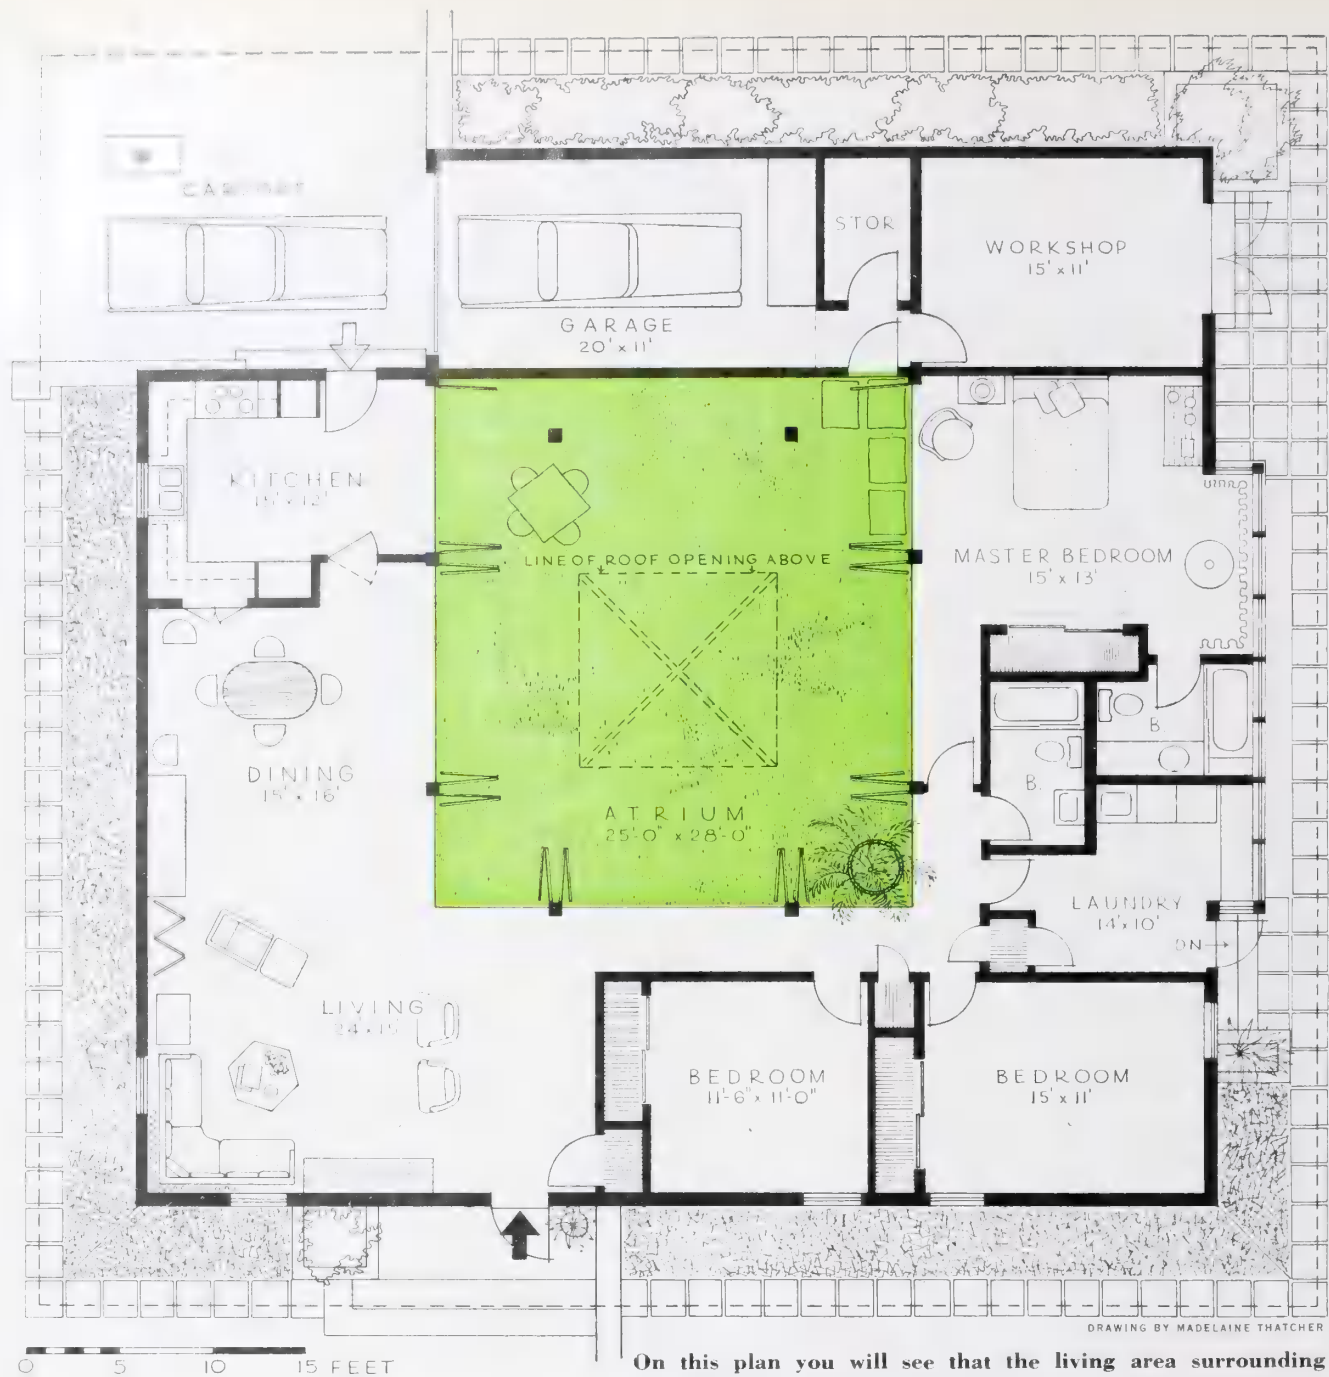

How much the atrium adds to the optical size of the rooms is clearly shown in the photo above. When you realize that these folding doors are swung open onto an outdoor area and that air is funneled up its sloping ceiling as it would be up a chimney, you can appreciate how much the atrium can speed up the ventilation of every room in house.

The sweet smells of growing things and the refreshing air of the outdoors are built into your house when you have an atrium. Visualize the cooling effect of sprinkling this lawn on a hot, parched day. Rain, of course, falls through the always-open pyramidal structure above it.

On this plan you will see that the living area surrounding the atrium is one-room wide. Breezes do not have to blunder from room to room, seeking a way out. They have a direct way out through the spacious hole in the roof of the atrium. It doesn't replace air conditioning. You still need air conditioning for times when there is no breeze at all, but this system lets you use natural ventilation and benefit from it for more days and nights of the year than would otherwise be possible.

House has other climate-control features. Earth embankment 40 percent up sidewalls helps keep sun from penetrating walls. Ground cover shades the earth. Together cuts build-up of heat.

The 5-foot-wide overhang of the roof on all four sides helps shade upper walls from the sun. It keeps walls from becoming radiators and releasing stored heat indoors long after sunset.

The kitchen can serve diners as conveniently in the atrium as in the dining room. Note the direct blow-through that is possible from the kitchen window to the opening in the atrium's roof. The rising height of the atrium, with opening at highest peak, adds to the chimney effect, speeds up breeze.

If there is a breeze, you will get it in the atrium, even though it is enclosed on all sides, but the breeze must not go through rooms too high if it is to do you any good. Glass transom around atrium perimeter tends to deflect air down to the level where people are.

their buildings. Why? Because that is where there is the most breeze, where it is the most comfortable. So it follows that the breeziest spots in this house will be immediately in front of the jalousie windows, which is where one would want to sit, eat, or sleep. Also it follows that one would want to turn the louvers of the jalousies so they slant downward, to direct the breeze toward the floor. (Always buy louver windows that have at least 110-degree range of movement, or you will not be able to slant them downward.)

The total shape of this house, reacting to outside air movement, causes a low pressure area over the atrium and thus pulls air out of the house through its roof opening. The curving roof line meets the breezes in such a way that whirlpooling action outward is set up, which creates an outward and upward suction at the opening.

All in all, this house shows the most savvy about wind performance of any we have ever seen.

How to lick the limitations of a narrow lot

When you have a lot that's narrow, you must use every architectural device you can find to overcome its handicap. This house does just that

By DAVID X. MANNERS

When a house crowds its lot lines, how can you have a decent entry? It's done here by placing the entry at the side of the house in its own pleasantly secluded garden. A wooden grille shades glass wall at the entry, preserves privacy within.

● The idea of building a house on the waterfront can have great appeal. A house there can let you live in an atmosphere of a year-around vacation. That's one reason why waterfront property is so high and why, if you can afford a lot at all, it is likely to be only a skinny shadow of the one you dreamed of having.

Don't let this discourage you. The asset that lies at your back door will make up for the property's lack of width. You'll have the whole world of sea and sky at your pleasure. More than that, narrowness is no real problem for an architect who knows the secret of designing on the diagonal. He can make much out of little. Consider the house shown on these pages.

This house, fronting on Puget Sound, is on a lot only 50' wide. Zoning restrictions, requiring a 5' setback on each side, reduced the available building width to 40'. Yet within that space, Architect Ralph Anderson created a house with a living area over 50' long and a floor area of over 2300 square feet. He did it by using the diagonal, not once or twice, but three times. He zigzagged his way across the lot, as you can see in the plan on this page, squeezing use out of every available inch. As an added bonus, he gained a water view for almost every room in the house.

This is a house designed for the waterfront. But its basically good principles would work on any narrow lot. It is essentially a small house, lacking in fussiness and expensive details. To the outside world it shows little of what it is. No windows look out on its street side. If it impresses passersby at all, it is by its understatement, modesty, and quiet good taste. It appears to be all of one material—roof and walls are western (Please turn the page)

← The zigzagging plan makes the most of this narrow site, avoids any feeling of being cramped or hemmed in. It also orients the house to the view, so that the water is visible from every major area of the house. The house turns a blank wall to the street, creates four separate outdoor areas within its 50' by 180' site. Not shown here are the bedrooms, which are located above the carport-study-utility wing, and a pool-recreation room, which is below the living-room area.

The house is all glass on its view side, as you see in the photo above, and it has much to look at, as shown by the photos below. Swimming pool, which adjoins a recreation room (it is seen below living room), is heated for all-weather use.

The deck off the family-dining-room area extends these spaces and brings the outdoors to the same floor level as indoors. Deck is "apetong," a locally inexpensive variety of mahogany.

How can you say you have a "narrow" lot when it funnels out to a wide world of sailing, skiing, skin-diving, and fishing? Outdoor living here is on three levels and has many aspects.

Windows (above) are of gray glass. They cut the glare if you're facing the western sun. When other houses, with ordinary glass, are drawing their curtains, you can still enjoy the view here and benefit from the extension of space it offers.

red cedar. This unity of materials gives it cohesiveness, makes the house pull together as one, makes it bigger. The eye sees something continuous and large, rather than broken up and small. Only after you pass through a garden of ferns and bamboo and approach the front door do you notice that a second material has been used in the construction—native stone.

The simple palette of materials used for the exterior of the house continues inside. Walls and ceilings are western red cedar. (It's a local wood and a good buy.) Fireplaces are the same local stone you saw outside.

The house turns at an angle at the middle of the living room, and as it turns creates a cutting pattern of planes, a feeling of extending space, leading your eye to the magnificent water view beyond. You'll pass (turn the page)

This cozy little corner near the kitchen works in two ways. When you are in the kitchen, you feel the corner is a part of the kitchen. When you are in the dining room or the living room, the corner seems like an extension of those areas.

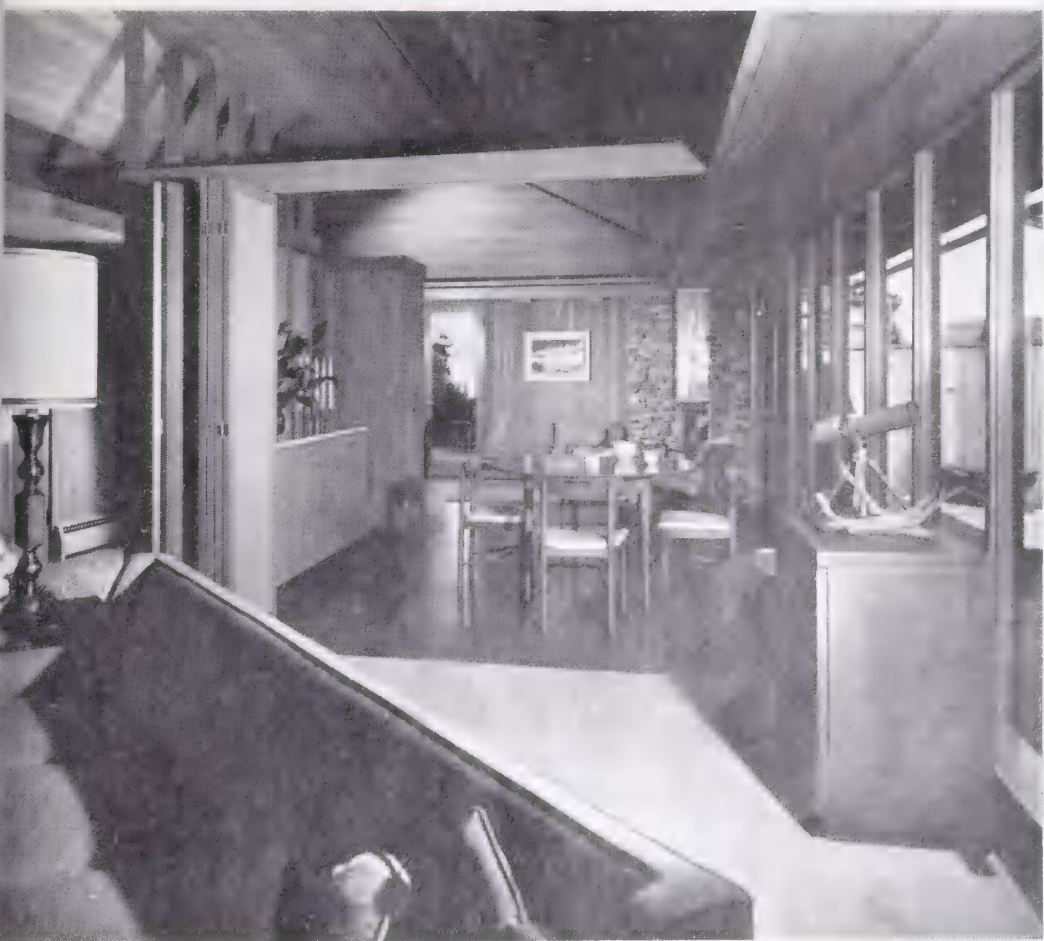

When weather is chill and rainy, you want to turn away from the outdoors. The fireplace then becomes your focus of interest. This is your view of the end of the living room opposite that shown in the photograph at the top of the facing page.

Unity in materials and design means a bigger house. Entry floor is same textured concrete as front walk. Wood-strip grille of window repeats in the wall dividing the entry from living area.

Interior space is most useful when it is flexible. Above, living room is separated from the dining-family-room arrangement by folding doors. Such separation is essential part of open plan.

Here the folding doors are open and the full 50' length of the living area is unbroken. This is one of the long diagonals that takes the sting out of the lot's basic narrowness.

A house gains space by having an open kitchen, but kitchen doesn't have to be in view. Here, kitchen is around corner from living-dining area. Screen completes its concealment.

see a deck, a pool, Puget Sound, and distant hills. All seem to be the private domain of the house, as the 50' lot fans out to encompass them. You'd never know narrowness had been a problem.

This house also gains space by its simplicity. Folding doors screen the living room from the dining area. Because these doors match the grilles on the front windows, they create a continuity that enlarges the limited space. The deck of the lighting trough in the living room continues on into the dining area and beyond it to a family lounge adjoining the kitchen, tying all together.

The kitchen is open, though it can be partially screened by folding doors (again matching the living-room and front-window grilles). It looks out upon an enclosed play yard and, like almost every other room in the house, has a view of the wonderful waterfront. It never feels shut in.

Lilies are unexcelled for summer-long colorful bloom in the garden or on the patio. They usually are grown in garden soil but can also be grown out-of-doors in pots and placed in bloom at strategic places. # The trouble-free glory of Lilies

Lilies, not diamonds, are a gardener's best friend. Their dazzling beauty and proved durability make them a prime investment

● Don't let the delicate beauty and fragile appearance of the lily's flower lead you astray. For while these are among the lily's features, the plant as a whole and the bulb from which it grows are rugged. For most people in most climates, the lily takes less time and attention than almost any other flower. Some of the species lilies lack adaptability to certain climatic conditions and soils and consequently are difficult to grow in them. And some are not completely winter-hardy. But many are so adaptable to almost any situation that they last for many years. These seem to be nearly indestructible. You should limit yourself to them—as we have done in the accompanying table (page 111).

In addition to choosing your lilies from species types, which originally were collected from the wild for garden cultivation, you may now select from a vast and increasing array of hybrids. By selecting and crossing the best of the species, hybridizers have opened up a new lily era. Jan de Graaff and other individual plant breeders in the United States, scientists with the horticultural laboratories of the United States Department of Agriculture at Beltsville, Maryland, and lily hybridizers in Canada and Australia have brought about the new era. Many of their creations have been available for several years. Further outstanding developments can be expected in the future.

Their hybrids are easy to grow because they gained vigor from their crossing; this gives them added stamina and sturdiness. They tend to have stronger stalks and their flower stems stand up better against wind and rain. They are inclined to flower more freely, and new blossom types have been created. Rainbowlike shades and hues heretofore unknown in lilies are now available, and the flowering season has been extended somewhat.

Nevertheless, hybrids should never be selected to the exclusion of the species. For while the hybrids may be stronger and larger-flowered, many of the species have a delightful delicacy, an intangible, ethereal quality, and come in delicate and engaging colors that can be utilized for subtle harmonies. Species lilies are needed, too, for getting a long season of bloom.

There are about a hundred known species of lilies, and these are native to Europe, Asia, and North America. Of this total, about sixty species are in cultivation in the United States. Those that are the most vigorous, easy to grow, and most adaptable to a wide range of soil and climatic conditions within the United States are included in our table. All of the hybrids that are listed in it of course meet these easy-to-grow requirements. A few of the species lilies are footnoted as needing a protective winter mulch. Otherwise, all included in the table are believed to be so hardy that they can stand the rigors of winter in all of the United States except perhaps for a few of our coldest areas as in Minnesota and Wisconsin, extreme northern New England, and at some of the higher elevations (as in the Rocky Mountains). Consequently, the listed lilies need not be lifted for protective winter storage except perhaps in these few areas. This means that they are a low-maintenance gardening material, which even further enhances their desirability for use in your garden.

The one foremost requirement of all lilies—species and hybrids alike—is that they be planted in a garden that's well drained. For when planted in soil that's likely to stay waterlogged after a rain, they will rot in the ground and disappear. But when given good soil drainage they display amazing longevity. These flowers bloom more profusely year after year, and their bulbs multiply in a very rewarding manner. By selecting varieties that will give a succession of bloom, you may have lilies (Please turn to page 110)

● Vines have a hundred uses and hundreds of forms. There are vines that can be grown for quick shade or screening. Some are valuable for their showy, fragrant, or colorful flowers, others for their beautiful foliage. There are annual vines, evergreen and deciduous vines, and vines with lovely fall color. There are kinds for sun, for shade, for dry locations, and for wet. There are robust, rampaging vines, slender and delicate vines, and vines that grow a few feet or a hundred.

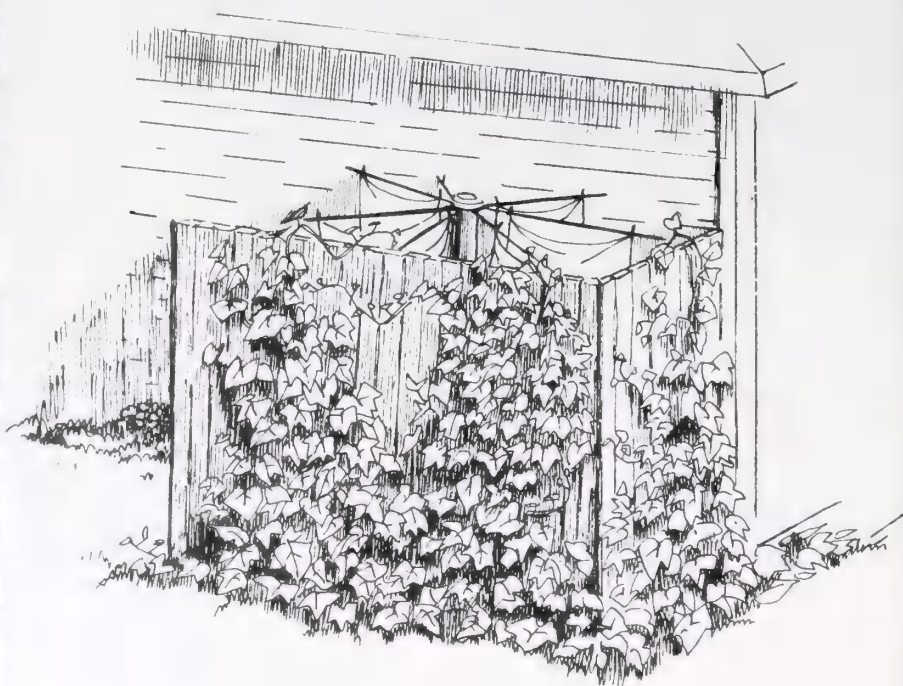

They can be trained on a house, a fence, or a post; on wire, masonry, or trees—and take up very little planting space. They can also be used as ground covers. Those that root wherever their joints touch the ground are often used to prevent soil erosion, and are excellent for covering steep banks. And, best of all, vines are among the easiest of all plants to maintain.

Vines can be trained on walls or fences for surface decoration, if evergreen ones are used. These will lend a pleasant effect all the year around. But even if you use deciduous vines because you enjoy their summer flowering, the design of the bare vines can enhance the surface when the flowers and leaves are gone. Vines can be trained in endless ornamental ways. This flexibility is one of their greatest advantages. Milton was right when he said, "We can direct the clasping ivy where to climb."

If you have a dead tree in your garden, plant some lovely flowering vine on it; an eyesore thus becomes an object of great beauty. I have a little crooked, dead tree in my garden, at the base of which I have just planted a white Chinese wisteria. It should make a perfect tree wisteria. But don't plant a wisteria or any (Please turn the page) of the other vigorous vines near a choice tree. If permitted, it will run wild and although the effect of the vine, when in bloom, will be absolutely beautiful, you'll soon have a grove of wisteria, and you'll very likely kill the tree.

Most vines, except those that cling by themselves to rough surfaces, such as brick, need artificial support of some kind. Vines have several ways of holding onto either a rough or a smooth surface. They do this by little flat discs (Boston ivy, for example): "holdfasts," which are small rootlike areas on each side of the vine (Hydrangea petiolaris, Hedera helix); tendrils, which wind around the support (Clematis, grapes); or by twining stems, which in some vines like bittersweet and Akebia twine from left to right and in others, like honeysuckle, twine from right to left.

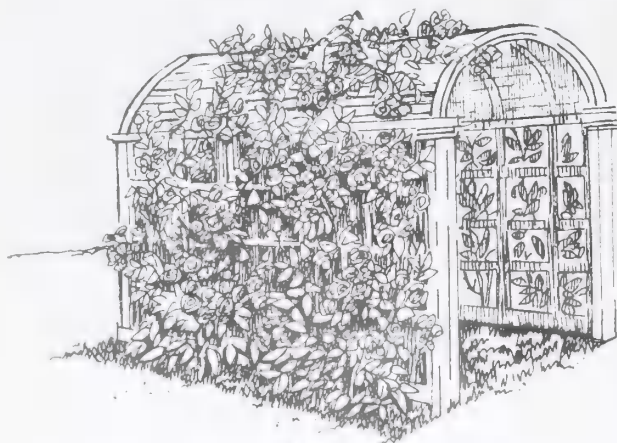

Match the growing habits of your vine to the support it will have in your garden. For instance, don't plant a twining vine or a vine that clings by tendrils on any surface that is flat and smooth.

There are many different vine supports available in garden shops; one sort is a small nail with a flexible lead strip attached which will hold the vine against the support without injuring the stem of the vine. And strong meshed material is now available on which vines can be trained: this probably is best for annual vines.

Don't plant a vine against a living tree where it will cling to and completely cover the tree trunk, for eventually it will smother and kill the tree.

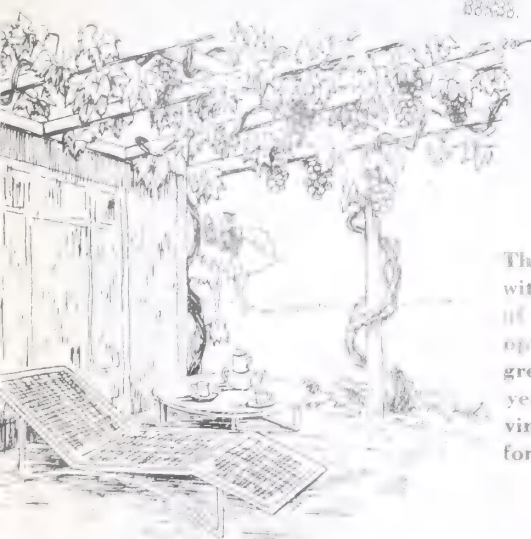

Don't plant English ivy or other vigorous clinging vines directly on or near a shingled house; the runners will sneak under the shingles and eventually pry them loose. It is always well to plant your vines against a background that will bring out the beauty of the flowers and show them off to best advantage. Your house color scheme can be accentuated and made more distinctive by taking some thought when you go vine-shopping.

The many kinds of clematis are perfect as slender showy-flowered vines. There's a large flowering purple clematis and sweet autumn clematis (Clematis paniculata) growing together on a small white support outside my front door, and the effect is always lovely, both in leaf and in flower, and I get double use from the support, as the flowers bloom at different times of the year. Besides, I can enjoy the fragrance of the little white stars of autumn clematis as I go in and out. It is always a pleasant thing to have such a vine near a door, a window, or a terrace, where its fragrance can be enjoyed.

If you want a vine planted against a surface that must be painted occasionally, it should be trained on a trellis hinged at the bottom. In this way the trellis carrying the vine can be swung out of the way while the repainting is being done.

The famous landscape architect, Beatrix Farrand, once planted with great success, in the garden courts of the Harkness Memorial Building at Yale, two vigorous, decorative, and out-of-the-ordinary vines—the wild grape and the cat brier. I don't know if this is the same cat brier (which belongs to the Smilax family and is really a weed) that grows along the roadsides. But my Barnegat Light cat brier has beautiful, rounded, shining leaves, and I often cut it as foliage for bouquets. Leather gloves are needed for this, as it is full of thorns.

England's famous Gertrude Jekyll thought the grape the most beautiful of all climbing plants, particularly harmonious with small and informal houses.

Take care not to choose for a small garden one of the vigorous and rampant growing vines, "the headlong ivy," or silver lace vine (Polygonum suberti). It is said of the latter that it has been known "to try to follow its owner affectionately on his way to the station in the morning." The same warning applies to the perennial morning-glories: "Whoever yields to its charm must forego all other delights in the garden, which it will presently make its own. . . . Delicate plants have been known to wilt when they see it coming." So, if you have a small house and a small garden, select whatever will give you color with delicate and restrained growth.

It is a good idea to cut back some of the vigorous vines severely (even to the ground) every two or three years. Akebia is one of these, and there are others, like honeysuckle, that will benefit by this practice. They will recover quickly and not only bloom better for the operation but look better, as the new growth will be more pleasant to look at than an overgrown, tangled mass of old stems.

A strong vine that clings by twining (such as wisteria) should never be planted on a lightweight wood trellis or lattice; the decorative woodwork will soon be torn to pieces. Give such vines the strongest support possible and plenty of room. Leave the vines with enormous leaves and irrepressible growth for large buildings.

I have had practically no insects or diseases in my garden. I attribute this to the fact that I keep the plants healthy by providing proper growing conditions. The sturdier and more vigorous a plant is, the more resistance it has to pests and disease.

But, even so, vines are notably easy to care for. Dorothy Jenkins, in her book, Vines for Every Garden, says, "Vines as a plant group are uncommonly free from insect pests and disease. Annual vines are especially clean, and the larger majority of perennials seldom have any serious trouble."

When there is trouble, such as scale on Euonymus, aphids on roses, or red spider on ivy or morning-glories, it can be remedied with specific controls, which your garden dealer will be happy to recommend.

Pruning can be kept to a minimum by using plants the right size for their setting. If you simply must have a favorite rampant-grower in small space, plant it in a container—above or below ground—to restrict growth.

Please turn to page 116 for the names and characteristics of fifty-eight excellent vines, and ideas on how to use them.

Vines—perfect to decorate a fence . . .

Most fences look better when they display an appropriate vine. Such a planting is especially welcome on a large plain fence such as this. If you put vines on a painted fence, use those that can be detached and laid aside when repainting.

PHOTOGRAPH BY GLADYS DIESING

. . . or to hold the ground on a slope and reduce labor

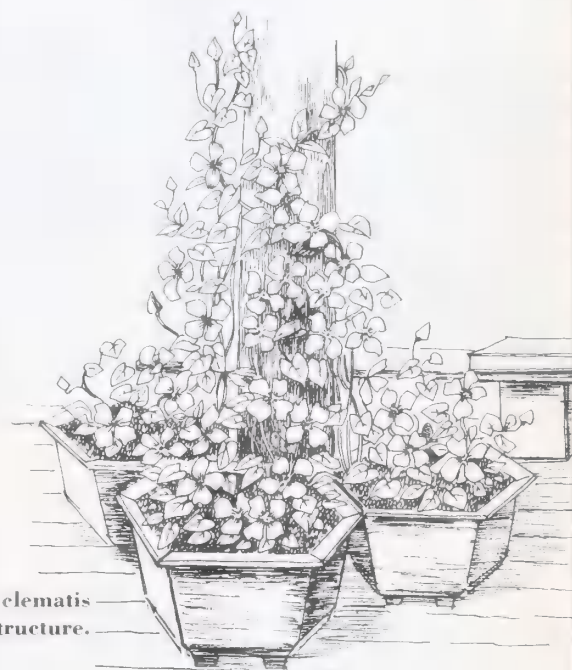

Most vines can be used as ground covers. Some are very fast-growing and will keep weeds from developing on untended ground. Those that root at the nodes are useful on steep slopes to prevent erosion.

Grow vines in containers for complete flexibility and control

Pyracantha in containers protects the foundation.

Container-grown clematis enhances garden structure.

Some strong-growing vines, such as the pyracantha in the top drawing, are very useful to cover an expanse of plain wall. But the roots are strong-growing too, and if underground foundations are porous, the roots can push into holes or cracks and cause trouble. Growing vines in containers solves the problem.

The architectural form of garden construction often needs the softening visual effect of plant material. If the ground is paved or decked, container-grown plants are a good solution. Vines are excellent for adding color and texture to vertical structures (see above). Wood containers should be of rot-resistant material, such as redwood, and as large as reasonable. The more soil area, the less often watering is necessary. See the offer below for plans of containers shown here.

The Poetry of Birds

The flight of doves and the drama of a dovecote will accent
the peace and serenity of your garden

● A little movement enhances a tranquil landscape. The falling water of a cascade or the splashing of a fountain add fascination to an otherwise immobile scene. Instead of a static piece of sculpture in your garden, introduce the graceful motion of birds in flight. Consider keeping doves or pigeons. You will enjoy an ever changing pattern of form and color, while the soothing music of their cooing will serve as a background for your reveries.

This is not in any way a new idea. Our grandparents, the Victorians, went in for ornamental birds in a big way—from peacocks to turtledoves.

In spite of the Victorians' strait-laced reputation, the world of the senses was very real to them. And they were romantic. The beribboned dove with the love letter in his mouth that graced the ornate valentine, and his close relative, the engraved dove, fluttering over the clasped hands on the marriage certificate, were symbols of their propensity toward tenderness.

Victorian gardens abounded in dramatic effects springing from bird-keeping. Dovecotes and aviaries, set among ornamental shrubberies, were the architectural conceits of their pleasure grounds. Doves were especially dear, for here were their darling symbols, acting out their love ballets at close range.

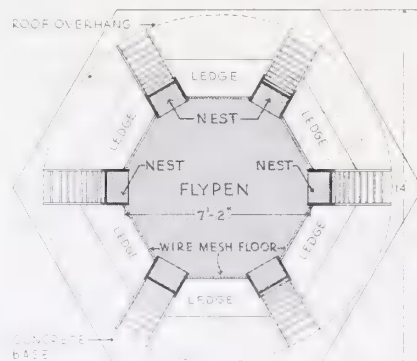

You may not think of yourself as a romantic Victorian, but your garden may suddenly come alive when your dovecote is finished and your doves introduce a new world of beauty and movement into your garden. It is not as difficult as you might think, either. A pair of doves or pigeons may cost as little as $6 and a truly fanciful dovecote like the ones we show here can be built for as little as $1,100.

Don't be afraid of making a boner when you refer to doves as pigeons, and vice versa. It is not as serious as calling a ship a boat. Even the dictionary (Please turn the page) tends to be vague when it says: "Dove: a pigeon, applied specifically to the smaller species as turtledoves, mourning doves, etc." Your dealer will identify the breeds for you. There are hundreds to select from, but you'll probably want to start with some of the more decorative ones, like the strikingly beautiful white dove or the white King pigeon or some of those graceful little fantails. Imagine the play of dappled sunlight on the feathers of the emerald-spotted dove, which has brilliant iridescent green across its back and upper wings.

The graceful beauty of doves has often inspired works of art. The ceramic mourning dove group above and the ptarmigan, right, are the work of contemporary sculptor Edward Marshall Boehm. Both, from Bonwit Teller.

The slim, elegant beauty of these two white doves emphasizes the immobility of the stone lantern. Doves fly in pairs, so they are always recomposing themselves in beautiful groupings.

Pairs of doves and pigeons live compatibly in the same cote. In fact, they tend to live more harmoniously together than with members of their own species. The dove, that century-old symbol of peace, is, paradoxically, rather jealous. It is better not to house more than one pair of the same species together. The jealousy doesn't seem to extend to members of other species. Of course, dispositions vary even in doves, but you will be able to judge during the first two weeks whether your various pairs are going to mix well. Pigeons have been known to pick on doves when the doves have unwittingly pre-empted their nest, but then, people have been known to pick on (Please turn to page 115)

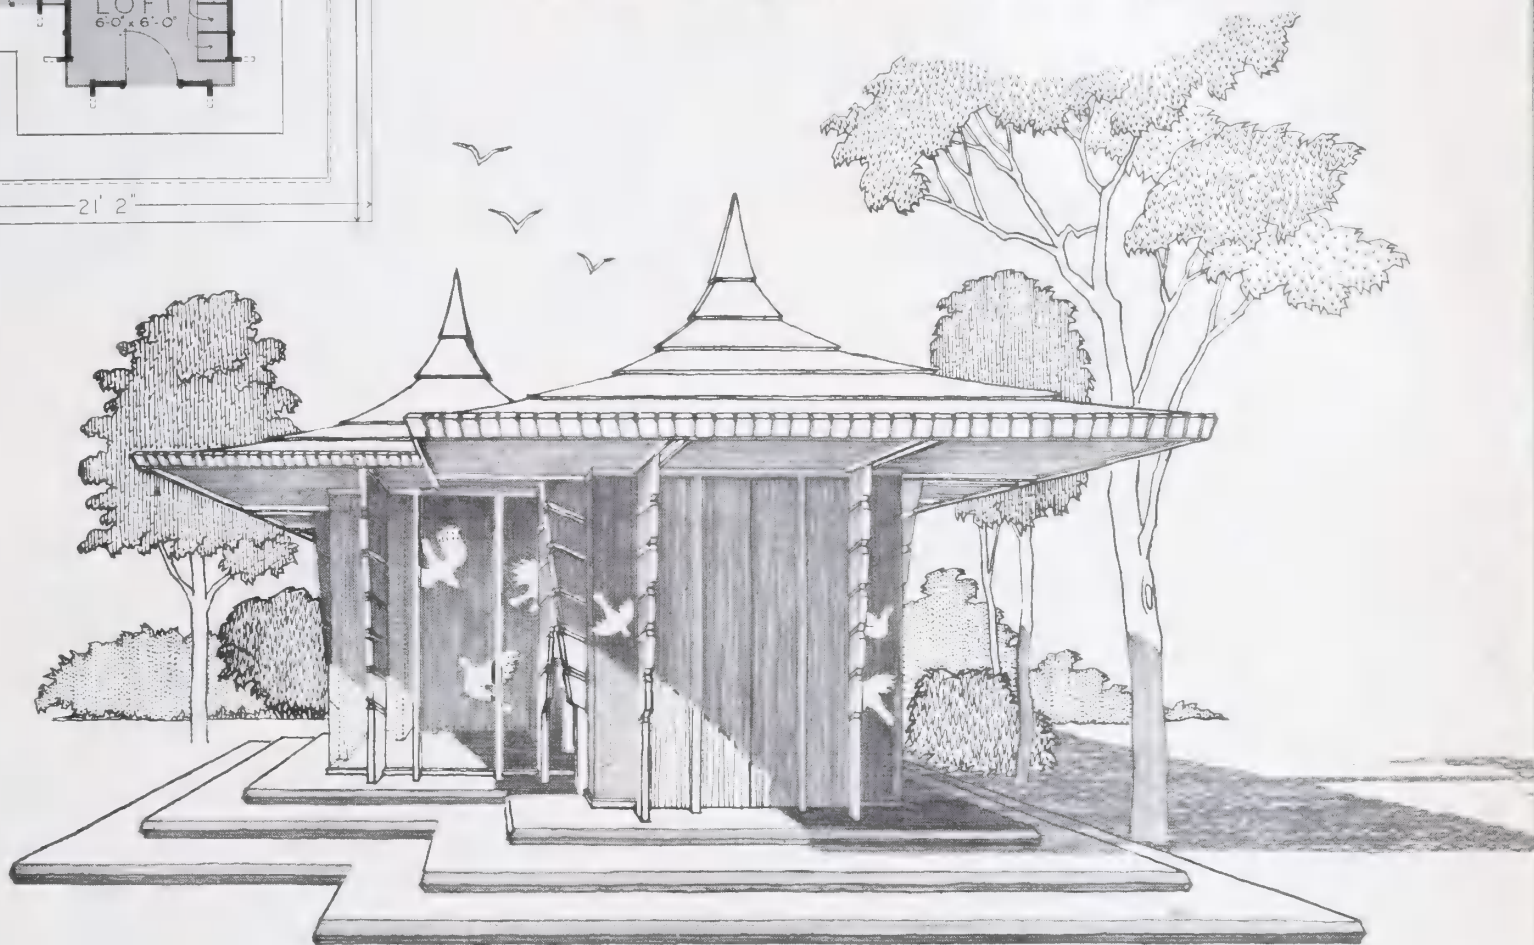

More rustic in feeling, this dovecote is raised on a pedestal of concrete, giving you an eye-level view of the doves and their ever fascinating activities. The folded-star roof is of hand-split cedar shakes. Heavy copper flashing directs rain water to four points, where it splashes into rough-cut stone basins on the ground below. The nests are in the four supporting piers of plywood. Cost to build: about $1,100.

Suitable for a great stretch of lawn or a formal garden, this dove-cote combines a separate flypen with loft area, rising from a tiered platform of concrete. The pagodalike roofs are of copper and have wide, sheltering overhangs with ornamental wood fascias. The walls of the loft are of plywood with corner panels of clear plastic. The 2" by 12" supports taper upward to double rafters. This engaging structure could be the focal point for an otherwise featureless landscape. Cost would be about $6,000 with copper roof; $4,400 with shingle roof.

A plastic sky-dome ornamented with wood grille tops this elegant little building and its umbrella roof of shingle, supported by curved plywood piers. The joy of the skylight is that it illuminates the interior of the dove-cote and sheds a lovely top light on the birds. They love sunlight and will respond with joyful activity. The flare of the roof provides nesting area. This dove-cote, standing daintily on its concrete base, has a raised floor of wire mesh and would cost about $3,000.

Candles by the Score

Used lavishly in your garden, these new hurricane candles will light up the summer nights for entertaining or just dreaming

● When our ancestors used the candle as their main source of light, it was rarely considered anything more than a necessity. As soon as newer and more powerful forms of light were invented, the candle was discarded. But the flattering quality of its light has never been equaled, and our modern use of it is more than a mere yearning for the past. The soft glow spread by the flickering flame is just enough to illumine without harshly defining, so its place in the romantic setting is secure. Used in the garden, it has the advantage of portability, so that spots of light can be placed anywhere without regard to wires or outlets. The candle-lit garden setting on our cover is an example of what can be created for a summer party. The old-fashioned hurricane chimney used to be the only answer to the problem of using candles outdoors in a breeze. Now many new and attractive forms are available, created out of metal, glass, or ceramics. We show 19 decorative examples on these two pages in day-lit and candle-lit photographs. Except where noted, these are available in department stores, gift or accessory shops.

THE TROUBLE-FREE GLORY OF LILIES

in flower from May to September.

Just as lily blossoms are long-lived in the garden, in indoor floral arrangements they outlast many other flowers. They lend themselves so well to such magnificent cut-flower arranging that you will be tempted to cut them with abandon. But the lily plant needs to retain its foliage all summer to build for next season's growth. Cutting flower stems with foliage year after year may ultimately kill the plant. However, you might feel that the beauty of the cut blossoms is worth a shortened life expectancy for some of your plants. If not, you may cut their flowers by taking little or no leaf. There is considerable stem above the leaves and this enables you to cut with short stems.

It is beneficial to remove the flowers from the plants once they fade, so long as leaves are not taken with them. Otherwise, seed formation will occur and this will take considerable of the plant's nourishment that otherwise would go to enlarging the bulb.

Lilies are among the most fragrant of flowers. They have a delightful aromatic range, from the extremely delicate and light that can give rare pleasure to the senses to the almost intoxicating and heaviest of fragrances. Several of the species, however, have an unpleasant odor. These include Lilium amabile, L. caroliticum, L. martagon, L. pomponium, and L. pyrenaicum. But this is not to condemn them to oblivion—they have other transcending virtues. Take L. martagon. Who will not take great delight in the poetic beauty of its balletlike gracefulness, the disciplined poise of its intensely reflexed petals, its exotic coloring? Leave this one in the garden uncut.

Landscaping with Lilies

You can find many uses for lilies in your landscape. The mature height of each variety (shown in our table) should determine to a large extent the use to which you might put it. You will note that lilies range in height from one foot (Lilium pumilum) to eight feet (both Black Dragon and the aurelian hybrids). Few genera of flowers command such a range in stature as this. Whether you need a low-growing floral treasure for foreground use or a tall, stately material for a border background where the height becomes an invaluable asset, you can find a lily to satisfy.

The low-maintenance perennial border is of immeasurable utility.

Lilies and other desirable perennial companion plants are ideally suited to it. Space your lilies and other perennials far enough apart so that their roots do not have to compete in the soil for food. For the same reason, lilies should be spaced well in front of background shrubs and evergreens. Tall lilies can be displayed with aesthetic taste against a garden wall or fence, shrub border, or against coniferous plantings that deploy their branches close to the ground. Tall lilies, incidentally, are most effective when viewed from a distance.

Your lilies should always be grouped three or more, never used as individual specimen plants. Each grouping should be composed of but one variety to insure uniformity of color, height, and flower blossom type. One of the most delightful ways is to place lilies in front of shrubs, evergreens, and hedges, even if there are no border beds. In such places, the lilies should be planted in irregular groupings, here and there, never in regular rows. Excellent companion plants for them are the early spring flowering bulbs—tulips, daffodils, hyacinths. As the foliage of these yellows and dies back, it will make an excellent cover for your lilies.

Naturalizing Lilies

Strangely enough, few flowers naturalize as beautifully as lilies along woodland paths and in the woodland border. For this, some of the dainty, small-flowered species sorts are to be preferred to the more rank-growing hybrids. In all situations, it is preferable to group bulbs of one species or of one hybrid together. Between groupings, color harmonies can be developed. Harmonious variety, with subtle shadings, can be your goal. Both the great and subtle color ranges of present-day lilies make them invaluable for such work. While none of the taller varieties are suited to the rock garden, several of the smaller ones, including the following, make the most delightful of all rock garden subjects: Lilium amabile, L. cernuum, L. formosanum pricei, L. Kelloggii, L. pomponium, and L. pumilum.

One of the most intriguing uses to which lilies can be put is to grow them in pots out-of-doors. This practice has amazing utility. For, by keeping potted lilies containing varieties for a progression of bloom coming along in some out-of-the-way area, they can be moved into the garden or onto the patio for their period of greatest show. Once potted, lilies need repotting but once every three years. Otherwise, too, they are so little demanding that the portable lily garden that they represent is simply a further extension of the HOUSE BEAUTIFUL low-maintenance gardening goal.

How to Plant and Grow

Ideally, all lilies should have sunlight until at least 2 p.m. each day. Semi-sunlight as provided by tree branches that arch high overhead favors the appearance of the extremely delicate shadings in a lily's flowers. But shade also induces weak stems—the kind that demand careful staking—and soft flowers. If you must plant lilies in a shady garden, do so only in the light shade cast by tall trees and in part shade (a little direct sun each day). No lily can stand dense shade. The following lilies included in our table are more adaptable to shade growth: Lilium amabile, L. auratum and its hybrids; the Bellingham hybrids, L. browni, the Golden Harvest hybrids, L. lankongense, the Olympic hybrids, Pink Perfection, L. regale, and L. speciosum and its hybrids. You should not plant lilies too near to house walls (especially white ones), paved walks, drives or paved courts, for they reflect more heat than lilies like.

As we stressed earlier, lilies demand perfect soil drainage—they rot in the ground if their bulbs must stay in water-sogged soil for even a couple of weeks. The ideal situation insofar as drainage is concerned is to plant them on a slope. If your garden is level and has heavy, water-retentive soil like clay, clay loam, etc., or if your garden soil is underlaid by a hardpan, you can still grow lilies by using raised beds that are built up at least a foot above ground level. Or in any moist, poorly drained garden, you can always grow your lilies in pots, even if the pots are to be placed on the ground. The latter is the easiest and perhaps best solution.

Most lilies prefer a slightly acid soil; that is, one having a pH value of 5½ to 6½. However, Lilium candidum (the madonna lily) and L. martagon are lime-tolerant and can stand a pH of 7 to 7½. L. amabile, L. cernuum, and L. henryi are just a little less lime-tolerant. If you suspect your soil of being inadequately acid for acid-loving lilies, you can send a sample of it to your county agricultural agent (Please turn to page 112) or to the soils laboratory at your state agricultural experiment station for analyzing. They will tell you what its pH value is and how you might change it, if need be, to adapt an area to lilies.

Lilies are to be planted in the fall. L. candidum should be planted in August and the other species and hybrids in September or October. As little time as possible should expire between the time that a lily grower digs his bulbs in the early fall and when you plant them in your garden. It is well for you to arrange to purchase them from your local supplier or by mail in advance. When your local or mail order supplier receives his supply from the grower, he will see that you get them as quickly as possible. Plant them at once upon their delivery.

Lily bulbs are quite different from such bulbs as tulips, narcissi, and hyacinths. While the latter dry out and become completely dormant, a lily bulb never does so. It remains completely alive and must be handled with care to prevent it from drying out or from becoming bruised or otherwise injured. If your lily bulbs can not be planted immediately upon delivery, hold them in peat moss until your earliest planting opportunity. If they are limp upon delivery, hold them in peat moss for two or three days before planting and they should "plump up." Some growers are packing their lily bulbs in polyethylene bags containing peat or peat moss in an effort to insure fresh delivery. Bulb size in lilies is not necessarily important. Some bulbs give an appearance of giant size only because the scales of which they are composed are loose. Smaller more compact bulbs might give better bloom and longevity.

As to the proper planting depth, Lilium candidum should be set in the soil with no more than one inch of settled soil over the top of the bulbs; all other species and hybrids should be set with no more than four inches of soil over the tops of their bulbs. Suitable spacing between bulbs for the smaller growing lilies is 5 to 6 inches; for the larger growing ones, 9 to 15 inches. Established bulbs need digging and transplanting only when they appear to become overcrowded. These may be moved in September or October (Lilium candidum in August) and their bulbs should be separated before they are replanted.

Once your lilies are planted, they soon send their roots deep and become heavy feeders. Their soil should be especially rich in humus. The best way to make it so is to keep on its surface a mulch of well-rotted cow manure (almost a rarity nowadays), rich compost, peat moss, or decaying leaf mold. Additional mulch should be applied at least twice during each growing season. In addition to supplying organic plantfood, a mulch keeps the soil cool (which lilies like) and, by inhibiting weed growth, makes any cultivation of the soil's surface unnecessary. Not only does this lessen the task of maintenance but it is rather essential for an important reason. Like corn, many varieties of lilies send brace roots from the lower portion of their stems outward and downward into the soil. These hold the lily plants, and especially the taller ones, firmly upright. Soil cultivation is likely to lead to the severance of these important brace roots. In addition to using a mulch, you should scatter a handful of balanced chemical fertilizer or wood ashes to each four square feet of lily bed surface at least twice during the growing season.

Outdoor Pot Culture

Ten-inch clay pots, with three bulbs planted to each, serve well for accenting your garden, patio, or terrace with portable potted lilies. Their potting should be done in the fall, just at the time that lilies are planted in the garden. A loose, porous soil is essential and it may be made as follows: Combine two parts sandy garden loam, one part sand, and one part of leaf mold or peat moss; mix thoroughly. For drainage, place an inch of gravel in the bottom of each pot. Then fill each half-full with the soil mixture. Next, add a double handful of sand and set your bulbs upright in it. You should finish filling the pot with the soil mix and tamp it firmly, leaving about a half-inch of free space at the top of the pot for water. Water and label your pots and place them in a cool place until spring, with occasional waterings. When the bulbs sprout in spring, move them into light shade, partial shade, or full sun and water regularly. Then start planning that gay garden or patio party!

SARDINIA—RENAISSANCE OF A LOVELY ISLAND

seeing them possible. Modern hotels exist in every key city, and attractive resorts dot the coastline and the mountains. Communications to the mainland, by air or sea, are frequent and easy of access.

Driving a car here is a positive joy. The distance between one beauty spot and the next is short, and the traffic is negligible. Although railroads connect the principal centers and a network of buses extends all over the island, connections are awkward and time can be lost. It is best to bring a car (by ferry from Naples, Genoa, or Civitavecchia) or to rent one when you arrive. Suppose you land in Cagliari. Instead of stopping in the city, drive down the coast about 25 miles to Pula, where there is a delightful seaside hotel called Is Morus (The Moors), with the air of a country house. It's set in a shady grove, with a heavenly stretch of private beach, a pool, and a lovely garden. The cuisine is good, and you dine on the terrace overlooking the sea. This pleasant oasis was designed for the life of the "dolce far niente," but if you feel like stirring, it can serve as headquarters for exploring this part of the island.

A short drive up the west coast will bring you to the islet of S. Pietro and its charming, primitive fishing village, Carlo Forte, whose inhabitants are the blond, blue-eyed descendants of the Ligurians who settled here several centuries past. A few miles in the opposite direction lies Nora, an ancient Roman city now in the process of being excavated by archaeologists. To continue on farther in this direction will bring you back to Cagliari, which has been called one vast stairway. In its upward movement every building and every monument stand out against the sky. It is crowned by a walled city built by the Piemontese during their reign, and by the handsome baroque cathedral of S. Michele of later vintage. From these heights, you look down upon a patchwork of tiled rooftops, twisted alleys, and stone steps that lead to the modern city and the seething harbor—from the past to the present. Cagliari is a city of limestone, a rock which diffuses light instead of dispelling it. In the afternoon sun, it glows like gold brocade. Wrought iron—bent into volutes, pressed into spirals, jointed to form curves and angles—makes the fanciful gateways and balconies of the houses, black lace against beige, coral, and gold. It is also a city of trees—palm, fig, cypress, and bitter orange. One broad avenue is bordered with jacarandas whose arched roof of purple blossoms transforms the road into a bower in spring. From every balcony and terrace carnations, geraniums, and jasmine vines tumble in bright profusion, scenting the air deliciously.

FOR A glimpse at Sardinia's prehistoric past, visit the Cagliari Museum, where there are skillfully wrought weapons and sculptured figures of bronze, made by the Nuraghi. These people, with their powerful and constructive art, achieved the most superb architectural realizations to be found in the western Mediterranean basin. To see one of their largest stone complexes (a multipurpose structure comprising dwelling, fortress and necropolis), drive northward to Barumini. There are other smaller ones, however, all over the island.

The best buys in town are the handcrafted products of the island; baskets in great variety of size, shape, and material; pottery, carved wood, and rugs. Sardinian jewelry, handmade of pure gold or silver, both new and antique, takes the form of domed brooches, cuff links and buttons (lately transformed into earrings and chains), and heavier-looking pieces made of silver. These are worn by country women with their regional costumes on feast days, and some of them are wearable with modern clothes as well. Some of the good shops are: Artigianato Della Sarda, Piazza Costituzione 3, for baskets, rugs and pottery. Bottega D'Arte Sarda, via Manno 88 (downstairs, there is run-of-the-mill stock; but upstairs, Signor Cao keeps his fine antique rugs, which you may ask to see). For jewelry, three good shops are: Matta, via Manno 70, Teodoro Cillo, via Manno 1-3, and Candido Operti, via Roma 71. Look in the bakery windows for pane artistiche, special breads made at Christmas, Easter, and for weddings. The dough is cut into fantastic shapes resembling old lace-paper valentines—in medallions, birds, letters to spell out greetings, and all manner of engaging caprices—then baked. They're crisp, enduring.

Taking leave of the south, drive north to Oristano, a tenth-century town once enclosed by a wall, of which there remains only the stern, square tower. Also worth noting are a handsome baroque cathedral and an unusually designed campanile. Continue up the coast a short distance until you come to the small seaside resort of S. Caterina. Here, above a pebbly beach with a truly magnificent view, is an ESIT hotel, one of a group of unpretentious but comfortable government hotels which have lately sprung up all over the island. It's a good place to stay while exploring the surrounding countryside. This is the greenest area on the island, and the roads wind through almond and olive groves, past grainfields and orchards. Nearby is Bosa, an enchanting village nestled in a valley and dominated by the Malaspina Castle. On one bank of the lagoon that cuts across it stand two pretty palaces, one Florentine, the other Venetian.

The women of Bosa have always made exquisite lace. They work as they chat with each other, sitting in their sunlit doorways. In Milis, not far distant, and in Flussio, the women weave sturdy baskets from the tall stalks of the asphodel plant.

A few miles from here lies the tiny hamlet of S. Lussurgiu, which is well known for its rugs. The way they are made has changed little over the centuries. The wool is sheared from the local sheep, then hand-carded and spun, and woven on looms that have been handed down in families from one generation to the next. The patterns are traditional folk art or modifications thereof, and very beautiful.

TO REACH the mountainous part of the island, take the road through Macomer to Nuoro—a steady but gradual climb all the way—through olive groves and pasture land, with here and there a ruined tower, a Romanesque church, or a cluster of houses to accent the pastoral landscape. On reaching Nuoro, continue to climb up the steep road that leads to the summit of Mt. Ortobene, where a new resort hotel, said to be quite luxurious, has opened. There's a stupendous view of the countryside and the Gennargentu mountain range, whose dense forest has yet to be penetrated by man. This could be your center for touring the heart of the island, little known, as yet, to outsiders. The village women still wear their traditional costumes—some somber, others gay, and all fascinating. Drive from Nuoro through Orgosolo, a mountain village of dubious reputation due to its long-standing feuds between families and the bandits who hide in the forests around it. (They do not molest travelers, however, for they are interested solely in settling private scores.) Further on is Desulo, a picturesque, almost hidden village where the women's costumes are bewitching, of scarlet and bright blue. Continue to Aritzo for lunch at a country inn, and return to Nuoro by way of Gavoi to see the beautiful Roman bridge.

Leaving this area for the northeastern part, drive through Dorgali.

YOU CAN Live in THE YEAR'S MOST ADMIRABLE HOUSE BEAUTIFUL HOUSE

Complete, ready-to-build architect's plans are now available for the "House Designed to Please 75 Women."

This house aroused nationwide enthusiasm when it was featured in May, 1963 House Beautiful. It was created after 200 hours of purposeful classroom planning by 75 women, then designed by Loch Crane, a leading San Diego architect.

It offers dozens of fresh, new solutions to the problems of a busy family: children's rooms adjoining a "family workshop" that is especially designed for the necessary clutter of active living, a master bedroom separated from the children's rooms, a Living Kitchen, an "open plan".

Plans include three bedrooms and two baths, a separate dining area, a dressing room, utility room and workshop. Total space is 2,030 square feet, yet the house requires only 78-foot front and affords complete privacy. Cost to build is $40,000 or more, plus land, depending upon your local building costs. (Your local builder or architect can make any minor adaptations to meet your family's specific needs or the local building code.)

You may order the complete plans (ten sheets) for $50. (Additional sets only $10). You will also receive the "Women Designed House" Idea File, regularly $2, at no additional charge.

a pottery and rug-making center, to the secluded beach of Cala Gonone, which is all but deserted except in high summer. Here are three small hotels, a few private villas, good beachcombing, and, in addition, caves to explore. Continuing northward, you pass through the most dramatic scenery in Sardinia, where mountains of jagged rock pierce the sky, then fall sharply down to the sea, and where the terrain is more lunar than earthly.

Eventually you will come to S. Teresa di Gallura. Here the sands of the crescent-shaped beach are white and powdery, and the water, of a shimmering transparency, shades from pale jade to cobalt. Flowering oleanders border its central square, and all the houses, as if by mutual agreement, are tinted in delectable pale pastels. An ESIT hotel perches on a rocky bluff above the beach. Corsica lies but an hour away by ferry, and Bonifacio can be plainly seen on a clear day. Drive a short distance to Palau and take the ferry to La Maddalena for a day's excursion.

There's a colorful eighteenth-century town and, at the end of the local bus line, the pine-shaded beach of Caprera. Pay a visit to Aggius, a doll-size village of gray stone cottages and bright gardens, where they weave a most attractive flat type of wool rug, patterned with geometric and semiabstract figures. A twenty-five minute drive from Olbia will bring you to the beaches of Golfo Costa delgi Aranci, where a new luxury hotel built by the Aga Khan will open this summer.

Now comes the long stretch of drive across the island to Sassari, the second-largest Sardinian city. You might break it by stopping for lunch at Castel Sardo, one of the most photogenic villages anywhere, with its old church and bell tower high above the water's edge. In Sassari, aside from the old quarter the most interesting thing to see is the permanent exhibition of island arts and crafts. This is held in a modern pavilion where you can buy as well as look.

From Sassari it's only a short drive to Alghero, the most highly developed of the resort areas. You may stay in one of several first-class hotels in the medieval town, or go a few miles out to one of several seaside resorts. If you've come for the Cavalcade or the Biennale, you might prefer to stay in Alghero. Planes fly directly from there to Milan and London, and from nearby Porto Torres there's boat service to Genoa. A boat runs from Olbia to Leghorn, and from Cagliari both boats and planes connect with Rome and Naples. To see Sardinia under ideal climatic conditions, go in April, May, or the first part of June, or in September or October. Modern hotels of the Jolly chain exist in Cagliari, Oristano, Sassari, Olbia and Nuoro. Besides the many fish and shellfish, the gastronomic specialty is malloreddus, a type of pasta with a delicious, spicy sauce. Best local wines are red: Campidano, Piani, and Chiantetto. White: Nuraghi.

therefore, does not always mean straight-through ventilation!

Interesting idea: Can't you shape the house so as to create places with extra-strong suction? Architects have begun to try it, especially in the hot-moist parts of Texas and in Florida where breeze is so important. Some of them were pilots during the war. And so now you see airplane ideas cropping up on houses. I don't mean their houses look like airplanes. I mean you see evidence of aerodynamic thinking and detail that tells you the guy knows airplanes. He tries to use a shed roof to increase the suction. He builds an extra wall that acts as "cow flap." He tries to use a roof overhang as an air-scoop. It looks right. But Caudill has tested some of those shapes and found they didn't work. But we are learning more every year. And there is much to be learned from the tropical countries which have had centuries to work out answers.

To sum up, here is the practical advice of Texas A. & M., based entirely on test, not at all on hunch.

Know where the prevailing winds come from in your worst hot weather.

Be sure the breeze does not go through your room too high. Use vanes (louvers, jalousies, something) to deflect breeze downward. Set inlet windows low.

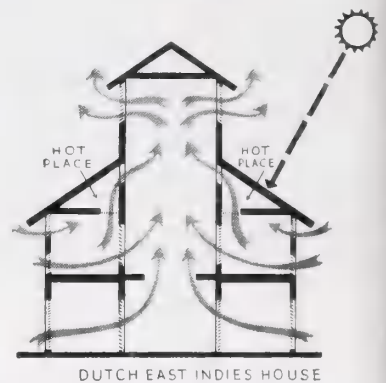

Make air outlets at least as big as inlets, or bigger.

Don't choke off airflow in the middle of the house; make an easy path for it by louvered partitions.

Remember the "Squirt Effect"—in a given stream (of air just as of water) the narrowest place has the fastest flow.

Use attic fan with only one window open if you're in a hurry and can't wait. When using an attic fan, start by clearing the lower floor of your house first. The coolest air in the evening lies closest to the ground—six inches above the grass. Air around your second floor window may be as much as 10° hotter.

So have fun playing around and manipulating all the variables you have now at your disposal. And if you are building a new house, find out from the local weather bureau the direction the hot weather comes from, and design for it. The more

Main idea: Hot places serve as a sort of heat-motor, make air want to rise, increasing suction (draft) on house below. Also, height increases draft of chimney. Factory chimneys are tall, and this tropical house is tall. Finally, walls are louvered for airflow.

"blow through" capacity your house has, the nicer your summers will be.

The facts in this article were developed in a research project partially financed by HOUSE BEAUTIFUL's Climate Control Research Program with a grant made to the Texas Engineering Experiment Station, College Station, Texas. The experiments were conducted by William W. Caudill, Research Architect, assisted by Bob H. Reed, Ben H. Evans. All scientific photographs by Roland Chatham.

THE POETRY OF BIRDS IN FLIGHT

The Oriental frilled pigeon is extremely decorative with frilled feathers of soft pastel colors in lovely combinations on the breast, behind the head, and on the legs and feet.

people for very much the same reason and with a good deal more feeling of enmity.

The Victorians were exuberantly resourceful in their dovecote designs. Moorish mosques, Chinese pagodas, and classic temples, all were airily executed in the wood-and-lattice idiom of the era. Your dovecote may be a charming incident in your garden and may bring your whole personal landscape into a more pleasing focus.

Before you settle on your design, you will want to decide how many pairs of birds you would like to have. Plan to allow three or four square feet of floor space for each pair of pigeons, depending on the size of the breed. Doves find three square feet adequate. Of course, each pair wants its own nest. Some experts advocate a nest apiece on the twin-bed principle but your birds are apt to be old-fashioned about this. Nest boxes should have a five-inch-high board across the front to prevent the nest and young birds from falling out. You'll want to be able to see into all the nests. Be sure there are no hiding places up under the roof. Terra-cotta nesting bowls are useful. Fill them with coarse material: long-leaved pine needles, wheat straw, tobacco stems, or sage grass.

You'll want plenty of perches—about a foot of perch space for each pair of doves. Make them at least eight inches long and two inches wide. For sanitary reasons don't place them directly above each other or too near the screening. A perch near the nest for the expectant father is a thoughtful gesture. If you have a flypen, the perches there should be at least four feet above the floor. If there is some slack in the wire enclosure, the birds will avoid hurting themselves if they become frightened.

The birds like light and ventilation, minus drafts. They dislike dampness, so a dry, quickly draining floor is essential. If you select some of the more delicate breeds, they will need heat in winter but a thermostatically-controlled infrared heater will easily provide the required degree of warmth. Young birds and some tropical species need 70° heat. The openings on the north should be closed in winter.

Doves and pigeons are content when confined to dovecote or flypen, but after they have learned where home is, you will probably want to give yours the freedom of your garden so that they may serve as a decorative element. It might be well to wait two weeks for them to become accustomed to their new home before releasing them for free flight. And you might only free them at certain times of the day or week. Be prepared to lose a few birds at the start, but you will learn how to safeguard them from predatory cats or gourmets.

The problem of feeding your doves has been simplified for you by the feed producers. Both pigeons and doves thrive on commercial mixtures of grains and peas or on pelleted feeds. Pellets may be left in the feed troughs, but take away the grain mix after the morning and late afternoon 30-minute feedings so that the birds won't gorge on their favorite morsels and leave an unbalanced residue.

The grain mixes are composed of cracked corn, small whole grains, and dried peas. The pellets are made of ground grains, peas, and other ingredients in proper proportions to provide a balanced diet. Such feeds can be bought by bulk or bag from poultry feed dealers or pet shops. A pair of mature pigeons will consume from

The fantail is the Dresden doll of pigeons. Gentle, tame, and loving, it is among the daintiest of them all. When moving, its body quivers with excitement and literally dances. White (right), black, blue (left), red (center), and yellow are the colors of the common fantail varieties. The fantail rarely flies, so it is never far from its dovecote.

90 to 125 pounds of feed a year. In addition, you will want to keep in the cote a supply of mineral mix, put up commercially, which will give them the grit and minerals they need. They will be getting a well-rounded diet but they love an occasional treat of grass clippings, celery tops, or lettuce.

While doves are feeding their young, they like a soft feed such as bread crumbs or even milk. Pigeons are not as fussy. Clean drinking water should always be on hand. Feeding and watering utensils should be kept clean to prevent disease and pests.

If your dovecote is well designed, it will be simple to keep clean. A weekly cleaning of the structure and its equipment should be sufficient, plus a yearly spraying with disinfectant. The interior may be repainted occasionally. The sawdust or peat moss which you spread on the floor can later be used as fertilizer for your garden.

Undiluted bird droppings would be too strong. Some doves dust themselves with sand. Pigeons like to bathe in water every day, if possible, summer and winter.

Dove-keeping is not an arduous task. The birds are so endearing that you will have to guard yourself against overmothering them. You will find that, rather than thinking of yourself as their keeper, you will consider yourself their devoted servitor. You will find them very rewarding not only as pets but as inspired performers in your garden.

There are a great many gentle and beautiful breeds besides the doves and pigeons already mentioned in this article, such as the handsome fawn-colored Ring or Turtle Dove, the plaintive, romantic Mourning Dove, and the striking, purplish-gray Bleeding-heart Dove, with a splash of crimson on its white breast. You may be attracted to the smaller breeds like the Swallow Pigeon, which belongs to the German toy class, or the hooded Jacobin, the smallest of all.

Botanical Name

Common Name and Description

EVERGREEN VINES

Hedera helix (There's a Hedera helix gracilis , but it is not recommended north of Washington, D.C.)	English ivy—Bailey says "somewhat tender"; should not be used where temperatures are too severely cold.
Akebia quinata and A. trifoliata	Five-leaf and three-leaf Akebia, both fast-growing climbers; semi-evergreen; to about 20'; rich green foliage, small purple flowers; for sun or shade; beautiful blue fruit like a small banana; quite rare.
Euonymus fortunei (also known as E. radicans )	Evergreen bittersweet: to 20°F.; trailing or climbing by rootlets; leaves dull green with whitish veins; dense foliage.
Var. vegetus	More leathery and shiny foliage than above; orange-red berries.
Var. kewensis	Miniature evergreen bittersweet; very small, dark green foliage; small vine or ground cover; good for small places like sundial base.
Quamoclit sloteri	Cardinal climber or star-glory to 20'; its flowers are like scarlet morning-glories in clusters; a slender vine; makes delicate tracery with fernlike foliage; long blooming season.
Quamoclit pennata	Cypress-vine or star-glory, to 15'; starlike white, orange, or scarlet flowers, fine foliage; will stand shade; good for small trellises.

Dolichos lablab

Hyacinth bean; violet or white pea-shaped flowers; rapid grower; heart-shaped leaves.

Calonyction aculeatum

Moonflower; fragrant white or purple flowers that open at night and on drab days.

Ipomea

Morning-glory, to 15'; some new varieties (check seed catalogs) are very beautiful; many colors.

Cobaea

Cup-and-saucer vine, to 30'; flowers large and bell-shaped, in purple, pink, white; rapid growing and graceful; annual in North, perennial in South.

Phaseolus coccineus

Scarlet-runner; scarlet, showy flowers; purple edible beans.

Cardiospermum halicacabum

Heart-seed or balloon-vine, 8' to 10'; rapid-growing; small white flowers and seed pods like balloons.

Momordico balsamina

Balsam-apple, to 15'; robust climber; handsome vine; dark green leaves; orange-colored, apple-shaped flowers.

Tropaeolum majus

Climbing nasturtium, to 15'; flowers in many colors; wonderful for cutting; spicy seed pods, can be used in salads.

Thunbergia

Clock-vine, to 6'; low-growing climber but prefers to trail; must be trained to start climbing.

*Thunbergia alata*Var. *alba*Var. aurantiaca

Flowers creamy, with dark-purple throats.

White, dark-centered flowers.

Orange-yellow, dark-centered flowers; the black-eyed Susan.

HARDY DECIDUOUS VINESWisteria*

One of the handsomest of flowering vines, twining, long-lived, woody trunks; hard to transplant, so follow directions from nursery; also a tree form (the vine trained as a small tree). Not recommended for extremely low temperatures.

Wisteria floribunda

The floribundas are Japanese Wisterias.

Var. issai

Clear purple.

Var. longissima

Lavender-blue; extra long clusters, up to four feet.

Var. alba

White; flower clusters to 18".

Var. rosea

Pink; flower clusters to 18".

Var. violacea-plena

A double violet, clusters 15-18" long.

Wisteria sinensis

Chinese Wisteria.

Var. purpurea

Lavender-blue.

Var. alba

White.

Wisteria venusta alba

Another white-flowered Chinese form known as silky Wisteria.

Celastrus

Bittersweet, grown for bright fruit and clean handsome foliage; in autumn, showy yellow and orange-scarlet berries cover the vine; plant only in places where it can go where it pleases (and it will please to go everywhere). Most of the bittersweets send up suckers, climb into trees, break down fences.

Ampelopsis veitchii

Boston ivy, to 100' or more; strong, rampant-growing vine; leaves shiny with lovely autumn bright-red color; will cling to anything.

Ampelopsis lowii

Miniature Boston ivy, charming small climber; deep-lobed leaves; beautiful autumn colors; fine for covering low walls, or for use where you want a little tracery.

Ampelopsis aconitifolia

Monkshood vine, slender, with tendrils, light and feathery effect, like a cut-leaf Japanese maple; fine foliage effect, pale green, yellow in autumn; flowers tiny erect cymes—bees love them; fruits

HARDYLiliesFROM WAYSIDE

In Wayside's exciting new 144-page Fall catalog you will find a large selection of the world's finest hardy garden Lilies as well as almost 1300 new, rare and unusual subjects for every garden use. Superb shrubs, lovely hardy perennials. Holland's finest bulbs... everything for the garden.

Pink Perfection Strain Lilies

This stunning new strain has had our closest attention for several years. In habit and culture the plants are similar to other Centifolium Hybrids; however, the delightfully scented flowers are shaded an exquisite dusky pink. This handsome color extends over both inner and outer surfaces of the petals and is indescribably beautiful.

Well spaced, trumpet flowers are borne all around the stem, forming flowerheads that often account for 2½ ft. of the height of the 7 foot plants. We know this will be one of your favorite garden subjects. Specially hand selected bulbs. 7-8 in. bulbs. Ea. $1.00; 3 for $2.85; Doz. $11.00

MID-CENTURY LILY, EnchantmentPink PerfectionMid-Century Hybrids

For hundreds of years, fruitless attempts were made in Europe to cross Umbellatum and Tigrinum Lilies. This feat was recently accomplished in Oregon, and the results are sensational. Magnificent 3 to 4 foot plants, with rigid stems that do not require staking, bear beautifully formed flowers in big open clusters.

These foolproof, perfectly hardy lilies will grow, multiply and live under any condition. The color range is spectacular and we guarantee this mixture contains only the choicest of the new hybrids in a range of the most brilliant colors.

Mixed colors—Three $2.25; Doz. $8.00

Enchantment (Plant pat. 862). One of the most vigorous lilies in cultivation. This brilliant nasturtium-red, upright flowering, Mid-century hybrid provides a blazing display of the richest possible color lasting for weeks.

Each 80¢; Three $2.25; Doz. $8.00

VINES FOR SOLVING PROBLEMS

Hydrangea petiolaris

small, brilliant orange-yellow clusters in September and October.

Climbing hydrangea, a vigorous grower; clings fast to brick wall; good to cover dead trees. Clusters of foliage, rich dark green; flowers white, hydrangealike blooms in umbels all summer; grows in sun or shade; keep pruned unless you want it 80' high; no autumn color; leaves fall in November.

Bignonia radicans

Scarlet trumpet vine, to 50'; strong and rapid-growing climber; has some foliage and flowers; large tubular trumpets, in short racemes; no fragrance; hummingbirds like them; they bloom nearly all summer; will grow anywhere but suffers freely and will become a great nuisance unless severely pruned.

Bignonia capreolata

Yellow trumpet vine, to 50'; fragrant; not reliably hardy north of Washington, D.C.

Parthenocissus quinquefolia

Virginia creeper, native vine clinging with tendrils and discs, to 50'; beautiful scarlet fall foliage; good ground cover; grows in pure sunlight; leaves three-lobed.

Rosa

Climbing roses offer you a wealth of beauties to use on a wall or trellis. In any good rose catalog there's a wide choice of shapes and sizes among the following classifications: large-flowered climbers, small-flowered ramblers, climbing hybrid teas, climbing floribunda, pillar type, and trailing roses (best for low walls and as ground covers).

Pyracantha coccinea

Firethorn, to 20'; ornamental shrublike vine, thorny; evergreen south of the Carolinas, deciduous north thereof; small narrow leaves; white flowers in clusters, followed by bright-colored fruits that bird-like; hardy to southern New England. Makes long shoots that can be used as vines and espaliered or pruned to fit any position.

Var. lalandi

Brilliant orange-scarlet berries that persist long into winter.

Var. lalandi fructu luteo

Golden yellow berries.

Var. victory

Scarlet berries that persist until next flowering, barring birds.

Var. watereri

A bushy type, fine for hedges or masses of red berries.

Clematis

Large-flowered hybrid clematis noted for spectacular flowers; will lend charm and distinction to any position; can be grown on posts or background perennial border.

available in many colors including rosy-lilac, crimson, white, pale blue, purple, pink, violet.

Clematis paniculata

Sweet autumn clematis, vigorous woody climber to 40'; good green foliage; thousands of white starry flowers with delightful fragrance in September; bears beautiful, gray-silky, feathery seed.

Species Clematis

Clematis species are the wild fore-runners of the hybrids mentioned under clematis above. While they have small blooms, the flowers of species clematis are borne profusely in large panicles; available in white, pink, yellow, lavender-blue, cream and purple, coral-red.

Polygonum aubertii

Silver lace-vine, a twining, slender vine to 40'; small leaves; white flowers, very small, by the millions, in loose panicles; nice for cutting; hardy to Maine; grows like crazy—15-20' the first year.

Vitis

Grapes, woody, deciduous vines; many native kinds and many cultivated sorts; vines must be kept pruned to keep them within manageable shape and bounds and to expose fruit to light and air; wonderful cover for arbors.

Aristolochia durior (Also known as A. macrophylla)

Dutchman's pipe, woody climber to 30'; quick and dense shade; almost round leaves, very large (9-12").

Periploca graeca

Silk vine, to 40'; wheel-shaped flowers, July and August; dark green shining foliage, deciduous; P. sepium, hardy north to Mass.; P. graeca, hardy to New York.

There's a quality about a home with Henredon

You get a very special feeling in a home with Henredon furniture. A sense of integrity. A feeling of comfort and belonging. You know that the people who live there know good design. And you recognize their personal, and very selective, taste. No matter what Henredon style you prefer—and there's such a variety—the same will happen in your home, too. Because each piece is a brilliant expression of the art of furniture design. And each one is crafted with

AN UNPRECEDENTED HOME LIBRARY-BUILDING PLAN

THE PURPOSE of this suggested trial membership is to demonstrate, by your own actual experience, four things highly important for every reading family. First, that membership in the Book-of-the-Month Club is a certain way to keep from missing, through oversight or overbusyness, the new books you fully intend to read; second, that you will pay on the average 20% less for those books you want than you otherwise would; third, that you will have a wide choice—more than 200 books a year; and fourth, that under the Club's new Book-Dividend system, you will be acquiring useful or beautiful volumes—and fine high-priced sets—for really trifling sums, as in the case of the four sets pictured above. This plan, without any question, is the most economical ever devised for building up a fine home library.

★ HOW CAN THIS BE DONE? The answer to that natural question is that the Club's Book-Dividend system is comparable to the traditional profit-sharing system of consumer cooperatives. The Club regularly sets aside what is termed its Book-Dividend Fund. As this total accumulates, entire editions of valuable books are contracted for with publishers, and the books themselves are distributed among members. Over the past thirty years Book-of-the-Month Club members have received—through this unique plan—the staggering total of over $280,000,000 worth of books (retail value), wholly without charge or for a nominal sum.

★ YOU NOW HAVE A CHOICE OF BOOK-DIVIDENDS • In the past a Book-Dividend was offered to members with every two books bought. Since the beginning of 1962, one has been made available with every single Selection or alternate a member buys. The system is simple: with each book you buy you receive a Book-Dividend Certificate, which is redeemable when accompanied by a nominal sum—usually $1.00—for an expensive library volume of your own choice. At present more than 100 different volumes are available as Book-Dividends. Many two-, four- and six-volume sets are included (with publishers' retail prices as high as $66.00), and most of them can be acquired by paying no more than $1.00 a volume, on presenting the certificate.

★ GOOD SENSE FOR READING FAMILIES Within the next twelve months you are sure to find at least four books that you will buy anyway—among the Club's Selections and alternates. Is it not good sense to buy them from the Club, in this suggested trial? You are free to stop after you have taken four if you do not find by actual experience that membership is as beneficial as you anticipate.

DO NOT SEND MONEY . . . A BILL WILL BE SENT WITH YOUR SET

345 Hudson Street, New York 14, N. Y.

Please enroll me as a trial member of the Book-of-the-Month Club and send me the library set whose number I have indicated in the box at right, billing me $1.00 for each volume. I agree to purchase at least four additional monthly Selections—or alternates—during the first year I am a member. Members' prices for these books are never more than the publishers' prices but average 20% less. I have the right to cancel my membership any time after buying these four books. During the trial and thereafter, if I continue, I am to receive a Book-Dividend Certificate with every Selection—or alternate—I buy. Each certificate, together with a nominal sum—usually $1.00—can be redeemed for a Book-Dividend which I may choose from a wide variety always available. PLEASE NOTE: Occasionally the Club will offer two or more books together at a special combined price. (Such purchases are counted as a single book in fulfilling the membership obligation.) A small charge is added to all book shipments to cover postage and mailing expenses.

INSULATING GLASS

When Thermopane insulating glass goes into your home... you're all set for year-round comfort, for years and years to come.

In winter, Thermopane gives you a wall of protection against bitter weather and cuts down on fuel bills. In summer, it helps your air-conditioning system operate more efficiently. Thermopane insulating glass also eliminates the need for storm windows, and all the unpleasant chores that go with them. It is available with heat-treated plate glass, which makes it far stronger for greater safety.

Is Thermopane expensive? Actually, it's an economy in the long run because its fuel savings will really add up. Your builder can include the cost of Thermopane in your mortgage, adding little to your monthly payments. For full details on Thermopane and its use in all kinds of windows, write to L·O·F, 3193 Libbey·Owens·Ford Building, Toledo 2, Ohio.

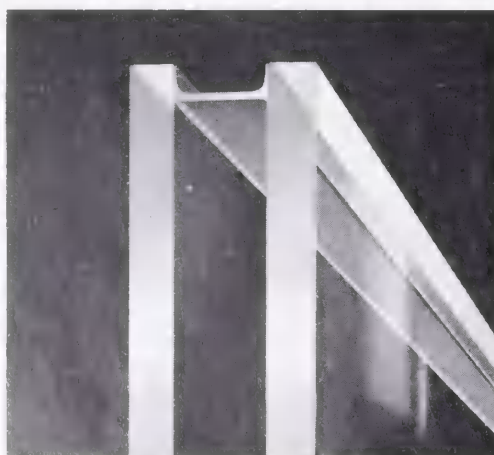

MADE IN U.S.A.

THE QUALITY MARK TO LOOK FOR

It's marked for your protection. Look for the Thermopane trade-mark etched in the corner of the insulating glass you buy. It's the sign of the original insulating glass developed by Libbey·Owens·Ford 25 years ago.

It's comfort built in... thanks to a vapor-tight seal. Only Thermopane insulating glass has the Bondermetic Seal® that fuses metal to glass. Thermopane also is available in smaller sizes with glass-to-glass seal.

When you build or buy ...look for Thermopane

It's a sign of extra comfort and extra value in your home. Be sure to get the heat saving and convenience of having Thermopane insulating glass in every window.

Thermopane is available from L·O·F glass distributors and dealers. It is also used by manufacturers of all types of quality windows, as well as sliding glass doors.

For the names of glass or window distributors or dealers in your community, see the Yellow Pages of your phone book.

WEALTH of cooking and eating enjoyment awaits you in these exciting books. They have been selected especially for this offer from the world's most popular, most useful cook books.

And if you really love compliments, wait until you see some of the recipes! For example:

Next time you serve leg of lamb try such exotic variations as savory roast Arabian lamb... lamb simmered in white wine and tomato sauce... "coffee-braised" Swedish lamb (all from World of Good Cooking). Or imagine greeting your guests with the sh-baked aroma of Gingerbread Cream Pie (from The Gold Cook Book)... and winning raves at parties with crisp Sesame Strips (from Amy Vanderbilt's Complete Cookbook).

This is just a sample of the pleasures The Cook Book Guild offers you. For here is a club devoted to seeking out the world's great cook books for you at guaranteed savings of at least 20%, frequently more.

As a member you'll learn what great chefs look for when selecting ingredients... how impressive menus are planned by famous hostesses. You'll learn budget-stretching tips, family and regional cooking secrets. Delicious ways to diet. Ways to save time, trouble.

Forthcoming selections are described in the free monthly bulletin, The Cook Book News, which also contains an "Editor's Choice" recipe. You may take as few as four selections or alternates within two years, or as many as you wish. With every fourth book you accept, you may choose a FREE bonus book from a list of books on cooking, gardening, decorating, etc.

SEND NO MONEY! To join the Guild and get any three of these books for only $1.89 plus shipping, mail coupon today. Your two free gifts will be included.

The Cook Book Guild, Dept. 3-HB-9, Garden City, N. Y.

Please enroll me in the Cook Book Guild and send me the THREE cook books whose numbers I have printed in these three boxes. Bill me only $1.89 plus shipping for all three. The Recipe Finder and 2-way Book Shelf will be included free. If not delighted, I may return everything in 10 days and this membership will be cancelled.

If I keep them, my only obligation is to accept at least four of the monthly selections or alternates during the next two years—at guaranteed savings of at least 20%, frequently more. With every fourth selection I do accept, I may choose a free Bonus Book from a special list provided.

Same offer in Canada. Address: Cook Book Guild, 105 Bond St., Toronto 2. Offer good in continental U.S.A. and Canada only.

For today's new world of decorating— a handsome new floor from Armstrong

It's a vinyl floor.

It has intriguing character.

It's pebbly—made of vinyl chips set in translucent vinyl.

It has a gentle, rippling texture.

It has depth you can look down into.

It's called Montana Corlon.

Today, interior designers insist on the importance of the floor. It should show. It should make a distinctive contribution to the room.

Armstrong Montana Corlon does just that. It's been created expressly to enhance both modern and traditional furnishings and architectural details.

Montina is made of random-sized chips of vinyl. They have flecks of color in them—light flecks, dark flecks, golden flecks.

The chips are suspended in translucent vinyl—giving Montana its pebbly texture and its depth. You can feel the texture. You can look down between the chips. They "float" in the vinyl base—an effect that's enhanced by the lustrous, satiny finish. (On the practical side, these Montana qualities help conceal scuff marks and dents from pointed heels.)

Because Montana Corlon comes in long, wide rolls, this new vinyl floor can be almost seamless. You can create all sorts of custom floor designs with Montana, too. And it will go in any part of the home—even in most downstairs playrooms, directly over the concrete.

Send for a free sample of Montana Corlon and a folder showing its many decorator colorings. Armstrong, 6309 Atkins Ave., Lancaster, Pa. In Canada, Dept. 93-H, Box 919, Montreal, P.Q.

SPLIT LEVEL designs. As warm air rises to upper levels, cooler air moves to lower rooms. This can cause uncomfortable heating or cooling problems.

ROOMS OVER UNHEATED AREAS, such as a garage or excavation, make the floors and walls cold, can make the room too cold to be used.

LARGE GLASS AREAS alter inside temperature each time sun, wind or outside temperature change. Even true of double-paned windows.

SPREADOUT FLOOR PLAN. The effects of sun, shade and wind in different areas of the home can cause widely different heating or cooling requirements.

FINISHED BASEMENT. Because it is partially below ground level, the temperature needs in a basement are far different from the rest of the house.

SEPARATE LIVING AND SLEEPING AREAS require different temperatures—warm and relaxing in the living area—cool and comfortable for sleeping.

How you can prevent these heating or cooling problems in your new home

(or correct them in your existing home)

What good is the world's most expensive home if it isn't comfortable to live in?

One of the best investments you can make in your new home or your present one is to take a little time and spend a little extra on insuring your comfort—with adequate heating or cooling.

This means Zone Control—dividing your home into two or more areas that you can keep at different temperatures to suit your family's needs.

Zoning is simple! In a forced air system, for example, all you need are a separate thermostat for each zone along with a damper and damper motor to control the air distribution. In hot water systems, you need thermostats and zone valves to control hot water flow. In some cases, two small furnaces or boilers are used. Installations are made quickly and easily.

How you can zone your home. The first step is to decide how you want to divide your home, by zones. Then call your heating or plumbing contractor. Be sure he understands you want to zone and where. He can design a system that will assure you the comfort you need and deserve.

In a new home, he'll lay out a piping or duct system for each zone. If he can do this at the planning stage, you can have Zone Control for very little extra cost. In your present home, it may be as simple as adding a thermostat with its associated controls.

For more information on Zone Control, write for free literature. And, now available to help you in your planning, an informative 48 page booklet "How to get the most out of your heating and cooling dollar"—50¢ postage paid. Write Honeywell, Dept. HB9-49, Minneapolis 8, Minnesota

DON'T JUST STAND THERE...POUR.

It is time to dispel a few rumors. In the short period since launching our INDEPENDENCE Ironstone collection, we have spent countless manhours trying to convince all and sundry that INDEPENDENCE Ironstone belongs on the dining table—not on the shelf with the rest of your collector's items. We are perfectly ready to admit we've designed an everyday dining collection that is not in the least run-of-the-mill. The silhouette alone is ample proof of that. However, our original intent was to produce a dinnerware collection that would be a happy fusion of aesthetics and functionalism. Therefore, we have no recourse but to announce that INDEPENDENCE Ironstone—plates, platters, pitchers and all—is oven-proof, dishwasher-proof, and absolutely Monday thru Friday. ## MAYBE YOU'RE NOT IN LOVE WITH OUR BEST-LOVED PATTERN

More people choose Chantilly than any other sterling silver design.

In fact, since 1831 more Gorham patterns have been chosen than those of any other silver maker! That's not at all surprising when you take time to notice the fine artistry of Gorham Sterling.

Each piece is an original design. Pure in concept. Perfectly executed. (The enormous pride and skill of our craftsmen would amaze you.)

Study the six forks shown here. Better still, visit the fine stores where sterling is on display and see their full selection of Gorham designs.

You'll like what you see. And we're sure you'll love one of the Gorham designs more than all the others. Why wait another moment to own your favorite? It doesn't have to be Chantilly.

6 ways to tell if you're getting value in draperies

INSPECT the side hems. Blind-stitched or two-needle side hems give draperies a smooth, hand-finished look.

CHECK heading. Make sure it's washable, will keep pleat looking sharp, precisely tailored after many washings; won't pucker or wilt.

OPEN UP a pleat. Are the three fingers of the pleat actually made from the body of the drapery fabric?

ADD UP the amount of fabric used in bottom hem and heading. Are there at least six inches total heading and bottom hem to give draperies body and help them hang straight?

MEASURE width of panel. You'll want a full 44-inch fabric, properly side-hemmed, in each panel of a single width drapery to give enough fullness to drape gracefully in rich, deep folds.

EXAMINE the material carefully. Is it first-quality fabric without imperfections . . . a washable, no-iron fabric that is easy to care for, won't lose its looks?

Federal housing chief indorses home-improvement program

"Improving your home

... adds to its comfort

... enhances its value

... contributes to a healthier community."

By Robert C. Weaver

Administrator, Housing and Home Finance Agency

• One of the richest resources this country has is its existing housing supply. Not only is it an economic asset. It is a cultural treasure, to be preserved and rehabilitated as part of our national heritage.

President Kennedy, soon after his inauguration, said in a special message to Congress: "Our investment in nonfarm residential real estate is estimated at about $500 billion—the largest single component in our national wealth. These assets must be used responsibly, conserved, and supplemented, and not neglected or wasted in our emphasis on the new."

The Kennedy Administration, through both legislation and executive action, has sought to encourage home improvement. The Housing Act of 1961 included a number of provisions to facilitate the financing of these improvements.

When the individual improves his home, he adds to the comfort and convenience of living there, he enhances the value of his property, and he contributes to a healthier and happier community. The many improvement projects shown in this issue will suggest ways in which other families can improve their own properties.

All this makes for a stronger America.

She has her eyes on you

And her wonderful, story-telling eyes are saying that there are a great many people, a lot of them helpless youngsters, who are desperately in need of your help. Some of them are sick, some are handicapped, and many are homeless. There are puzzled teen-agers in need of a guiding hand, troubled families in need of counseling, and people who are too old to work but too young to sit around doing nothing. When you look into this little one's eyes, we hope you will get the message—from the many people whose only hope for help is the once-a-year pledge you make to your United Fund or Community Chest. One gift works many wonders/GIVE THE UNITED WAY

Window Beauty is Andersen...

What a beautiful way for your remodeling investment to pay off!

Relaxation comes easy in a cheerful den like this... with a beautiful view built right in. And no small part of that warm feeling results from contemplating the advantages of owning the Andersen Windows you've just installed.

Extra-convenient Andersen Windows that are easier to clean, easier to operate. They're available with welded insulating glass...eliminating the need for storm windows forever, yet providing double sealed glass insulation...two fewer glass surfaces to clean. Andersen Windows are available with grilles that snap in or out instantly for easier cleaning.

Beautiful Andersen Windows that add warmth and lasting charm to your remodeled room. Wood windows that can be painted or stained to complement any decor.

Andersen Windows close firmly to seal out dust and drafts for a lifetime. Precision built to be from 3 to 5 times as weather tight as industry standards.

Extra-weather-tight Andersen Windows that cut 10 to 15% or more from your annual fuel bills when you have them throughout your home.

Available in 7 styles and a wide range of sizes, there's an Andersen Window for every remodeling job. Certainly they are priced a little higher. But after you've lived with them for a year, you'll regard them as the biggest bargain in your home.

Get a demonstration at your Andersen lumber dealer or distributor. Let him show you how the best windows are your best investment.

DECORATOR'S DIARY

"I can't cram one more living soul into that house," said my old friend Myra Johnson, rather contentedly, I thought. We were lying on a raft in the lake, looking over the water to the great old summer house with its broad encircling porch, its exaggerated gables and Victorian turrets. In Myra's mother's day it had always been a sort of summer hotel for the family, who came in their numbers with offspring, in-laws, and friends, and now Myra seemed to be carrying on in the same tradition.

"Only thing is, I've got to cram more in," said Myra. "Next summer there'll be two more babies in the family, and Jack and his bride will be home from the Peace Corps, so I must figure out some more bedding-down space."

"What goes on up there on the fourth floor?" I asked, pointing to the irregular roof line broken with dormer windows.

"That in fact is the only available free space in the house. Just wild and untamed attic, where we store relics of summers past, like Grandpa's mandolin and yachting trophies. It used to be the rainy-day playroom for the children, but now I'm going to have to turn it into a couple of bedrooms, even if the ceilings are low and sometimes slanting and the rooms will be shaped like sloppily cut pieces of pie.

"The problem is how to furnish them. A low-ceilinged room always looks so claustrophobic the minute you put a dresser into it. If you could only sort of hang the furniture on the walls, a little room wouldn't seem so crowded."

I looked at her admiringly. "You may not realize it, but you and Ed Secon, who designs furniture for Fabry Associates, think exactly alike. He has indeed master-minded a whole line of 'floating' furniture, called the Imagic Group, aimed at doing exactly what you think it ought to do. Cases, chests, night tables, and shelves literally hang in midair, fastened to strips attached to the wall, leaving the floor free and giving an optical illusion of spaciousness to a room. This means, too, that floors are easy to clean and the furniture is out of reach of floor-level kicks and scratches."

Myra marveled, rather pleased with herself that she and a furniture designer should share the same philosophy. "What a great idea for a one-room apartment," she said enthusiastically, and I could tell she was maternally considering the apartment Jack and his bride were likely to dwell in next winter. "If they could only fit out the chests with linen trays and silver drawers, or even provide for hi-fi installations in the cabinets . . ."

"All of which they have already done," said I. "There's even a cork-lined hanging bar cabinet in the line. And the furniture comes in hand-rubbed walnut or rosewood."

But at this point she had ceased to listen. She was mentally partitioning the attic, weighing the merits of floral or striped wallpaper, installing tiny wash basins into wall jogs, arranging beds so that their feet headed toward the lowest point in the sloping ceilings — and, naturally, "floating" dressers, cabinets, shelves, and night tables on all straight walls.

in Solid Wild Cherry

In some ways we are 100 years behind the times. But in making fine furniture we've never found a better way than to hand-fit and finish each piece. Until we do, we'll stay 100 years behind the times. The care that goes into Empire furniture is a tradition in craftsmanship.

Here is furniture that will be just as beautiful and serviceable when your great grandchildren come to visit. ☐ For a folder on this complete collection, send 15¢ to Empire Furniture Corp., Dept. HG-2, Johnson City, Tenn.

The Hammond Organ creates a new idea—the participation room

Will your next party be a spectator-sport affair, with too many guests just by-standers? Or would you rather get everyone into the fun? Maybe what you need is this new kind of room . . . a participation room, built around the Hammond Organ!

Here, your friends have the fun of playing music — not just plugging it in. They discover the special wonders of the Hammond Organ: all the sounds from flutes and strings to marimbas, bells, bass viols, and full band or orchestra effects.

Everyone participates because everyone can play. Even one-finger tunes are enriched with Hammond Reverberation, Touch-Response Percussion, and vibrato. People who have had even a few lessons sound like real musicians. And real musicians sound magnificent.

Would you like to try the Hammond Organ before you decide? There's a special home-trial plan, described in our coupon, for just that purpose.

To get the ball rolling, mail the coupon. And truly, your next party can be a ball!

How does a bed frame become famous?

In 1946, Harvard had an idea: replace bulky wooden bedsteads and creaky slats with metal frames.

It worked just fine. Moved easily. Supported spring and mattress better. And saved people money.

The modern Hollywood bed trend started. Others copied. But Harvard developed new bed frame ideas.

Like Protecto-Caps (those little white things on the ends of the side rails) that protect linens.

Like caster sockets that operate oillessly, noiselessly.

Like railroad track steel that makes Harvard Bed Frames indestructible.

The copiers gave up long ago.

That's why no other frames have these features.

That's why you shouldn't settle for less.

"Thank you," said Mrs. Borden to me and the architect. "You seem to have turned my crazy old back porch into a perfect little sunroom for me and my house plants."

"On paper, at least," said the architect modestly.

"But let's take one final look at the plans," said I cautiously, for I knew this local garden-club lady rather well from past go-rounds with her decorating problems and her quixotic temperament. This was the last chance to forestall any future fireworks if her combination conservatory, home office, and sitting room shouldn't function according to her dreams.

"Check," said the architect. "Mrs. Borden, are you quite sure these built-in plant counters are the right working height for you?"

And while Mrs. Borden got up and went through some calisthenics, pretending she was watering plants, transplanting them, and doing whatever the initiated do to assure blue-ribbon greenery, I studied the plans again on my own hook. I envied the way the architect had neatly provided double- and even triple-purpose built-ins under the plant counters, including file drawers, equipment cabinets, a desk, and a flower-arranging sink which could also turn into a bar sink on occasions. All this was to be incorporated under the counters that lined the three new walls of sliding glass panels.

Suddenly I had that awful feeling of sheer disbelief, the thing that hits you when you've forgotten to take your passport to a foreign land. I looked at the plan again, as if by staring hard enough I could change what I saw—or, rather, what I couldn't see. But it was true. We had completely neglected to make any provision for shading that sea of glass windows. The architect could blame me for the oversight, or I could blame him, but in any case here was the dreadful moment of truth. I announced the fact meekly. But just as Mrs. Borden's smile froze rather horribly over her teeth, the architect took things in hand.

"Forget the blinds?" said he. "Of course I haven't forgotten them. My draftsman just forgot to sketch them into the plan. You, Mrs. Borden, are going to be one of the first homeowners to have the new Webb built-in blind mechanism engineered right into the ceiling and window frames. The blinds themselves will be of flexible woven wood, handsome as any hand-woven textured fabric, and you will raise and lower them simply by pinching a center clip, because they work on the same principle as the window shades on railway cars. Notched strips built into the window frames let you regulate the shades at any level. You can have them as wide as six feet across and thirteen feet high. Since they're built-in, they're most feasible with new construction, like your sunroom, and they've been working like a charm in lots of big buildings. They're made to order, of course," said he, adding suavely, "and particularly made to order for your purpose, where your plants would make it hard to get at conventional curtaining devices."

"You might have mentioned this to me before now," said Mrs. Borden testily. "How do I know how they'll look or whether I'd really like them? I must say . . ."

"My dear lady," said the architect, whose diplomacy I admire as much as his talent, "they're waiting for us right this minute at the Holland Shade Co., ready to put on a special demonstration just for you. And as for your liking them, take my word—you'll love them."

And she does—and so do I. Visiting the sunroom during the day, when these neat blinds, which are practically sunk into the woodwork, are all the way up, you'd hardly know shades were there. But at night, when the family uses the room as a sitting room, the drawn blinds turn the windows into handsomely paneled walls.—M. G.

Once there was a faucet that said "Hot," but often it told untruths. The water it delivered would turn lukewarm, cool and even cold.

So, the owner switched to a modern water heater, which means a Gas water heater, naturally. And, voila! Now the faucet that says "Hot" really means it! It gives the family all the hot water they need—for bathing, laundering, dishwashing, showering, shaving.

Gas gives instant hot water. No time wasted warming up. The second more hot water is needed, Gas comes on full force automatically. And—a Gas water heater costs less to buy and maintain.

• Do you, like so many Americans, feel a stirring of pride in our country's past and a new interest in your own personal heritage? Do you visit places like Williamsburg and Sturbridge, try to save old landmarks, read such books as A Stillness at Appomattox and John Brown's Body? Do you dig up the Monroe Doctrine to study its meaning when it makes headline news? Follow with interest a journey, reported in the papers, that retraces Columbus's voyage of discovery?

If you have such interest in the past, you will welcome into your living room (or even into your kitchen while you work) spoken history records that bring American history alive, re-enact our battles, or re-create the flavor of an era.

Such records (see our Record List at the end of this article) are building up an impressive catalog. Many experts attribute this popular interest to our cultural explosion. Others think it is the awakening by current events of a dormant sense of history; that President Kennedy expressed it when he said "the same revolutionary beliefs for which our forebears fought are still at issue all around the globe."

Whatever the reason may be, American history is getting a big run on the home record-player. People who found history in school dull and unconvincing are enjoying believable and absorbing accounts on records.

One, as lively as drama, rich in the flavor of the past, is a seven-record historical series. It brings alive the America of Andrew Jackson as a famous on-the-scene visitor from France. Alexis de Tocqueville, reported it. Drawn from De Tocqueville's history, Democracy in America, and often called the answer to Karl Marx, 14 dramatizations on records re-create his and a companion's travels through America to evaluate our budding democracy "where the rifle and the axe made all men look equally tall." De Tocqueville's diagnosis of our strengths and weaknesses, since confirmed, will make you think that this historian was gifted with uncanny prophetic powers.

Other historic records rely upon the persuasive personalities of living historians. One is Pulitzer (Please turn to page 56)

JEFF RAMSEY, FAMOUS AMERICAN BULLFIGHTER, WATCHES HIS "PUPIL" IN THE WORLD'S LARGEST BULL RING—MEXICO CITY'S 50,000 SEAT PLAZA MEXICO.

The plaza was never so plush...

Not until this aficionado arrived for a practice session in the plaza de toros. It was pure luxury in the afternoon... with a thick-pile Barwick underfoot and E.T.B. making passes with a flaming carpet cape. You'd think such elegantly textured all-Nylon carpet would cost mucho pesos. Not so. Any torero knows a man's linen handkerchief usually costs more per square yard than most fine Barwick carpets.* So Olé... for Barwick carpets!

Barwick fashions NYLON — ACRILAN — HERCULON (the longest wearing carpet fibers known) into luxurious carpets of radiant, enduring colors. From $7.95 to $24.95 per square yard at better stores everywhere.

Prize-winning historian Dr. Samuel Eliot Morison. On a ten-record series he discusses in informal conversation the major events from the arrival of Columbus to the strategy that spelled victory for America and her allies in World War II. This is exciting history to listen to, because Dr. Morison was an on-the-scene reporter. Before writing (and recording) the saga of Columbus discovering America, he retraced the voyage of 471 years ago in a replica of one of the ships of the historic group.

Records such as these are so closely tied up to history books (often, derived from them) that any gaps of knowledge on a 12-inch disk can be filled by reading. (See our Record List for titles of histories that relate to the records.) The result: First thing you know, spurred on by records to pursue a subject, you become a pretty fair expert on the Age of Jackson, Jeffersonian Democracy, the rebellion against England, the Civil War, Abraham Lincoln, or whatever phase of history will give you a better knowledge of the past.

Record List

The following LP's (33 $\frac{1}{3}$  rpm unless otherwise indicated) may be purchased from local record dealers, borrowed or rented from local public libraries, or ordered from Listening Library, Box 215, Long Branch, N. J. (Include ten cents per record for package, postage, and insurance. Minimum mailing charge is 25 cents.)

Where records are drawn from histories, titles and prices of these books are given.

From the Rosenthal Studio...

A Thought

True elegance starts by simplicity.

A Man

H. Th. Baumann, from an old Swiss glassmakers' family, is an exponent of the clear almost constructed line. He has a taste for glass and china, a sense of a total beauty.

A Product

"Linear" developed from the pure cylinder is softened only by a slight flare at the top. The very symmetry and regularity of this shape make it ideal for decoration.

The Rosenthal Studio-Line is created by leading artists and designers such as: Beate Bachem, Munich • H. Th. Baumann, Munich • Sigvard Bernadotte, Stockholm • Lucienne Day, London • Cuno Fischer, Stuttgart • Elsa Fischer-Treyden, Berlin • Carl Gustaf Hansen, Kolding • George Jensen, Chicago • Richard Latham, Chicago • Raymond Loewy, New York • Raymond Peynet, Paris • Bjørn Wiinblad, Copenhagen • Tapio Wirkkala, Helsinki... Differing in their creative intuition, but united in their endeavour to express the spirit of our times, they try to give the customer an individual choice. ■ Shown: "Linear Evensong" $24.95 per place setting... Other "Linear" Dinnerware from $15.95 to $29.95... "Linear" Crystal $5.00 per stem.

IT'S WORTH MENTIONING

By JULIE POLSHEK

Seth Thomas believes clocks can double as room furniture and admirably proves it in their Private Collection furniture clock. Handsomely designed Danish-Modern cabinetry integrates a fine electric timepiece, shelves, and a cupboard: its compact size (17¼" wide by 11" deep by 54" high) is ideally suitable for the decorating problems of corners or meager wall spaces. Finely made of select walnut. $169.50. Gimbel's, New York 1.

This stately beauty is a pin-up lamp three feet tall. Its antique tole column, held by seven-inch arms on brass wall plates, comes in mustard, white, black, spruce, French blue, antique yellow (or 30 custom colors). Weisbrod Tole Coach Lamp gives three-way lighting: control switch is in the cord. $41.90 with matching opaque-parchment shade; with silk Shantung shade (white, gold, or tan), $46.90. John Wanamaker of Philadelphia, Pa.

Magnetic base installs Tensor's auto lamp on any interior metal surface for reading, or on exterior for repair needs: power source is cigarette lighter's socket. It electronically furnishes the equivalent of 60-watt lighting with a 15-watt (1 ampere) automotive bulb; has on-off switch. An 8-foot cordset provides for the lamp's back-seat use. Gooseneck is 17 inches, folds to 6 inches. $12.95; Things Special, 864 Main Street, Darby, Pa.

When outdoor living gives way to indoor living, Rid-Jid's Patio Serv'N Style cart is just the thing for rumpus-room activities. The folding structure unfolds to locked position with a flick of the wrist; has guarded 24" by 16" trays. Powerfully built of honeycomb and tubular steel, both rust-proofed; wheels and swivel casters are cast aluminum with rubber rims. Satin-white. $29.95; B. Altman & Co., Fifth Ave., N.Y. 16.

SILVERPLATE CADDY BY GORHAM

IS
SILVERPLATE TOO!

Frequent polishing may remove some of the silver from silverplate. With the protection of Pacific Silvercloth, your silverplate will always remain in its original condition. Pacific Silvercloth is embedded with tiny particles of real silver that trap sulphur gases... the element in the atmosphere which causes tarnish. Your silverplate cannot tarnish, and therefore does not have to be polished. That is why Pacific Silvercloth is used in the finest silver chests. Also available in wraps, bags, rolls and by the yard at fine silver and department stores. It is easy to recognize by its rich brown color and the famous name Pacific stamped on the fabric.

Checked gingham smartly decorates this new insulating ware: plastic walls that "sandwich" the gingham do the insulating. Thermo-Tempware effectively keeps beverages hot or iced: remains outwardly cool in hot use, dripless with iced contents. Six mugs (10-ounce) $6.50; 48-ounce pitcher, $6.50; correlated Fiberglas tray, $5.95. Machine-washable. Red or black check. Auguste Mernick, Box 6005 Turnkey, Providence 4, R.I.

International Silver's elegant Federal Eagle switch plate is a miniature reproduction of the era's famous convex mirror. Brilliantly polished "bull's eye" gives the illusion of a mirror inset; its two-dimensional frame is finely detailed embossing; plane surfaces have satin polish. Heavily silver-plated, or can be had brass-plated; either has nontarnish finish. $2.95; Gifts for Giving, 2511-21 W. York, Philadelphia 22, Pennsylvania.

Evident convenience is gained with this holder for boiling or cooking eggs and subsequently transferring them to the breakfast table. The holder keeps each egg separately and uniformly exposed to heat, assuring a perfectly cooked batch. The footed platform holds 6 eggs; has removable handle; is entirely anodized aluminum. Costs $1.50; from Aids-to-Cooking, 112 N.Y. Building, St. Paul 1, Minn.

This find is a one-ounce mask, truly comfortable, easily breathed through, very effective in filtering out dust, pollen, paint spray, household spray, or sawdust. Frame is flexible plastic, self-adjusting in fit, wearable with goggles or glasses; held by nonslip headband. Filter is a washable, reusable insert of honeycomb-foam. All parts of Flex-A-Lite mask are nonallergic, nontoxic. $1.98; Miles Kimball, 33 Algoma Blvd., Oshkosh, Wisconsin.

After filling Aquamatic Planter's reservoir, the planting becomes self-watering for up to 30 days (depends on plant type, etc.); an ideal setup for vacationers. Vacuum controlled capillary action which feeds the plant is engineered for just-right water supply exactly when needed. Ideal for African violets. Hollow walls and base are the reservoir. $1.25; 7" by 4" by 3" marbled plastic structure. From F. R. Parsons, Sutton, Mass.

If your house needs big bouquets

Why not have a shrub-cutting garden?

By ELSIE LOUISE SCULTHORP

• Have you ever wanted big, generous, long-stemmed bouquets for the house, but not wanted to completely denude the garden to cut flowers sufficient for your purpose? And are you tired of just gladioli?

The answer is flowering shrubs. We seem to forget that they are also a source of cut flowers. With a careful selection from the great number of beautiful shrubs available, we can have flowers from them nearly all year round. Shrubs will furnish fine, large sprays of bloom that will be decorative and vase-filling, and in most cases, if your cutting is knowledgeably done when you cut your bouquets, you can give the bush the pruning it usually needs.

There's a bewildering variety of flowering shrubs. They bear all sorts of flowers—single, double, in clusters: in all colors—pink, white, red, blue, yellow, purple. Some have handsome foliage, also good for cutting. Some have foliage with beautiful fall color; many bear ornamental fruit, also fine for house decorative purposes, and, incidentally, as food for the wild birds.

Flowering shrubs vary in height: some are useful as ground covers, some grow in different heights to fifteen feet or more. Some of the tall kinds, when carefully pruned and trained, make handsome and unusual small trees. Shrubs take many different forms: some are of drooping habit, some erect or horizontal in growth; there are shrubs with leaves large or small, cut-leaved, compound, and feathery; shrubs that require no pruning; shrubs that thrive under neglect, that are insect- and pest-free; shrubs suitable for screen planting, for either trimmed or billowing hedges; shrubs for the rock garden, for the waterside, for dry places. Some are evergreen, some deciduous. There are shrubs for sunny places, for shady locations, for the seashore, for adverse city conditions. In fact, there is such a variety available that there is no place for which some suitable and beautiful shrub cannot be found.

Shrubs have many advantages. They don't need constant maintenance and weeding; don't need to be divided, staked, or transplanted, as do perennials. Once planted, they increase in size, beauty, and usefulness each year. Shrubs are easy to take care of—all most of them need is an occasional pruning to keep them shapely (and within bounds, if you've chosen the robust sorts), and an occasional feeding.

In a small garden, their main disadvantage is that they take up room, but this objection can be overcome by selecting either the smaller sorts or a very few of the tall and wide-spreading kinds. You should select shrubs that do not usually exceed in ultimate height the effect you wish to create, or shrubs that can be easily kept to the size you need.

THEIR placement requires a great deal of planning and thought. It is not as easy to move shrubs around as it is to transplant perennials. Proper placing of flowering shrubs is always a difficult matter, but whatever you do with them, don't make a "mixed" shrub border, a complicated and difficult planting. No plant can develop properly when it is crowded against other shrubs, fighting for space, light, air, and nourishment: there's just too much competition. Each shrub should have room to develop its characteristic habit of growth—it will be pleasanter to look at, and it will grow and bloom much better. While no one wants shrubs dotted about the lawn in the Victorian manner, this method of planting had much to recommend it. Each plant stood free and so could get light, air, and sunshine from all sides, to its great advantage.

Try to curb your desire to have one of each kind in the catalog. The collecting instinct is the gardener's besetting sin, and there's no known cure—only discipline works. Select a few kinds that you like for one reason or another—fragrance, color, sentiment—and that will do well under the conditions you can provide. We're concerned here with shrubs that will yield cut flowers, and this will limit your choice.

WHY NOT HAVE A SHRUB-CUTTING GARDEN?

HAVING surveyed your garden with a critical eye, try to decide where a shrub is needed and what kind would look well there. Only then can you go back to your catalogs—or nursery, and say, perhaps, "A Viburnum tomentosum would look lovely against my dark fence, and I'd like to have something with fragrant flowers on or near the terrace so I can enjoy the perfume when I'm sitting there." Perhaps you already have an evergreen hedge or a group of dark-green conifers—what could possibly be more enchanting against such a background than a well-grown Kolkwitzia amabilis ("the lovable Kolkwitzia" Beauty Bush) with its gracefully arching branches laden with pink flowers, and later, interesting fuzzy gray seed pods; or a lovely Enkianthus, with its delicate, lovely, drooping clusters of pink and white flowers and its beautiful fall color? Flowers, so displayed, would probably give more pleasure than a dozen flowering shrubs carelessly placed or crowded together. Enkianthus is so slow-growing it can't be cut freely, but it is such a delightful plant and flower that even a small spray will be a conversation starter. Try to place it where it can display its color and habit of growth to best advantage, and where it can be seen and enjoyed from inside the house. The smaller the garden, the more care must be used in the selection and placement of your flowering shrubs.

The ideal way to make a shrub-cutting garden, perhaps not feasible for most of us because of lack of room, is to plant the shrubs in an open, sunny place where they are spaced far enough apart to grow naturally. If you have enough room, you can have as many as you like of the largest, spreadiest kinds. Perhaps you could surround your vegetable garden with a single row of well-spaced flowering shrubs. This might also be a fine place to plant a collection of lilac, which are wonderful for cutting. If you have enough room, an interesting (and efficient) effect could be gained by putting the shrubs into separate beds. Perhaps you could edge the beds with spring bulbs, also for cutting. This will save the main garden from being denuded of this welcome spring bloom.

Some flowering shrubs are small enough to go into the perennial beds, but avoid overdoing this as their size, even though they are small, will make unequal demands on the available plant food and in time they'll crowd out the lawful occupants of the bed.

If your space is limited, avoid selecting shrubs that grow very tall and are very spreading. Years ago, when I made my first garden, in my ignorance and enthusiasm I bought a large number of flowering shrubs of all sizes and shapes (at least three times as many as I needed, had I known their habits) and planted them in a mixed border. It has kept me busy ever since trying to keep up with it. Among the plants selected were several of the bush honeysuckles (the nurseryman said they would make a good screen, and that's what I wanted) that grew and grew beyond all imagining, to my astonishment and dismay. They are now twelve to fifteen feet high, and just as broad. The only bush honeysuckle that I'd buy again for such a garden (although that, too, is now overgrown and misshapen) is Lonicera fragrantissima (winter honeysuckle). I'd plant that again, but place it differently. No shrub collection should be without this delightful shrub, because of the delicious fragrance of its very early, very small, cream-colored flowers and its nearly evergreen rounded and handsome leaves.

DON'T hesitate to ask your nurseryman for unusual and out-of-the-ordinary plants. Only by creating a demand for something different will nurserymen be encouraged to make such plants available. And don't buy your shrubs in very small sizes; you'll have to wait too long for those big bouquets and besides, you'll be tempted to plant them too close together, and end up with a jungle. And you will have spent more money than necessary.

Some shrubs are difficult to transplant and need special care. Ask your nurseryman about this. A good nurseryman will always be glad to answer your questions.

The following is a partial list of good flowering shrubs. Most of the shrubs on the list are hardy enough to withstand the winters in the United States except in the very coldest sections. The few less hardy shrubs are indicated by an asterisk.

Visualize Before You Modernize!

Your DSC* building materials dealer can help you with a professional design service that interprets your ideas into visual form, enabling you to "Visualize before you Modernize." You get a beautiful color rendering, complete with construction details. See the DSC planning center in your dealer's store, and look through the book of remodeling ideas. See and test the actual samples of beautiful and long-lasting Masonite products that contribute so much in modernizing and beautifying your home.

*DSC means Design-Service-Counsel and designates those building materials dealers, registered by Masonite Corporation, who provide extra remodeling services to take the work and worry off your shoulders.

Happily Ever After

That's how the stories end. But your marriage is just the beginning...the beginning of new hopes, of new plans, of a new life. Together you will decide on the kind of home you want...and together you will start to buy all the many things you need to realize your new life.

With so many products to choose from these days, it's sometimes hard to know which one is best for you...

which one will give you most service and value. One of the best ways to decide is by name. If you buy a name brand in furniture or home furnishings, you know what the name stands for. Then you can be sure of getting what you have a right to expect, of what you have paid for.

A name brand means quality because the manufacturer stands behind the design, the materials, the workmanship of his merchandise.

A name brand means confidence that you have made a good investment.

A name brand means pleasure—the pleasure of buying an original and not some nameless copy...the pleasure of seeing it fit perfectly into your home...the pleasure of living with it happily—well, perhaps not ever after, but for many years.

Brand Names Foundation, Inc., 292 Madison Avenue, New York 17, N.Y.,

Five new
"see through"
weaves

only $2.98 a yard
and it's 10 feet wide!

Decorators and architects "up end" one piece to drape the widest window floor-to-ceiling—no seams to sew or show. Seven heavy, sturdy cottons launder fluff-dry, never ironed—in primitive weaves that look handwoven. Smart, too, for slip covers, bedspreads, tablecloths. Natural, white, or custom matched to your swatch or paint chip. Plus 5 new "see through" weaves. All 2.98 to 5.25 yd.

world's widest seamless draperies!

Your choice of yardage, do-it-yourself pleating materials—or prepleated yardage—or complete, made to measure draperies (hand-somer at low, low cost because they're seamless). For brochure and 34 samples, send 25¢ to Beverly Hills or Glenview address.

Ice Cube Tray Caddy

If you have a knack that lets you neatly stack trays in the freezing compartment—and don't have to hew and hack to get them out again—congratulations! But if you are like us—you need this! It's a rack that holds four trays—each in a separate section, promotes faster freezing by letting cold air circulate all around and they're easier to remove. Vinyl coated wire caddy is  $5\frac{1}{2} \times 8 \times 10\frac{1}{2}$ ".

7016-6—Ice Tray Caddy, $2.69

Pan 'n' Tray Organizer

If you want to really organize your cupboard into a paragon of neatness—don't pile pans, tins, trays—file them! This clever new organizer takes pie pans, cookie sheets, baking pans and serving trays in four big compartments—a number of them in each. Sturdy steel wire with non-clatter white vinyl cushion coating. When you need a pan, take it out of its compartment without unstacking or disturbing the rest. Organizer is  $8 \times 10 \times 10$ ".

7524-6—Pan 'n' Tray Rack ... $2.49

Box Toppers

Cover every opened box—you'll preserve freshness, crispness and keep dust out of the food! Set is sized to fit everything from a baking soda box to the biggest cereal or soap box. There are eight different sized covers made of durable clear plastic with elastic edges that hold them tight. You'll really appreciate them if you have several kinds of cereal going at once—you won't dip into the boxes to find the cereal limp and stale! Set of 8.

7038-6—Box Toppers ... 1 set, $1

Dinnerware Storage Rack

Bet you never dreamed you could store a whole dinner service for eight in just  $17\frac{1}{2} \times 9 \times 9$ " of shelf space! You can—and safely, too, with this compact rack of heavy steel with white vinyl cushion coating that keeps dishes from chipping and rattling. It holds eight dinner plates of average thickness, cups, saucers, bread and butter and fruit plates, each in its own compartment.

XL245-6—Dinnerware Rack, $3.49

Striped Rope Carryall Bag

Carry your purchases—no matter how numerous, large or heavy—in this smart, woven rope carryall with its brilliant multi-colored gay stripes! #### Bouffant Skirt Notes

Send us most any girl's name—with rare exceptions, we can work it into the skirt of a dainty Southern Belle! Name and drawing are done in white on a cool blue background. Slim Notes are  $3 \times 6\frac{1}{2}$ "—box has 40 with 40 plain white envelopes. Informals are  $3\frac{1}{2} \times 4\frac{1}{2}$ " folded size—box has 30 with 30 envelopes. The notes are sweetly feminine and so different! Please print name clearly.

RF251-6—Slim Notes ... 1 box, $2

RF331-6—Informals ... 1 box, $1.50

Saddle Potty

When you're midway between go-as-you-please and toilet training—this restrains the go-as-you-please attitude! It's a very novel potty shaped like a Western saddle with saddle markings—the horn's a big deflector. Mom keeps it on the floor and pint-size buckaroos and little cowgirls can easily reach it—taking care of Nature's demands becomes a game! Potty is sturdy plastic.

2331-6—Potty,  $6 \times 7\frac{1}{2} \times 9$ ", \$1.98

SELLING BY MAIL CAN BE PROFITABLE

Many successful businesses have been started on a small scale through mail order advertising. What makes mail order selling so profitable for so many people?

1. Minimum initial investment. You invest your money only where it pays off; in ads like those you see in this section of HOUSE BEAUTIFUL.
  2. Controlled Inventory. You stock only what you are advertising and selling at the moment.
  3. Nation-wide Sales. Your mail order advertising reaches prospects throughout the country, not just in your community.
- WANT TO LEARN MORE? HOUSE BEAUTIFUL, first in mail order advertising, is first in mail order know-how. We tell you what we know in our special kit called "Mail Order Facts". No charge! So write today to be in on the big Christmas season.

LOOK MA, NO SEAMS!

Primitive textures have an affinity for modern. Nubby cotton homespuns 100 to 120" wide are handsome. Decorators "up end" one piece to drape the widest window floor-to-ceiling. For slip covers, bedspreads. Natural, white, or custom matched from $2.98 yd. Brochure, 34 samples, 25¢. Homespun House, 261 S. Robertson, Beverly Hills 33, Calif.

MARBLE CARE KIT contains a miracle-acting remover that eradicates ring marks, cigarette stains, blemishes from marble-top tables. It's easy to use, will not deface your precious marble. Apply marble polish for glowing luster, protection from dirt and stains. Kit, $5.95. Marble Stain Remover, $3.23. Marble Polish, $3.23. International Marble, HB, 9 Wyckoff, Brooklyn 37, N.Y.

COUNTRY STYLE. Imagine an old-fashioned four-poster bed in a room with a Boston rocker, and you'll know what there is about these deliciously full dust ruffles. In three drop lengths (15", 20", or 25") with 2" hems, unbleached muslin twin- or full-size ruffle, $8 each. Bleached, $10 each. Country Curtains, Dept. HB9, Stockbridge, Mass.

FLUTE SONG. Of all the musical instruments with which we are familiar, we think the flute is the most fun. Intricately hand-carved of natural dark fruitwood in Yugoslavia, this 12½" flute is widely played through the entire country. The rich tone and fine workmanship belie the low price. $1 ea. Shopping International, Dept. 696, 25 North Main St., White River Junction, Vermont.

RECIPE CARDS are the greatest identifiers that ever brought your loaned-out recipe for Ragout Bordelaise or Duckling à l'Orange back to your kitchen file. 3 x 5" cards with old-fashioned stove and mixing bowl motif are printed in red on white with "From the recipe file of (your name in black)." 100 for $2.75; 200 (with same name), $5. Bruce Bolind, HB9, Boulder 51, Colo.

HOW YOU CAN BEAUTIFY YOUR KITCHEN WITH CASTOGLAS

Here is one way of converting a dark and outmoded kitchen into a bright and cheerful room at a price you can afford. Castoglas was used in three ways: for making the decorative glass screen, for the tiles with embedments of leaves and butterflies, and for "glassing" the countertop. Liquid Castoglas was poured upon inexpensive, non-warping flakeboard to produce a glass-like, waterproof finish that is heat- and acid-resistant and easily cleaned. You and your family can create your own individual designs and do all the work yourselves without special tools, without heat, without any previous experience. How much does it cost? About 12¢ for 4 x 4 inch tile and 18¢ per sq. ft. for the countertop—only a fraction of what you would pay if you could buy the finished work. Two booklets—"How to Make Decorative Glass Panels" and "How You Can Beautify Your Kitchen With Castoglas"—explain in simple-to-follow directions how to do it. For your copies, mail 25¢ to Dept. 84-K.

LIGHT THE WAY WITH BAR

BAR LAMP

This is reminiscent of the days when mustachioed men in high collars stopped in their favorite place for a frothy stein of brew before taking a trolley home. Right out of the nineties, it is black wrought iron with a milky white glass globe with "Bar" in the old "playbill" letters. It's a "show-stopper" over a bar in den or rumpus room. 12" x 13" overall, it takes a standard light bulb. $10.95

THE ORIGINAL PORTRAIT KIT

We, the originators of oil-portrait number kits have enabled thousands of people with no prior experience to paint quality portraits of loved ones. Our exclusive system gives you the finest reproduction at the lowest possible price. No misshapen abstracts! From your photo or color slide (any size) every brush stroke area is outlined and numbered on a fine mounted 18" x 20" canvas (standard portrait size). Twenty-four cups of individually-mixed artists oil paints marked for the numbered areas are provided with screw cap lids to preserve freshness. The kit also includes: an artists palette, fine brushes, brush cleaner, and a color reproduction with instructions to show you how to make each brush stroke for maximum effect. Please indicate hair and eye coloring. All photos returned unharmed.

BRIGHT STUDENT lamp table is all things to all midnight-oil burners. Black anodized aluminum, it’s adjustable to any angle from 0 to 45° to shed light, merely electrical, on a page of Latin your high school scholar is battling. It folds to fit file cabinet or desk drawer. 14" w., 13" d., 12½" h., with 8' cord, 40 watt lamp, $9.95. Riteway, Spence Field Ind. Park, Moultrie, Ga.

A FINE RECOVERY is our prognosis if you doctor your last year’s butterfly chairs with these covers. In black, white or tan leather $26.95. White, black, turquoise or orange leather-like plastic $6.95. Black, natural, green, yellow, turquoise, tangerine or coral canvas $3.95. Fits standard or king-size frames. Frames $6 ea. Patio Sales, HB9, Box 25, Highland Park, Ill.

TAKE THE CALL at a luxurious stand in colors to match your phone—blue, beige, gray, turquoise, white, green, yellow, pink. Made from solid steel, it has matching directory and memo-pad in pull-out drawer, dialing pen and magnifying lens. Portable stand, 25" high, $13.95. In gold plate, $19.95. Exp. coll. Northbrook, 1450 Frontage Rd., Northbrook, Ill.

GRANDE FINALE to a terrace supper under a soft summer sky is this brass Aftaba demi-tasse set. The hand-engraved replica of an ancient coffee server from India has a swanlike grace and it comes with six engraved demi-tasse cups on a matching 10x14" serving tray. $9.88 from Palley’s, HB9, 2263 E. Vernon Ave., Los Angeles 38, California.

NOW IT CAN BE TOLE that this is an accommodating pair. Load the tray in the kitchen, place it on its stand in the dining room. For buffets, parties, as an extra table, galleried black or gold metal tray, 22 x 16", is hand-painted with floral splash. Black wooden stand 19½" h. folds. $12.95 set. Stand alone, $4.95. Edward H. Ziff, HB9, Box 3072 Mdse. Mart Pl., Chicago 54.

CLEAR YOUR DRAIN in seconds with a powerful jet stream of harmless gas from this aerosol cartridge. It cleans sluggish sinks, toilets, tubs; is safe for sewers, septic tanks, garbage disposals. Soft rubber nozzle fits in the drain; handle releases jet action then folds back for storage. $6.95 plus 75c post. Hanover House, Dept. 3400, Hanover, Pennsylvania.

O-PEEL-O works wonders with orange and grapefruit, it strips them right down to their skin. It's a marvel when you section citrus for a fruit cup, want rind for a marmalade or thin lemon wafers. Try it for radish rosettes, to peel garnishes for party plates. Buy several for hostess gifts! Of bright stainless steel, $1 each. Overseas House, Box 308, Mt. Prospect, Illinois.

BIRD-BAN. We draw the line at the sill, Mr. Pigeon, for you and your fine-feathered friends with this harmless repellent. It keeps birds at a distance, from nesting in gutters. Long-lasting strip of protection sticks to any clean surface, does not harm birds, flows from a 10½ oz. cartridge, covers 25-30'. $2.85. Chem-O-Craft, HB9, Box 208, Argo, Ill.

A GIANT BARREL. used only once to carry delicate crystal and china from France, is hand-made of wood and has authentic shipping marks. It's perfect for plantings, garden tool storage, as a hideaway for the children. We think a pair would be spectacular as porch side tables. 32 to 36" in diam., 36 to 38" high. $5. Shipping coll. Baccarat, HB, 55 E. 57 St., N.Y. 22.

PLAY IT BY EAR. A professional stethoscope, designed for doctors, nurses and students, is priced so unbelievably low that we can't imagine every household not having one. A mother will use it to check a child's cough. Little girls will use it to listen to a doll's chest. A teenager will use it to check his hot rod. $2.98. Wardaby, HB9, 3-5 Mt. Hope Place, New York 53.

LIFE SAVER. In case of fire these household alarms automatically ring with a vigorous clamor. Full-time protectors, they wind like a clock and run without wiring or batteries. A sound investment to safeguard your family, your home, hang one in each danger spot—beside the furnace or fuse box, in the kitchen. $6.98. Firewarning, Inc., 30 Church St., N.Y. 7.

SILVER PLUS is a wipe-on wonder that replates worn silver pieces. Developed by a plating-equipment manufacturer, this solution polishes and deposits pure silver as you wipe it on silver plate that's worn down to the copper, brass or bronze, helps keep its silver beauty. 4-oz. bottle, $2 plus 25¢ post. Empire, HB9, 140 Marbledale Rd., Tuckahoe, N.Y.

HAVE A FUN GARDEN

By E. C. POLATIN

• I've been gardening some 20-odd years. I don't consider myself an expert, not by any means. I'm not exactly ignorant, and I'll confess to owning a garden encyclopedia and studying catalogs. But primarily I play it by instinct. I guess I'm like those art lovers who "just know what they like" but can't always tell you why. After working on four or five gardens, picking up where others left off, and now starting one from scratch with absolutely nothing there except some trees and builders' mess, I know what I like.

I like a garden that's fun, that grows and multiplies, that's always in color, that makes people pause and smile with pleasure, that gives me good healthy exercise and creative satisfaction without back-breaking labor and vexing rules and routines to follow.

Do I have such a garden? After 22 years of trying, I think I can finally say, "Yes, I do." And how did I achieve it? By pigheadedly ignoring all the experts' advice and blithely breaking most of the gardening rules. There's only one rule I have never broken: nature's rule. I always yield to nature and submit to her guidance.

If I see that a plant will not thrive in the particular spot that I have chosen because I desired a certain effect, I no longer feed and water it obstinately to force it to grow there. I simply take it out and replant it in another spot where conditions of soil and sun or shade are entirely different, till I find the spot where it will thrive. Once the plant begins to flourish, I try multiplying it by pulling out little side shoots for different parts of the garden. If they take hold, fine; if they don't, nothing is lost. I can always go on trying.

That is how I multiplied one clump of bleeding heart till its offspring now grow all over my garden, in the most unexpected and unlikely places, as well as in the gardens of friends to whom I gave roots. Funkia, ajuga, sweet William, monarda, lythrum, snakeroot, coral bells, lemon verbena, myrtle, candytuft, creeping phlox, euonymus, polygonum, veronica, chrysanthemums—all of these, as well as day lilies, early spring blue phlox, iris, primroses, and practically every perennial in my garden, have been multiplied just that way: just by gently loosening and yanking away little side roots and sticking them in somewhere else. Never, never, never have I dug up the entire parent plant and then divided it (as the rules tell you to do).

Shrubs are something else again. I've pulled up a whole clump of forsythia, weigela, deutzia, lilac, spirea, kerria, or any other flowering shrub, and simply hacked through the roots till I got three, four or even five good healthy plants out of the original one. The largest clump I put back where the shrub was originally; the rest I plant wherever I happen to want that kind of color at that time.

I OFTEN bring in branches of forsythia for forcing, then leave them in water after the blossoms die and even after leaves begin to grow. This gives me roots to plant in the garden. I cut the branches in February, leave them till April or May; then I have new baby shrubs. Pussywillow will do that, and sometimes hydrangea will too. It's all a bonus for the garden.

With roses I am considered decidedly unorthodox, but my roses bloom and bloom, long past frost. What do I do? Let me think. When you work by instinct, you really have to stop and ask yourself what you do. First of all, I never prune my roses back hard, only as much as has been winter-killed. Then, I believe, I treat my roses as if they were fruit trees, leaving them open in the center, so that they grow outward. After first bloom, I simply pick off the faded flowers. The bushes go right on blooming. I never prune unless they get too bunched on top; then I cut out the shoots that are growing inward or that are crossing each other. Yes, very much like a fruit tree.

Sometimes, if a thick, mature rosebush seems to be ready for a drastic treatment, I simply dig up the entire bush and hack it into two bushes, as I do with flowering shrubs. You can usually tell when a rosebush is ready by feeling gently around the roots. If thick canes seem to be growing in V shape away from the central root, there is a good chance that you can slice right through and get two healthy roots out of one. My rose-fancier friends are horrified by this procedure, but my roses seem to enjoy it. I have 150 rosebushes flourishing right now, and I certainly did not buy half that number to start with.

Another way I multiply roses is by sticking pieces I've snipped off into the ground, way down deep. My philosophy here is the same as with the perennials: If they take, fine; if they don't, nothing is lost. About one-third of them take, so I'm that much ahead of the game.

What kind of roses? All kinds: hybrids, climbers, ramblers, grandifloras. My favorites, though, are the floribundas. They are the least trouble, require the least spraying, and give the most generous return in constant clusters of flowers. My special favorites are Betty Prior, Masquerade, Vogue, Fashion. Pink Bountiful, Fire Chief, Spartan, and all the reds. But among the hybrids I still love Crimson Glory, Poinsettia, and Christopher Stone; among the climbers, Blaze is my favorite. I just love red roses. The little Dorothy Perkins rambler is another favorite. I multiplied one of those into about twenty, by constantly hacking through the roots as they matured and seemed ready for dividing.

AZALEAS have also been divided that way through the years in our various gardens. In fact, practically all the azaleas we have here in our new garden are the offspring of the huge azaleas we left behind in our last garden. Some of the parent azaleas we were able to dig up and divide, by cutting through the huge roots: then we'd put back the bigger clump to remain and take the smaller piece along. With other plants, we found we could gently loosen little side shoots from the parent plant. Back went the big parent, while we took the babies. Dozens of those baby azaleas are flourishing in their new setting.

I have multiplied rhododendrons in all sorts of ways: by hacking through the roots, by bending down one long shoot and covering it with earth and a rock for two years or so and then uncovering and removing the root that formed, and also by planting the 10-inch tip of a branch deep down in the earth and forgetting all about it. Sometimes the tip would grow: sometimes not. Always a wonderful surprise when it does!

Phlox? Now the books will tell you never to let it go to seed. Well, why not? I keep picking the seed heads off the perpetuate bloom for two months, but I toss those seed heads into some corner where I'd like to have phlox growing wild. Lots of the seed has taken, with the result that phlox is constantly springing up where I least expect it. Since I love wild phlox, I have no objection to the magenta colors one is supposed to avoid.

As I walk about the garden, I look for areas that need color. I decide what the color ought to be. Then I ramble all over the place to see what I have in bloom somewhere else. When I find something I like, I pull out a root or two and stick it in the ground where color is needed.

When I say "stick it in the ground" I mean just that, for half the time I haven't a trowel at hand and simply make a hole with my gloved fingers. I can do that because of the condition of the soil, which is loose and loamy, permitting roots to be pulled out and stuck in with the greatest of ease and no shock to plants.

For over 12 years, long before I ever heard of organic gardening, I have not done a smidgen of cultivating. No roots of plants are ever disturbed in my garden. Leaves remain where they fall among all shrubs, trees, and perennials. After hard frost, fertilizer and peat moss are spread as winter cover. That gives everything a good spring start. In middle or late June, to protect against the drought of July, I spread more fertilizer and lots of peat moss. The result over the years: good, rich, loamy soil.

Oh, like all inveterate gardeners, I have a few quirks, which rule certain things out of my garden. For instance, when I think of daffodils I see fields of waving yellow, so there are no pink daffodils in my garden. Columbines, veronica, wisteria all suggest blue, so I am cool to color innovations. I guess I'm just old-fashioned, and that's why I have an old-fashioned, thrifty, multiplying garden which is so much fun that I think others should try making up their own rules, too. Just follow nature, and you can't go too far wrong.

How to leave home and like it

LOOK where you're going

You'll see many similarities in this fast-changing world, but there's still more to take in than ever before

By MARION GOUGH

■ A current cliché, bound to be overheard whenever two or three American travelers are gathered together, is that the whole world is beginning to seem the same, stamped with unmistakable reminders of home. By this is meant that there are traffic jams in England's cathedral towns, and TV antennae sprouting through whatever thatched roofs are left in the Irish countryside, and blank-faced skyscrapers are elbowing aside the gray stone palaces and half-timbered buildings that we've always associated with romantic, strange places. Ice water now flows like—well, like wine, and there isn't a bartender from the Piccola Marina to Helsingfors who cannot oblige with a decent dry Martini.

All this is pretty true. But we have the impression that many of our traveling countrymen feel as if they're not getting their full quota of the quaint and the curious that they'd been hoping to escape to.

Our contention is that travel never offered more fascination, and often it is the very familiarities that provide it. It brightens our day to note that there is a Chinese restaurant in Cork, just as there is one in Stratford-on-Avon not far from the Judith Shakespeare restaurant, which specializes in wimpies. Why shouldn't the time-hallowed Mitre in Oxford, with its labyrinthine stairways and tipsy corridors, its waiters in tails and its lobby the home of an ancient machine that purveys only one-penny stamps, turn its backyard into a Californian (Please turn to page 197)

The treasure under your hand

• It is not surprising that in a nation founded on the frontier idea we are still looking for the new and different. In searching for a better home, it is easy to see the bright and shining new. It is not so easy to look at the old and still see the new. This whole issue is dedicated to helping you look at older houses and finding the hidden values in these treasures—the spacious rooms, the loving care in construction, the mature gardens, the convenient locations. Here are stories of 18 remodelings, detailed in before-and-after photographs, drawings, plans. After a study of them, you will know how to look at the old—but see the new.

TWO COLOR PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAYNARD PARKER

In the living room, the finely crafted woodwork was stripped of its white paint to reveal the original beauty of the red cedar. The bold Victorian pattern in the wall panels was replaced with Japanese silk paper (also used in panels of the sliding doors) to set off the richness of the room's detailing.

The living-room ceiling, which was blue, was repainted white to bring out the richness of detail in the ornamental plaster work and to restore the proportions of the room. Hanging chandeliers were removed and remodeled into candelabra now standing on tables at both sides of the handsome fireplace.

Maybe drastic changes aren't needed

This old beauty now lives again because its owner—an architect—recognized the good qualities inherent in it

By CURTIS BESINGER

● We, as a society, are so newness-minded that we often fail to recognize the good—which may not be new. We have all seen perfectly good old buildings destroyed simply because they were not new. Or, perhaps worse, we have seen them desecrated in an effort to make them appear new.

The house shown here is an example of what can happen if the good features of an old building are recognized and its integrity is respected. As can be seen, no effort was made to make it into something that it was not. However, the house was revitalized; it was very (Please turn the page) defly given a subtle freshness. The photos of the interior are an illustration of the effectiveness of this action.

It is a Tudor-style house. It was built in 1909 and at a cost of $100,000. With the shifting of population and the change in land use within the city of Seattle, it had declined from a distinguished residence into a boarding house. Many cities have similar houses that are conveniently located near what is now the heart of things. Many of them are worth reconsideration as places of residence.

This house, typical of the better houses built in its day, would be difficult and costly to duplicate today. Where could one find plasterers capable of doing these decorative ceilings, or woodworkers who could execute the carved oak staircase and the other finely detailed, furniturelike millwork? And, if one found them, who could afford to pay such artists for doing this kind of work?

The dining room, seen framed through living-room doorway in photo at left, is paneled with oak. The floors, originally a golden oak finish, have been bleached and refinished. The ornamental plaster work was retained in its original state. The 18th-century French crystal chandelier, wired by Irene McGowen, has extra flame lights beneath for greater sparkle.

A view of the Jacobeanlike carved oak of the main entrance staircase is seen at right through partially open doors to the living room. This quality of craftsmanship, also seen in the detail of doors, would be difficult to duplicate today.

These factors—plus the solid construction of the house—were, however, not sufficient to convince Roland Terry, an architect known as a designer of contemporary homes, that he should buy the house and renovate it for his use.

What did do the convincing was not the decoration or construction but the seemingly contemporary, well-thought-out and carefully integrated plan of the house, and the implementation of this in the beautiful proportioning of the rooms themselves and of their relationship to each other. None of the rooms was too large or too small. All were the right size in relation to each other. All of them were in the right position in interrelationship and to the lot on which the house stands, and the environment in which it stands. The decorative (Please turn the page)

The present library, adjoining the living room, was formerly the sunroom. On the north side of the room, seen in photo below, windows were closed to make a place for books. This closure also gave the room privacy from the street and less glass area. A corner cabinet at right was removed to make a display niche for a part of a pre-Columbian art collection.

FOUR PHOTOGRAPHS BY MATNARD PARKER

A brick-paved terrace adjoining the living room and library was enlarged to provide a garden area to the west where one can sit in the warmth of the late-afternoon sun. This area, screened from the street by a hedge, is a welcome feature in Seattle climate. Added paving reduces amount of lawn care.

Water spouting into a pool from two repoussé copper heads, Mexican copies of pre-Columbian sculpture, form the source of the narrow watercourse that extends the full width of garden (see photo on opposite page). Against the wood wall at left of photo are carved totems from British Columbia.

Although not new, this solidly built house was in sound condition and had many features deemed essential to modern living. For example: The front area of the house is paved for ease of maintenance and to make it possible for a guest to drive up to front door, step out under its sheltering canopy.

enrichment and the soundness of the structure were an enhancement of this essential rightness.

Although the house is stylistic in treatment, its turn-of-the-century plan anticipated and incorporated many features that are desired today. Guests could drive directly up to the main entrance and step out of their cars under the shelter of the entrance canopy. The main-floor level was the same as that of the garden, so that it would be possible to move easily from the inside to the outside. The main area of the garden was on the south side of the house, on the side away from the street and where sunlight and climate are best in the Seattle area. There was a garden area to the west of the house that could be developed as a place to sit in the warmth of the late-afternoon sun. The main living areas of the house were favorably related to the garden. And there was the possibility of making full development of the lot as usable outdoor space.

In this instance, the recognition of the qualities and the anticipation of how new life could be breathed into this old house was the creative act of the architect-owner and not the making of something entirely new. The actual changes in the house itself that were needed to achieve this revitalization were relatively few in number.

In the living room, the Western red cedar woodwork was stripped of coats of white paint to reveal the natural beauty of the wood. The ceiling, which had been painted blue in some previous effort at modernization, was painted white to restore the original proportions of the room. The strong-

The garden, planned for intensive use and low maintenance, is a remodeling of the former design—quadrants of grass formed by paths crossing at a sundial centered on the axis of the entrance hall and the projecting bay of dining room. The pattern of the former garden appears in the watercourse and the central fountain, but large areas of grass were replaced with brick paving to create areas for outdoor living.

patterned Victorian wallpaper in the panels around the room was replaced with a Japanese silk paper that quietly sets off the room's rich ornamentation instead of competing with it for attention. The floor, which had a golden oak finish, was bleached to reduce this strong element of color. Light fixtures hanging from the ceiling were removed and remodeled into the candelabra which now stand on tables at the sides of the handsome fireplace.

Even fewer changes were made in the dining room. In addition to bleaching the floor, an 18th-century French crystal chandelier, wired by Irene McGowen, was installed. Additional handmade Belgian flame lights were added beneath for greater sparkle. Irene McGowen also designed the installation of eleven low-voltage aircraft spotlights, concealed in the coffering of the ceiling and used to highlight objects within the room.

The major structural change in the lower floor of the house was the conversion of the sunroom into a study. Here, windows on the north side of the room were closed and made into bookshelves. This also gave the room greater privacy from the street and less exposed glass area. The exposed brickwork beneath the remaining windows was covered and insulated to make the room more comfortable in cool weather. An existing corner cabinet was removed to make a display niche for a part of a collection of pre-Columbian art.

With all of these relatively minor changes was combined a highly developed sense of selectiveness in the furnishings used in the room and in the combining of old and new.

The major change took place entirely outside the house, in the remodeling of the garden in order to make it into an outdoor space that would be more usable and that would require less time and effort to maintain. The chief feature of the former garden, designed by the Olmstead brothers of Boston—also designers of Central Park in New York City—was a quadrangle of grass with paths intersecting at a sundial centered on the axis (Please turn to page 213)

A barn gives you soaring space you can't afford to build today

By GUY HENLE

PHOTOGRAPHS BY NEAL P. DAVIS

● What is the eternal appeal of a barn? Part of it must be pure nostalgia for the simple rudimentary life it symbolizes. A barn is indigenous, deeply rooted to its place. It carries with it an aura of the honesty with which it was built. It is the simplest framework to enclose space—strong posts, heavy beams, and single-thickness walls. It has no frills. It reaches out to that part of us that knows the truth.

At the same time, the practical side of our nature realizes that the space inside an old barn could not possibly be afforded today. Soaring spaces as high as 30 and 40 feet are not uncommon inside a barn. Capitalizing on the drama of such space would be the dream of many a residential architect, but the building costs would be astronomical.

Whether such space is worth the investment of remodeling money depends entirely on the condition of the barn. Many are in such poor shape that it would be cheaper to start from scratch than to try and shore up the old structure. Others, like the one shown on these four pages, are structurally sound and make a valuable investment.

Study the "before" photograph above. See how crisp and sharp all the corners are. See how well the shingles have weathered their years. Even the big door is in good enough condition so that it could be cut in half to make rolling shutters to cover the new window. (Please turn the page)

Far left. Intimate space of the fireside corner is a welcome contrast to the dramatic height (33') of the central living area just adjacent to it. Character of original barn is written all over the beam that was retained (top of photograph).

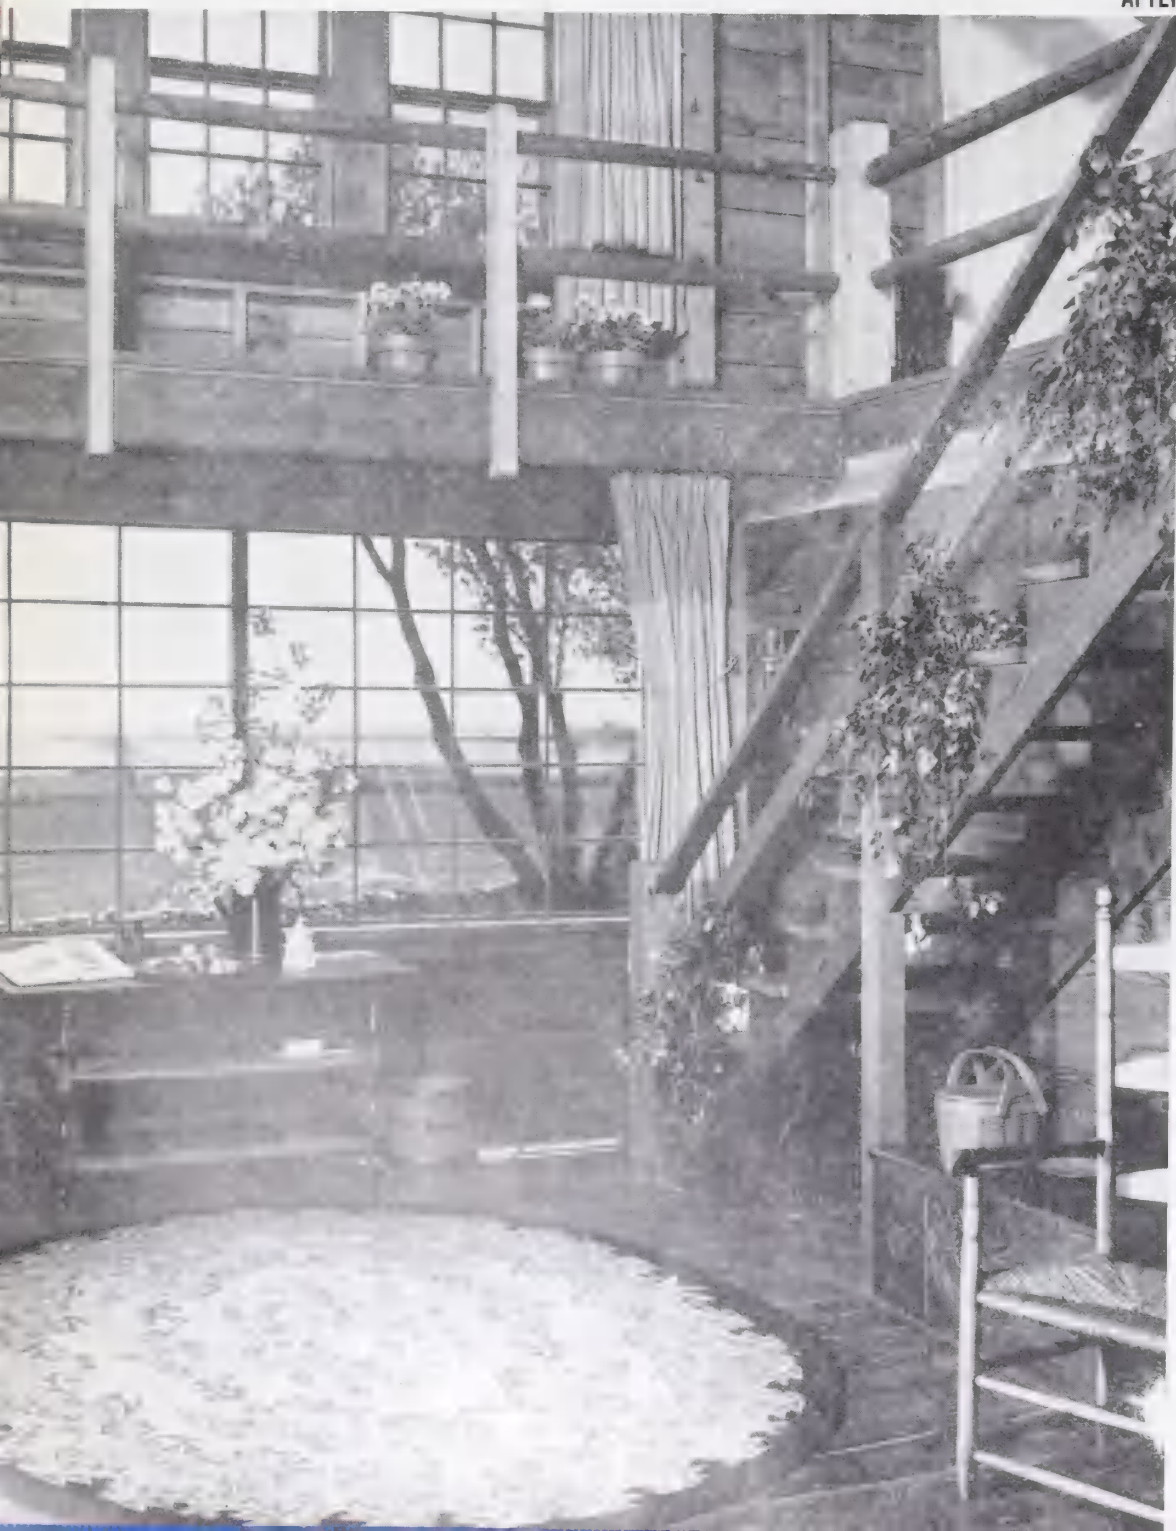

The interiors were rough, but just as solid. These were some of the clues that led the owners to buy it in 1953.

Today the barn is their summer home on the Atlantic shore, where Rhode Island and Massachusetts meet the sea. Out of their window (in the photograph below) they can see the ocean. Their plan for the transformation of the barn was simplicity itself. They maintained the great central space open to the ridge of the roof, 33' above. On each side and at the end they built a balcony (seen on the opposite page) to hold curtained-off bedrooms. Below these balcony areas are more intimate living areas, dining room, and kitchen.

This simple plan was complicated only by the owners' desire to retain as much of the original roughhewn honesty as they could. Doing much of the work themselves, they used old lumber when available, otherwise the rough grades of new material. In furnishing the many spaces, they confined themselves as closely as possible to Early American materials. Even the contemporary terrace added on the front was made of stone and brick, materials of an earlier era.

BEFORE

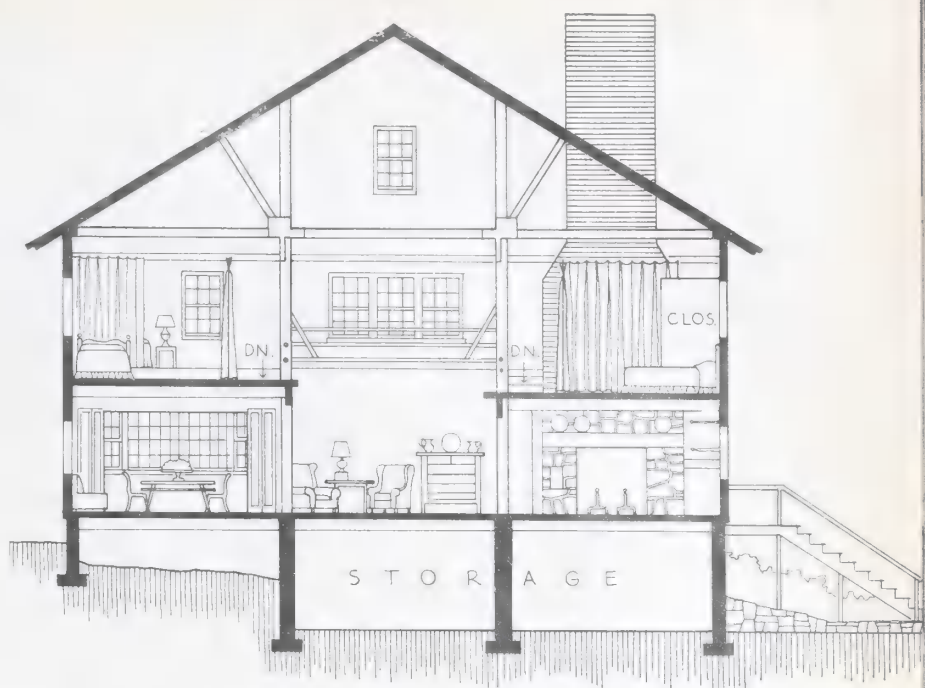

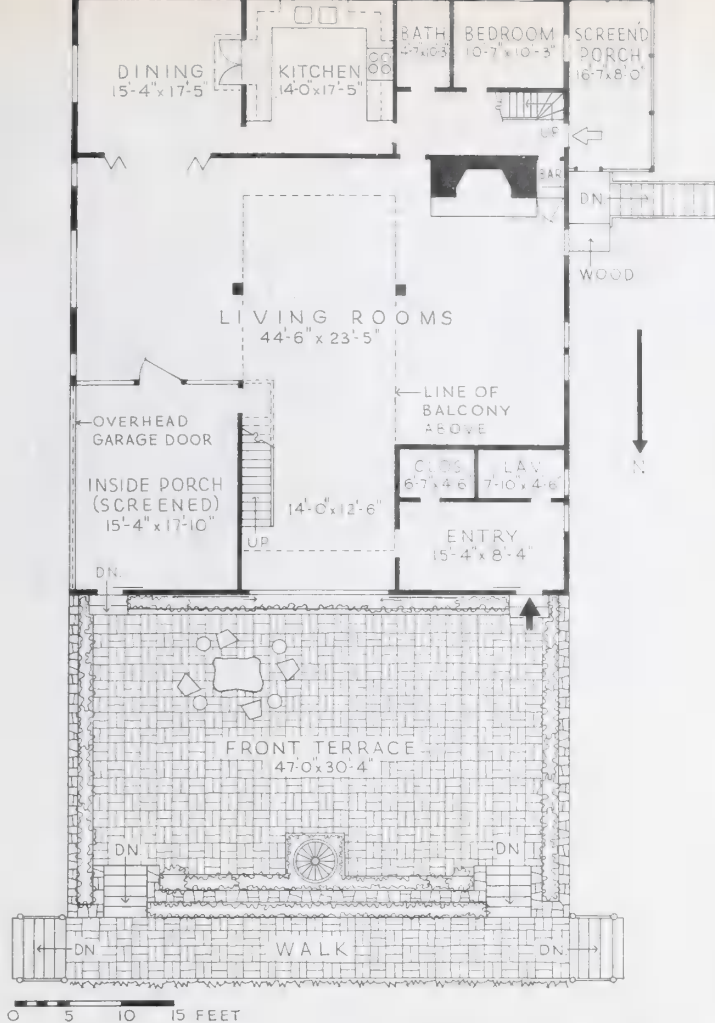

AFTER

Much of the building and finishing work was done by the owners themselves, shown here staining rough beams in the early stages of remodeling. Wide barn opening in background became large window in photo at left. In the distance, out the window, is the Atlantic. At this end, balcony is trimmed down to walkway that bridges two sides.

Screened porch, inside-outside space, is particularly useful on buggy summer evenings. Wide screen opening at right can be closed off in storms and in winter by easy-to-shut overhead garage door.

DRAWINGS BY MADELAINE THATCHER

Floor plan at left shows room arrangement on the first floor. Area inside dotted line is open all the way up to the ridge of the roof, a height of 33'. Balcony surrounding this space at the second-floor level is a huge area, casually divided into sleeping rooms by curtain dividers (photograph below). Do not be deceived by scale of floor plan. Kitchen, which may look small, is 14' by 17', as big as many new living rooms.

This building was really working as a barn when the owners first bought it, as seen in photograph above. At right is same view ten years later. Downstairs you can just see into dining room. Upstairs the open space is divided off into bedrooms by curtains hung on wire tracks, a perfectly acceptable arrangement for casual summertime living. Permanent partitions, insulation, and wall finish material could make this a year-round house. New structure is reinforced with steel plates at joining points.

The old living room was dominated by heavy moldings around the windows, doors, fireplace, and the dado on the walls. This trim was removed and replaced with paneling of teak veneer, and the room seems much larger. Small bay window was enlarged to make a comfortable, deep window seat.

change a whole house

An added wing (lower left) started a chain of events that brought all the improvements shown here and on the following pages

By CARROLL C. CALKINS

• The best way to discover the truth of the old saying that one good thing leads to another, is to add a new room to your house. The upgrading is sure to follow.

The first and most obvious influence concerns décor. The new room will have new finishes, new materials, new colors, some new accessories and furnishings. It will probably have more daylight, more comfort and efficiency. In contrast to this engaging new addition to family life, the rest of the house will likely seem dull and dowdy. And it won't be long until you find ways to bring adjoining rooms up to the new standards.

Looking toward the garden, you can see that the room originally took little notice of its superlative site. Small windows were replaced by floor-to-ceiling sliding glass doors opening to the garden and new terrace. French doors to dining room were replaced by folding sections of wall paneling.

important, is the influence of an added room on the way the house as a whole is used. What happened here illustrates the point. The new wing has a bedroom upstairs, which you'll see later. When this was added, space was gained for other facilities, and now a whole new way of living has evolved.

Downstairs, just off the living room shown here, is a new year-round porch. The living room now gets less wear and tear, and more informal entertaining is done because there's such a good place to do it.

The new room, facing the garden, requires a larger terrace that also serves the living room, through the sliding doors shown above. Since the terrace was added, outdoor living and entertaining have become more important here. To see the new additions, please turn the page.

The terrace (shown above) not only makes alfresco dining a delight: it brings three adjoining rooms together in a more useful way. Think of it as an outdoor hallway, and you'll see what it does for circulation here. The same idea will work for you, wherever two or more rooms can be opened to one terrace. It's a great help for large parties.

The glass walls of the new addition make the terrace, the lawn, and the wooded New England countryside an ever changing part of the room. There are screens for ventilation and wide sliding doors for easy movement in and out. When privacy is required, the room can be enclosed with draperies.

The upper part of the new wing is a bedroom. It, too, reveals the beauty of nature through insulated windows. The gable end is glass, with a fine view of the starry sky. The wall toward the terrace has a large window that looks into the branches of the maple tree.

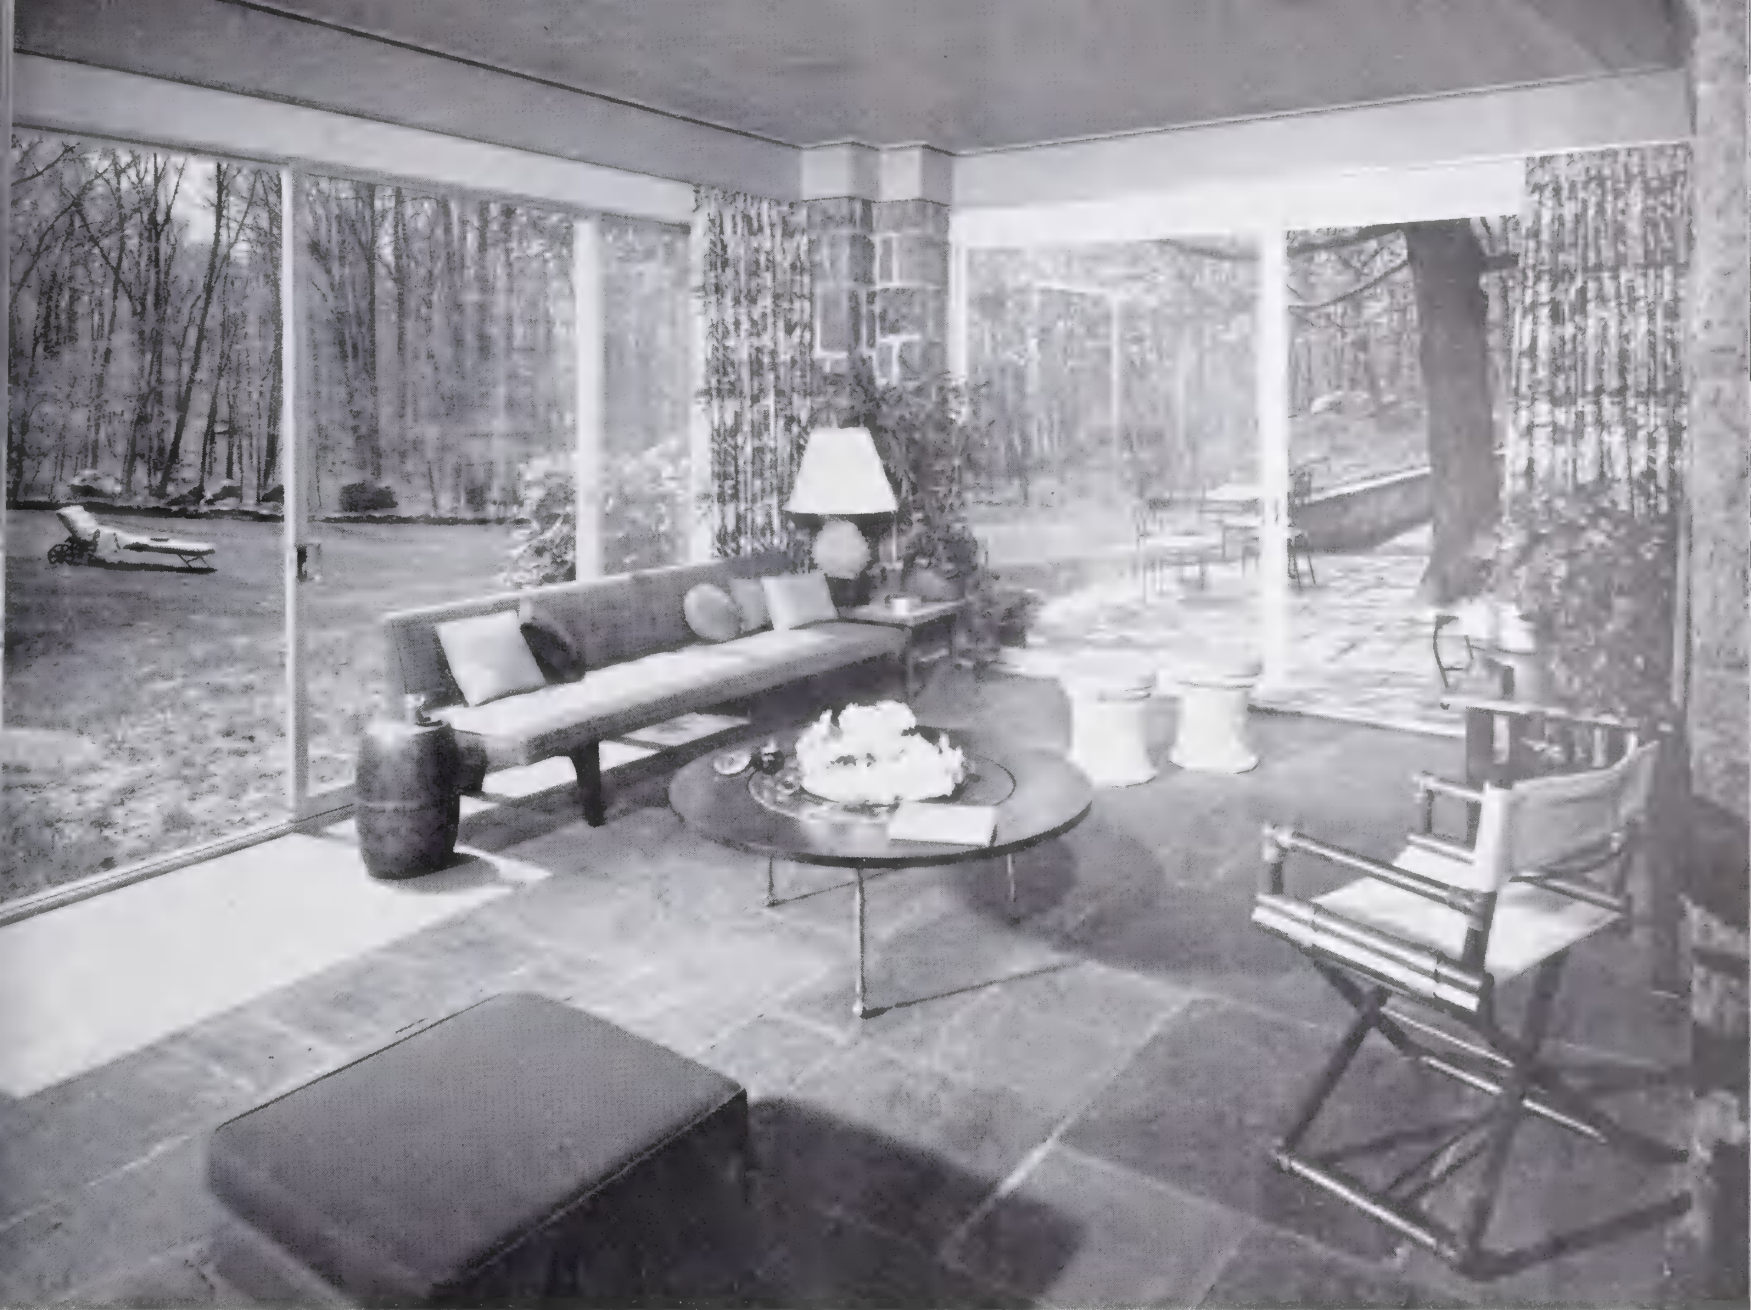

The new bedroom has a fireplace, lounging chairs, and writing table. Beds are adjustable, and a folding screen separates them so one can work or read without disturbing the other. The new improved convenience of this room prompted the upgrading of the other rooms on this floor. To see what was done with the space where this bedroom was before, please turn the page.

The new informal living room, with sliding doors of glass, and the remodeled living room, with its large new door, made this big, shade-dappled flagstone terrace a welcome necessity. The new bedroom (shown below) is on the second floor of the added wing. Door at extreme left leads to the dining room.

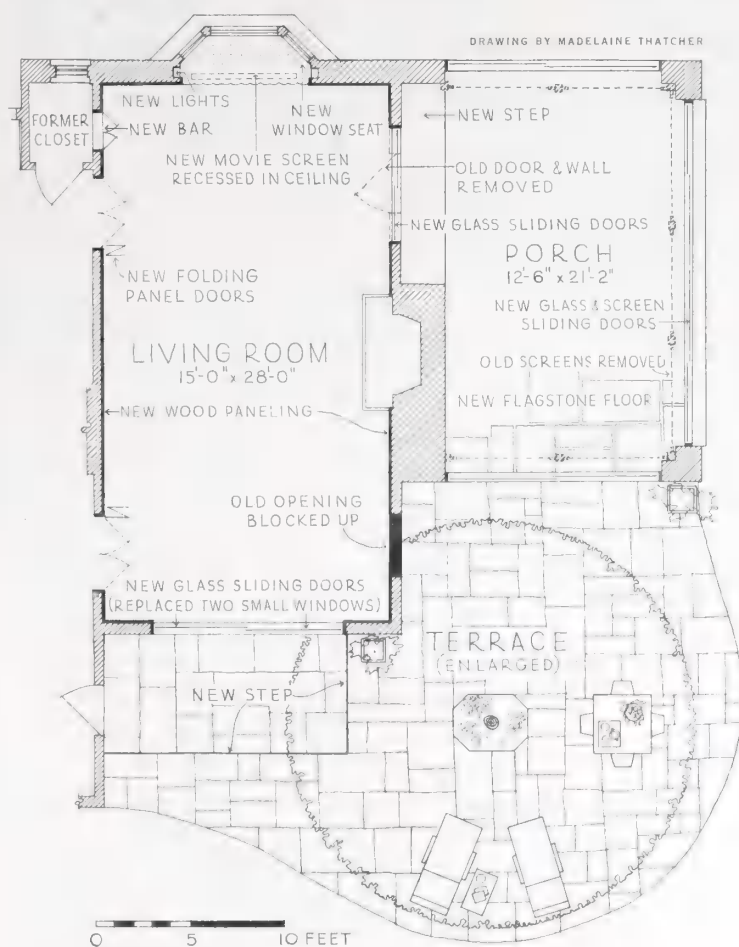

The bedroom has one wall of glass that puts you right into the foliage of the maple tree, and the gable end looks to the sky. When one person is working or reading and the other wishes to sleep, the folding screen can separate the room.

This lovely panorama was never fully enjoyed from inside the house. Since this new room was added, it is a part of everyday life. Sliding doors of glass, and of screen, and the heavy draperies provide complete flexibility to suit the changing weather and the use of the room. The floor is of flagstone.

The view from the new wing looking into the living room shows the step down to a lower level. This makes a higher ceiling, which helps the scale of a room with walls of glass. Draperies in doorway separate the rooms when required.

One end of workroom-study (above) is for relaxation. Sun-lamp over sofa pulls down from ceiling (see detail on page 201). Other end (below) is for keeping family correspondence, social calendar, shopping, and accounting in order. Intercom puts this control center in touch with every major room in the house. Plastic in sliding doors lets daylight into the hall and dressing rooms, which are windowless spaces.

You can bring new ease to the routine chores

• The daily routines of bathing and dressing and the endless details of running a busy household are time consuming and monotonous at best. But they need not be such a bore as we often allow them to become. The solution is to create efficient, attractive ways to handle them.

This was successfully accomplished here, in the space gained when the bedroom was moved into the added wing shown on the preceding pages. The new bedroom is on the right in the picture above; the room on the left of the sliding panels is a marvelous new workroom-office and study. It is quiet, private, and custom-fitted to facilitate the telephoning, correspondence, filing, and record-keeping that must be done in every household.

There's plenty of space for everything, so order can easily be maintained. But when messy projects are being done, they can be left here undisturbed, and out of sight behind the sliding shoji doors.

The two dressing rooms and baths are meticulously designed for storing clothes, equipment, and supplies. There are good mirrors and light where needed. All surfaces are smooth and easy to clean (Please turn to page 201)

Double dressing rooms and baths are custom-fitted to simplify daily routines. All clothing for the current season is at hand here. All accessories, supplies, and equipment are neatly and conveniently stored. Sliding doors recessed in wall pockets provide privacy for each dressing room. This view is from workroom across hall.

When the new wing was added, the bedroom was moved into it, and space gained used for workroom, bath, and dressing rooms. Considerable saving was made by not moving either the plumbing or the fireplace flue.

BEFORE

Corridor between the new bedroom wing and upper hall effectively adds space to the workroom and dressing rooms when doors are open. Sliding doors of the workroom are translucent plastic and even when closed let daylight into hall. Each dressing room and bath can be completely closed with sliding doors in hall and folding door between baths.

Add the outdoors to an old house

A glass-walled wing added to a turn-of-the-century summer "cottage" modernizes the house by putting it in more casual touch with the outdoors

John D. Barrett

Philip Ives

● The new addition to this old house, by the second generation to live here, typifies our changing ideas of indoor and outdoor life. When the house was built on Long Island Sound, there was definite separation between indoor and outdoor living. Interiors turned from the draft of windows to the shelter of the hearth. Outside was where you went for a clambake, to swim, or to work in the garden.

The new living room offers a more casual, enjoyable kind of indoor life than was possible before. The generous use of glass—practical with the efficient glazing, insulation, and heating of today—makes this the lightest, brightest room in the house and the only one that takes full advantage of the magnificent garden and seascape.

The canvas-covered terrace, sheltered by the house, provides more comfort and convenience for outdoor living than before. Tall glass doors make it easy and inviting to move from the new room to the new terrace and into the garden. The addition frankly expresses the changing times and gives the house a character obtainable in no other way.

Protected terrace with a marvelous view of the Sound is a bonus that became possible when the wing was added. Canvas provides shade, shelter from showers, and protects tall glass doors from heat and glare of afternoon sun. It is removed later in the fall.

← Large window, a wall of glass doors, and spacious, comfortable terrace mark the new wing as a generation apart from the original house. But construction materials are the same, and proportions are good, so the addition enriches the character of the whole.

New living room is three steps below dining level, from which photo was taken. This allows easy access to terrace and garden, a higher ceiling, and larger glass areas for more daylight and better outlook. Folding shutters soften glare from south windows facing the water.

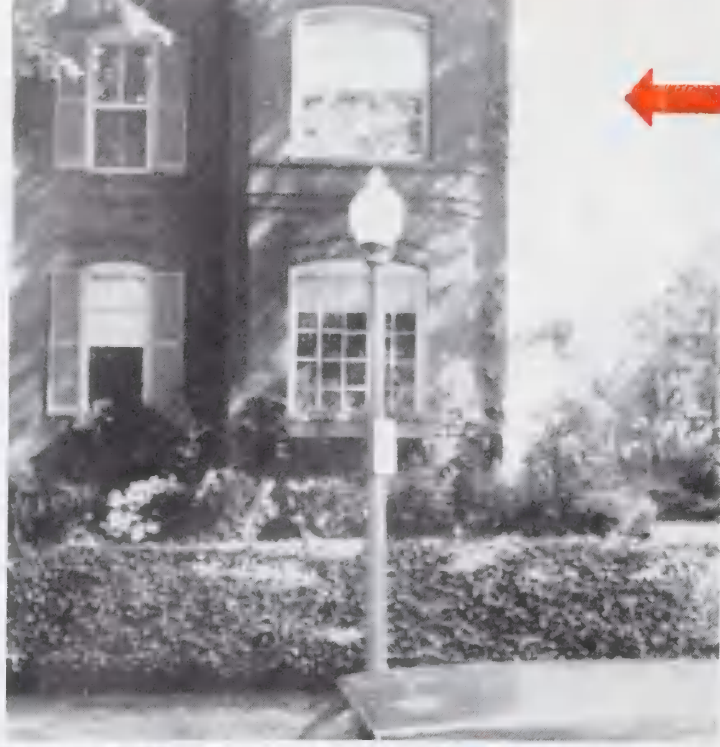

THREE PHOTOGRAPHS BY HOWARD GRAFF

The logical way to extend the new room was toward the view. This made a place for a terrace adjoining the old and new sections of the house, protected on two sides. The new additions (shown in color) are designed for a more open, informal life inside and more comfort outside. Change of grade in terrace reflects indoor levels.

Twice the size but still in character

What happened to this typical old town house could happen to dozens of houses in every city in this country. In the hands of a skillful architect, it has come to life to serve a new generation

● Only a few blocks from the heart of nearly every American city lies a prime residential district developed some 50 to 80 years ago. Until recently, most of these districts were heading in only one direction: down. Now, finally, we have come to realize once again the values of in-town living, and with it has come an awareness of the practical housing values that lie hidden in these older structures.

Though the restoration of the Georgetown area of Washington, D.C., is often thought of in colonial terms, there is actually only a smattering of authentic Early American houses. Many more of them are of the 50- to 80-year-old vintage, and their refurbishing is very dramatic. The house seen on these pages is a good example of what has been going on.

At the top of the opposite page, the house is seen before any work was begun. It is a house you could see in nearly any American city. Directly below it, to the left of the dividing line, you see how the house itself was cleaned up, with new full-depth casement windows and a painting plan designed to bring out the best in its stately architecture.

This by itself would have been remarkable enough, but because it had open land at the right, the owners were able to add a wing, exactly matching the house, which contains a new living room and master suite. Bridging the two wings is a two-story entry with dramatic 22-foot-high glass panels facing on the garden in the rear. (See photograph next page.)

A study of the floor plans above (Please turn the page)

This Georgetown house was just another run-of-the-mill town house. It had not seriously deteriorated; it had simply lost any architectural distinction (top photograph). Dramatic transformation was made possible by recognizing its good basic lines and capitalizing on them. Added wing repeats the original house in every detail and gives an imposing scale to what was quite a small house. Entry is recessed between wings.

(and on page 196) reveals immediately the essential difference between the way life is lived today and the way it was when this house was planned some 75 years ago. Disregarding for a moment the spaciousness afforded by the new wing, there is an opening-out of life today, a desire to see out and get out, in contrast to the cloistered feel of yesterday's house. See how every effort was made to bring the rear terrace into the life of the house, with glass the only barrier. Even the new bedroom lives among the treetops.

The new wing made possible a new freedom in floor planning impossible within the restricted limits of the old house. On the first floor, the new living room allowed the library to expand into the space of the old one. The kitchen and dining room remained essentially as they were, though the dining space was enlarged because a portion of it no longer has to serve as an entry. The interiors of all the rooms were modernized, as can be seen by the views of the old living room and new library above. (Please turn to page 196)

Open feeling of contemporary life is expressed by the new living room with its large doors to the rear garden and the wide doorway to the outdoorlike entrance gallery.

The first private house remodeled under Urban Renewal laws

Under the right conditions your house may qualify for the best mortgage terms ever—

90 percent of the renovation costs for a period as long as 40 years

● Soon the bulldozers will be moving into a 20-square-block area on New York's Upper West Side, now classed as an Urban Renewal Area. Along with the tenements, vacant stores, and outmoded schools, many dignified, still-sound old town houses will be demolished. Most owners in such areas are not aware that they can improve their houses with government aid instead of turning them over to the demolition crew.

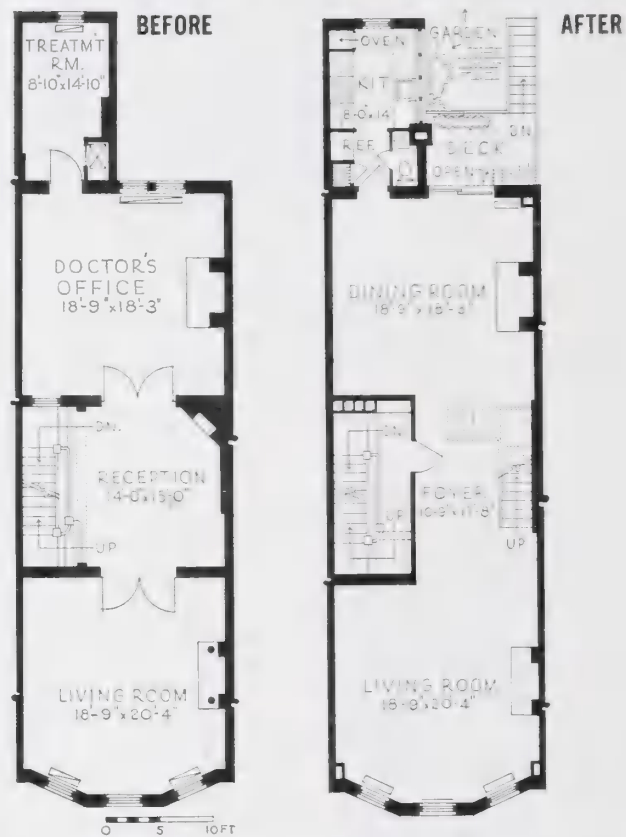

The house pictured on these pages is the first privately owned one in New York City to be rehabilitated under Urban Renewal laws. Because Dr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Logan patiently persisted in unsnarling all the legal red tape that had hitherto prevented individuals from getting Section 220 Mortgages under the National Housing Act, some of the 450 neighboring brownstones scheduled for demolition may now be saved, preserving a remnant of human-scale architecture among the towering impersonality of the housing projects.

In order to qualify for a Section 220 Mortgage (up to 90 percent of renovation cost, with up to 40 years to pay), the house must be located in an area designed for Urban Renewal. Single-family residences can obtain Section 220 loans up to $25,000; multiple dwellings have higher limits. There are many qualifying houses which, like this one, have fine lines, sturdy construction, and great possibilities. Thanks to pioneering work done by the (Please turn to page 208)

Sketch at right shows original state of room opposite. Two partitions with double doors were removed, making one large space of three small rooms. Small corner fireplace was taken out to make room for interior stair that dominates space like a fine piece of sculpture. Other fireplaces were saved, as were the unusual hardwood floors. Rear of this floor was opened up to a deck by new sliding doors shown in the color photograph covered by hand-lamed draperies from the Lozano-Fisher Studio. This floor also has a new kitchen, built into what was a treatment room in the previous doctor's office (see plan). Stairway leads to bedrooms on the floor above.

Family Room

Many families have decided that a family room isn't worth an inadequate kitchen

This is the family room that would serve as an adequate kitchen. A doorway to the right leads to the living room. Bedrooms are to the left. But, and most notably visible through an awkward window, it provides no light. The room was dark and forbidding, and it still is. The good southern exposure. Materials here chosen with the elegance in other parts of the house. Doors were usually placed to hide contrast.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY EZRA STOLLER ASSOCIATES

◀ After the family room was merged with the old kitchen, a new spirit pervaded the house. Working surfaces were quadrupled. One small structural change provided the old room with a big new bay window. This added brightness, the illusion of space, and a view of the back yard and pool. Counter top curves with window to make full use of space. Sit-down sink relieves work-load of main sink.

The same counter is visible from the living room when the doors are open. Two rooms share same view of the swimming pool. It was an important part of the planning that they should also share the same elegance. Cabinets, which are finished in warm wood tones, have doors of rich Carpathian elm burl. Counter is laminate inlaid in wood. Curtains, furniture, and accessories complement both rooms.

into Regal Kitchen

● In the postwar tract house, great sacrifices were made for the family room. For economic reasons, it meant either giving up another room or borrowing space from several rooms. The result was, generally, smaller bedrooms, fewer closets, or sometimes no dining room. In this Indianapolis home, the victim was the kitchen.

Relegated to a dark 4' by 3' area, it left room for only a stove, refrigerator, and sink. Total working surfaces were slightly larger than the top of a card table.

Cooking under these conditions was a chore; entertaining was impossible. And it didn't take the owners long to realize that they were paying a great price for that adjacent family room. They remodeled, because to them the family room wasn't worth an inadequate kitchen.

Their simple solution was to merge the two areas into a space large enough for every function of the room.

One structural change replaced a small high window with a bigger bay window. This increased the light by one-third and provided a counter-to-ceiling view of the swimming pool.

The installation of cabinets and appliances completed the plan. In this process they gained 70 square feet of working surfaces, and nearly 100 (Please turn the page)

A suave kitchen counter doubles as a deluxe serving buffet for parties

The sit-down sink is useful for food preparation. It has its own garbage disposer and the best view in the house. It can be covered to serve a buffet dinner for as many as 75 to 100 people (see above). Uncovered, it holds a mound of ice for icing champagne or cold hors d'oeuvres. Controlled lighting provides a variety of moods for different occasions.

lineal feet of storage space. In the old room there was no exhaust fan; now there are two. Before, they had 11 cubic feet of refrigerated space; this has been increased to 17 cubic feet. One old sink has been replaced by two (one is a sit-down model). Each has its own garbage disposer.

Before, there was no place to prepare menus, check bills, or store cookbooks. Now there is a planning center and a desk. They also gained an eye-level oven and surface cooking units. A new dishwasher holds 14 place settings. It is equipped with an automatic rinse injector and is useful as a plate-warmer. The efficiency of the room was virtually quadrupled.

One hazard loomed over the whole project. The living room was very much a part of the old family room. Double louvered doors separated the two, and that's all. They shared the same view. They were inescapably partners. "They were going to be seeing a lot of each other," as the saying goes.

The new kitchen, then, had to be as elegant as the living room. Cabinets, accessories, lights, materials—everything was selected to avoid a "kitcheny" look.

One group of cabinets, visible from the living room, actually looks like a piece of fine furniture, for the surfaces of the cabinet doors are faced with rich parquetry wood burl. The top is plastic laminate inlaid in wood, and curves to follow the window line. (Please turn the page) ← Kitchen now flows into the area that was once a family room providing space necessary to make the room adequate. Rich materials give it new status in the house. New vinyl flooring looks like teak and blends well with cabinets. Rattan stools are used as coffee or snack tables in the living room.

Old working surfaces in previous kitchen were slightly larger than the top of a card table. It was dark and gloomy with no outside window of its own. There was more groping than cooking. The lighting was increased by about 900 percent.

FAMILY ROOM INTO REGAL KITCHEN

continued

In the new arrangement, nothing looks at all kitcheny.

A vinyl tile that looks like teak was installed on the floor for its compatibility with the neighboring carpeting.

Spotlights installed in the deck around the ceiling give a glamorous glow to every inch of the counter. Dimmers adjust the intensity of two different circuits to change the character of the space with many moods. Indirect fixtures were also installed under each of the hanging cabinets.

Rattan stools have raw-silk cushions. Without the pads these are useful as cocktail, coffee, or snack tables. They will go anywhere in the house and end up quite often in the living room.

New uses were sure to be found for this discriminating use of space and materials. Sink, seen from living room, has a cover. Large buffets are now presented here with ease (see previous page). Uncovered, it can hold a mound of ice for champagne or cold hors d'oeuvres. A single-control faucet is the only bit of plumbing to be seen from living room. For parties even it can be camouflaged with flowers, food, or both.

Even a planning center was tucked into the remodeling. It is useful for storing cookbooks, planning menus, and writing checks. The telephone is right there, handy for ordering groceries. An indirect light was installed over this work area.

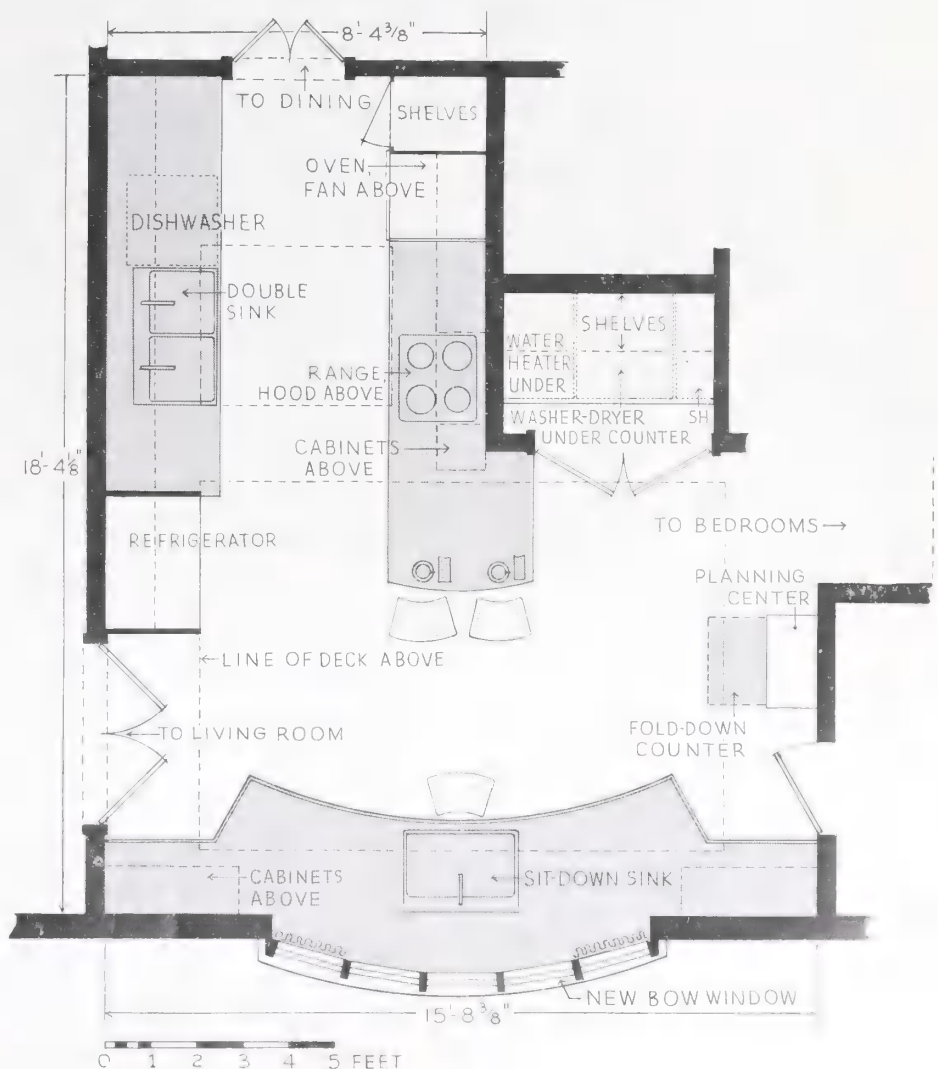

The desk is created by a fold-down shelf for an additional work surface, but it closes to become a statuesque piece of furniture. The bottom section is equipped with removable and adjustable shelves. The door at the right opens into the lavatory.

Empty bulk space cried out to be used. Original kitchen offered little more than an apartment-house kitchenette. In remodeling (see plan, right) tremendous new utility was developed, plus suave elegance fit to be part of the adjacent living room. Even the water-heater closet was made more efficient by switching to new under-counter type, so shelves could be added.

How to update a kitchen without structural changes

By NANCY CRAIG

● Ten years in the life of a kitchen is not long—or should not be. The major investments in equipment and cabinetry will normally have a much longer life. But so explosive have been the developments in kitchen design and products in the last decade that even "modern" kitchens seem outmoded.

Consider the example on these four pages. The "before" photographs reveal a perfectly reasonable-looking kitchen with typical arrangements of cabinets, counters, and equipment. By most standards it was a good, workmanlike kitchen. Yet, because it was designed in the early years of the planned-storage and labor-saving-device era, it incorporated many ideas that never worked out and equipment that very soon became obsolete. On page 204 you'll see a detailed list of what replaced what in the new kitchen.

The remodeled kitchen was based in large part on what the owners, Mr. and Mrs. George Lewin, had learned from experience in the old one. Mrs. Lewin made a serious study of her work habits, aimed at making the (Please turn the page)

New lower cabinets where old range stood (see photo below) permit clear view from kitchen into the dining area and gardens. new kitchen really work for her. Architect Victor Civkin, a specialist in kitchen design, found there was no need for any structural change in the space arrangement of the room. It was largely a matter of new cabinets, redesigned storage, and up-to-date appliances and cabinets.

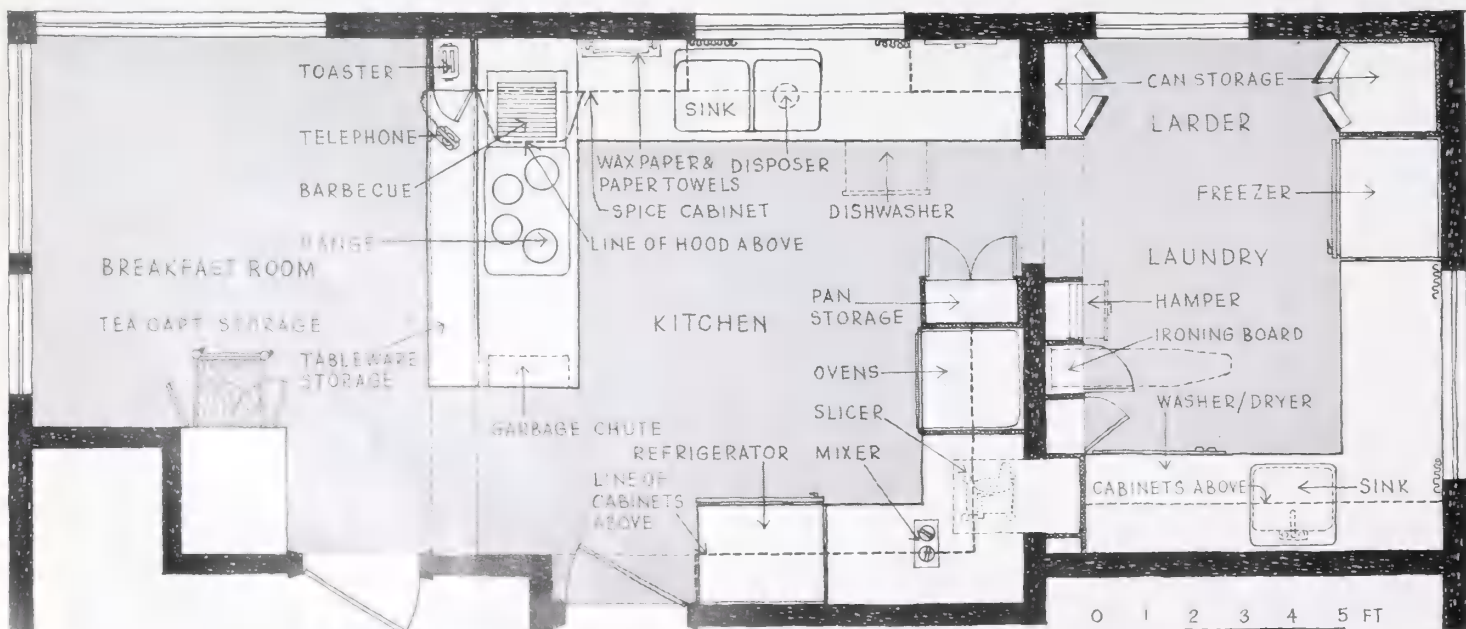

Working with Architect Civkin, Mrs. Lewin specified the detailing of every shelf and drawer. Each was designed for specific objects, rather than as general-storage shelves and drawers. These tend to become cluttered with an assortment of unrelated items. "It's easier to keep things in their proper place," she says, "and you (Please turn to page 203)

How a low-level budget can produce a high-level bathroom

● When the owner of this 275-year-old country house in Connecticut came to the problem of installing a modern bathroom, he had already absorbed heavy expenses in shoring up the house, installing new floor boards, and rehabilitating the structure in general. Only a minimum budget was left for the actual bathroom finishing.

How pleasant and attractive a bath can be achieved on such a minimum basis is shown in the color photographs at the right. It was installed in what was called "The Borning Room" in Revolutionary days, an 11'-by-11' room adjacent to the bedrooms. A makeshift bathroom was removed from the living area, but its plumbing lines and vents were used to cut down the cost of the new installation (see plan).

Modest-priced white fixtures were used. The lavatory was set into an 11-foot plastic laminate counter top which might seem an extravagance at first glance. It was not, primarily because the storage shelves created beneath the counter eliminated any need for a separate linen closet. Even so, the construction of the cabinets and counter was of the simplest nature. The counter top needed no backsplash, because of the window and the flanking mirrors. The front of the counter was edged with wood molding instead of the more expensive laminated self-edging. The effect is that of a more custom-installation. The supporting cabinets are just door fronts to close off the generous shelves. Local carpentry to build these fronts was the more reasonable solution here; in other areas unfinished cabinets (designed specifically for lavatory height) might be less expensive.

Other materials were chosen with an eye to owner application. The walls are covered in wide-width vinyl fabric. The flooring is vinyl tile. The shelves are painted boards on metal wall brackets. The towel racks are café-curtain rods. The two large mirrors were the one indulgence, and even they came to only $80 including installation. New wiring for the room made possible fluorescent fixtures the full width of the room (behind a ceiling valance board) and plug-in molding strip at the back of the counter.

The character of the house was maintained by leaving the original beams exposed. The brown-and-white color scheme was taken from the classic New England look of colonial times. The freshness of the color, the restrained design, and the care used in selecting all the materials resulted in a room that gives a sense of luxury far beyond its modest cost.

What this bathroom cost

Costs are shown for bathroom equipment only and do not include decorative accessories. Since this bathroom was built in a country area, labor charges in large cities should be estimated at 20-40 percent higher.

Plumbing .....	$680.
New bathtub, toilet, lavatory bowl, and installation. Re-arrangement of baseboard heating units.
Carpentry .....	200.
Building counter top and louvered-door fronts for cabinets. Installing shelves inside cabinet. Building fascia for fluorescent lights. (Does not include shoring up and framing work.)
Electrical .....	75.
Fluorescent fixtures, plug molding, installation.
Mirrors (materials and installation) .....	80
Wall covering, flooring, and paint (materials only) .....	47.
Miscellaneous accessories .....	40.
Standards and brackets for shelves, shelving, lumber, shower-curtain rod, shaving mirror, curtain rods for towel bars, window shade, etc.
Total .....	$1122.

This room, known as "The Borning Room" in Revolutionary days, was turned into the bathroom you see in color opposite. Beams in ceiling and post in far corner were left exposed. Access to attic (in ceiling) was closed off. Baseboard heating unit was moved forward to become baseboard of new cabinets.

Long working counter on both sides of lavatory rests on storage cabinets below. These give ample space for holding extra tissues, linen, cleaning supplies (under sink). Door to right of sink conceals a series of four pull-out drawers to hold shaving supplies, medicines, etc. Plug molding, as backing to counter, provides more than ample outlets for electric shaver, toothbrush, etc.

Plan shows how existing vent was used to service new bathroom. Only minor addition to plumbing lines was necessary to connect the new tub, the water closet, and the new lavatory.

AFTER

Main gain in this lavatory remodeling in a typical bathroom was improved counter space and tremendously improved storage space. But in addition, almost perfect lighting was achieved, plus 70 percent more mirroring. Surprisingly, the bathroom seemed bigger, in width and length, with the continuous counter.

A lesson in how much things cost

By careful designing and specifying of materials you can save as much as half the cost. Study the comparisons of "adequate" vs. "luxurious"

● A suit of clothes, using fabric costing $10 a yard, is going to cost more than one made of $2-a-yard material. This kind of reality is easy to understand. But many do not grasp that the same reality applies to home-building.

A neat example of this is demonstrated in this remodeling of a standard lavatory into a built-in facility with considerable more counter surface and storage space. The old lavatory provided about  $\frac{1}{2}$  square foot of counter, while the new solution provides 6 square feet. The old minimum medicine cabinet provided one cubic foot of storage, whereas the new cabinets (top and under-counter) provide 13 cubic feet. So there is a marked gain in utility.

The way you see it photographed here is the luxurious way, using the best specifications and niceties of design that exploit all the possibilities of the space. That way cost $855.62.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY MARIS-EZRA STOLLER ASSOCIATES

The cheaper way ($463.86) delivers just as much counter space and equal amounts of cubic storage space. So the main goal of the remodeling—more convenience—is still delivered. What is sacrificed is superior lighting, two-thirds of the mirroring, easy-to-get-at shelves (rear portions of the cheaper shelves will be hard to get at). You may say that such niceties are not worth the big increase in cost. Certainly, if you do not have the money for the luxurious way, such amenities are not worth it. For the adequate way is really quite nice and totally acceptable. And people with pinched budgets can manage perfectly without theatrical dressing-room lights, stainless-steel wash bowls, shelves on doors that require galleries to keep things from falling off, back-of-the-head mirrors, etc.

There is no answer about which is the best way to build. It depends on how many other demands there are—on your budget and your life. If you are a professional actress or model, the improved lighting would rate as a necessity. If you are the untidy type who provokes ire in your mate, those shelves on the doors offer better chances for you to organize your possessions, by classifications, into neatness. You get more when you pay more. BUT decide whether it is worth it—to you.

Clearing a jungle produced a better house

● In remodeling this 1880 house on a San Francisco hilltop, almost everything was changed: walls were moved, ceilings raised, windows aligned, and an elevator installed. What was a shambles turned into a distinguished town house. Most important of all, the focus of attention was shifted from the street side on the north to the rear garden on the south. Three small rooms were merged to form a spacious living room across the rear. Ceilings were raised two feet, and floor-to-ceiling glass installed to take advantage of the garden view. The rickety back stoop was replaced by a railed deck and a broad flight of steps. Rare trees were revealed when the tangle of underbrush was cleared. The transplanted boxwood hedge has become an important element of the design. A sky room was built on the roof of the house to recapture the magnificent bay view without ground-floor distractions.

◀ An unbelievably handsome house emerged from a dilapidated dwelling when precise architectural detailing organized the diverse elements of the façade. Black painted exterior and white trim serve as a foil for brilliance of flowers and warmth of brick paving.

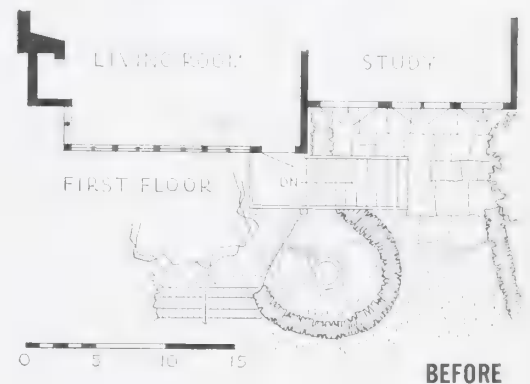

▶ "Before" and "after" plans, right, explain changes made in rear of house to take advantage of garden view. Small rooms at back became one spacious living room. A deck and brick stairs replaced wood stoop. Terrace, now 16' by 18', was paved with brick.

The lot on which this house is built slopes down sharply to a lake. Before, walking around the outside of the house meant precipitous climbing. A tiny tacked-on porch at the rear of the house was the only concession to outdoor living. Now, there are easy routes indoors and out, and access to the lake is far simpler. Deck has "leveled" the problem slope.

When floor level isn't ground level...

● The greatest single flaw in most older houses is their poor relationship to their site and its grade. The only way in and out of them is by front or back door, and inevitably there are steps and/or stairs.

These houses were built before the development of the indoor-outdoor concept—before we understood the importance of the outdoors to a house. Today we want to be able to go outdoors from every room in a house, and we want to do it without tortuous transitions. We know this is essential if house and site are to function as one, and if the outdoors is to lend its spaciousness and opportunities for good living to the indoors.

Where no such easy transition exists, the simple remedy is: Add a deck. A deck can continue your indoor floor level

Before remodeling, the living room all but ignored the magnificent view of the lake and Mount Ranier. Now, with the deck, you pass to the outdoors as easily as crossing a room.

BEFORE

Essential in opening up the house was the replacement of large wall areas with glass. Compare "before" and "after" and you will see how much has been added visually to the length and breadth of the living room by new deck and glass walls.

outdoors with no break, no stepdown, regardless of how high your foundation or precipitous your lot. Look at the house shown on these two pages and what the deck has done to erase the barrier between indoors and out. The deck has made the outdoors an integral part of the house. It can do the same for you.

This Tudor house was built in 1926, and its deck was not added until more than thirty years (Please turn to page 216)

As plan shows, you can now go outdoors at floor level from all major living areas. Addition of deck more than doubled the amount of living space. You can now walk from garage around house to living room, or directly on down to lake.

The wide, firm, curving walk is a psychological invitation to enter. The brick wall made it possible to bring up the grade to level, and ties the house into the site. # A better approach, and this house looks 40 years younger Deck, just off the kitchen, is perfect for dining. The walkway continues to ground level at far end for easy circulation all around the house.

AFTER

The original back stoop (below) was of little use and a definite eyesore. The new deck is for dining and relaxing, and includes storage space for garden tools and garbage cans. Old garage (lower right) is now a basement workshop. Opening at left of deck leads to the entry walk.

BEFORE

● Before this new entry was designed, this home was typical of the old unconcern for the relation of house to site. The house was separate and aloof from the property. There was small recognition of the problem of walking from the driveway to the front door. The improved approach has given the house a new aspect and the owners a more enjoyable way of life.

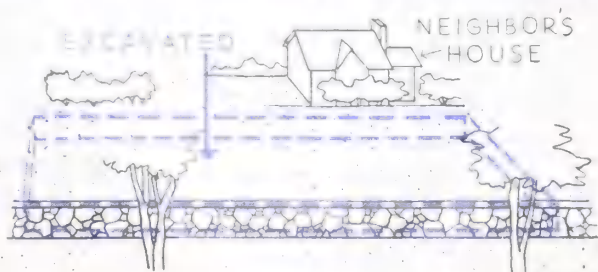

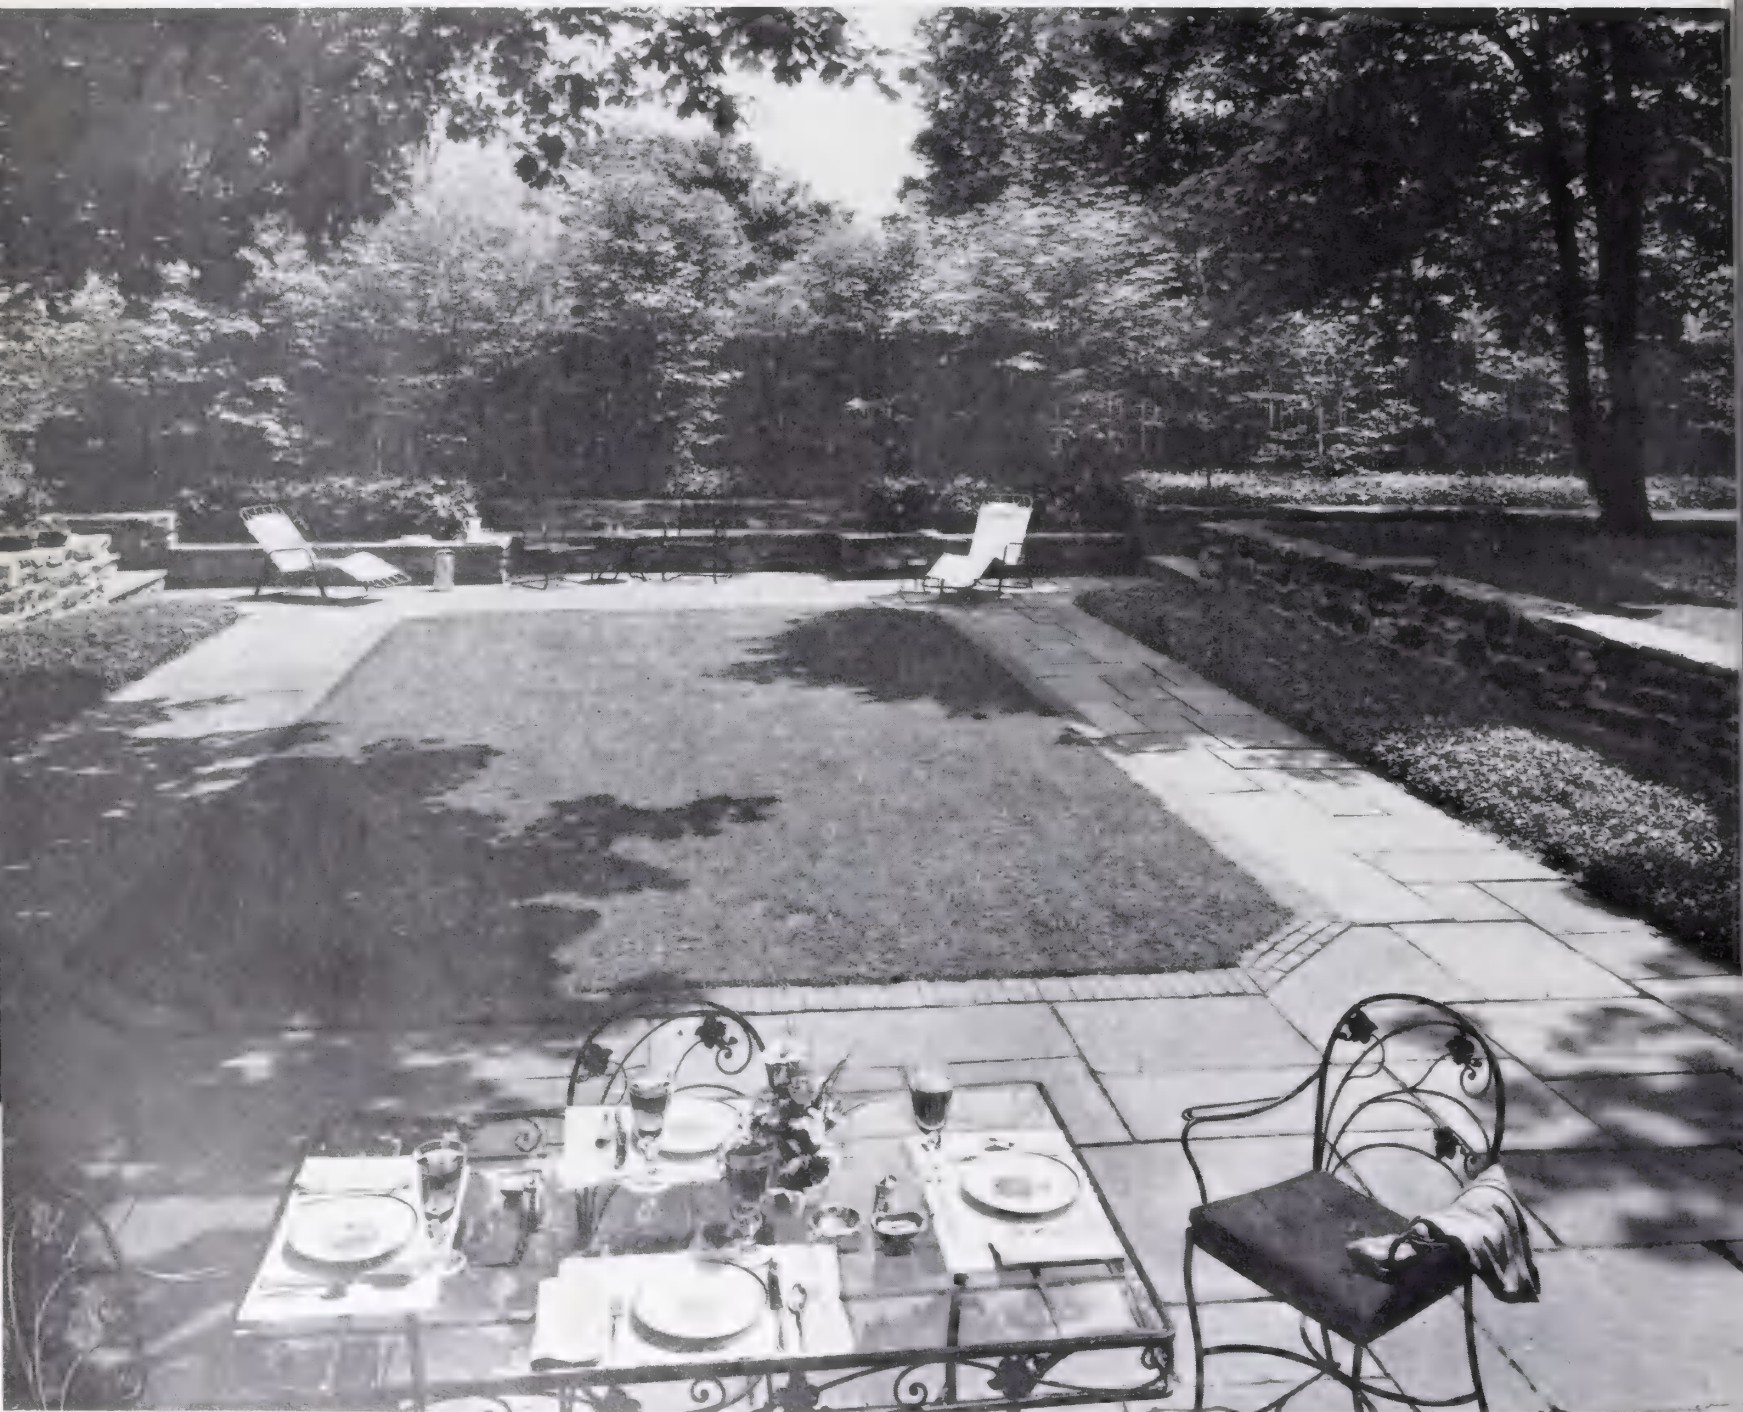

As you can see on the plan (far left), the driveway and garage were abandoned to make way for the brick wall that literally settles the house into the landscape. It is also a retaining wall for the fill that levels the walkway to the door. And it is high enough to provide privacy from the street which makes possible the deck shown above. Former garage is now a workshop, but it is hardly missed, since the old driveway was too steep to use in the winter.

When a back yard is raised like this...

Bring it down to a useful level

The problems here were (1) bringing the land behind the house down to a useful level and (2) getting the necessary privacy. The solution was bold, simple and effective. As shown at left, a large chunk of land was removed. The sides were retained with stone to match the original wall. The neighboring house, which once loomed large, has completely disappeared behind the screen of wood fence, shrubs, and trees along the property line. Lawn carpet provides cooling effect.

● Just a small change in grade can make a big difference in the usefulness of land for outdoor living. The extra physical effort of going up or down a few steps is part of the reason. But more important is the mental hazard. Land that's above or below the level established for most of daily living seldom gets used in the regular pattern of daily life.

Shown here is a most successful solution to this problem. The three-foot rise in grade behind this house and the lack of privacy from the neighbors all but eliminated outdoor living here. The back yard was rarely used—until excavation brought it down to the level of the land adjoining the house. Trees and shrubs and a high fence along the property line created privacy here and next door too. The neighbors have recently put in a swimming pool, which would have been unthinkable before the screening was done.

The owners had asked for "... the privacy of a patio when entering the garden from the house." The picture at left shows this is what they got. This comfortable and convenient outdoor room has become an important part of living in spring, summer, and fall. The strong basic form of the garden is enjoyed visually in winter, even though the Connecticut climate does not permit much outdoor living at that time of year.

The roomlike quality of the space is accentuated by the low walls of native stone and a "rug" of emerald-green lawn set in the flagstone floor. The edge of the lawn is flush with the paving to eliminate hand trimming. Ground cover is used between paving and wall. There's gravel under the trees where grass is hard to keep, and the shrubs and trees used here are all simple to manage. Such attention to the details of maintenance makes this a very easy garden to care for.

A wide terrace just outside the dining room accommodates a table and chairs for sit-down service. There's a seat-wall at the other end of the outdoor room, and plenty of paved space for chairs and side tables. The built-in seating reduces the amount of free-standing furniture required. This "living" end of the terrace is used constantly by the family. And for entertaining, it is used before and after meals served at the "dining" end.

Seat-wall (below) is at the far end of the excavated garden room (top of plan, right). This supports the screen plantings and provides generous seating in an unobtrusive way. Cushions on steps make additional seats here.

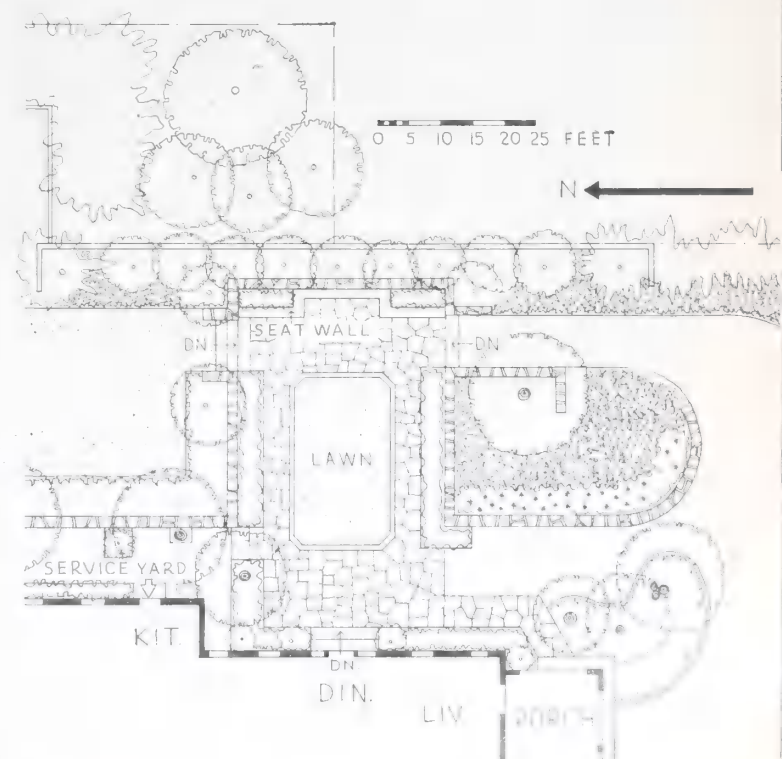

Most of the land behind the house was on this upper level. A strip only 10 to 15 feet wide was on grade with the house. This strip was, and still is, two steps down from the indoor floor level, but the steps are wide and easy to use, as shown below. When the garden was remodeled, this terrace, just outside the dining room, was paved with flagstone to make space for eating.

This is how the house looked before the relandscaping was done.

This tract house used to look like all the others

● The best way to relieve the monotonous sameness of look-alike houses is with individualized landscaping. This means using both plant materials and permanent materials with originality and taste—good design, in short.

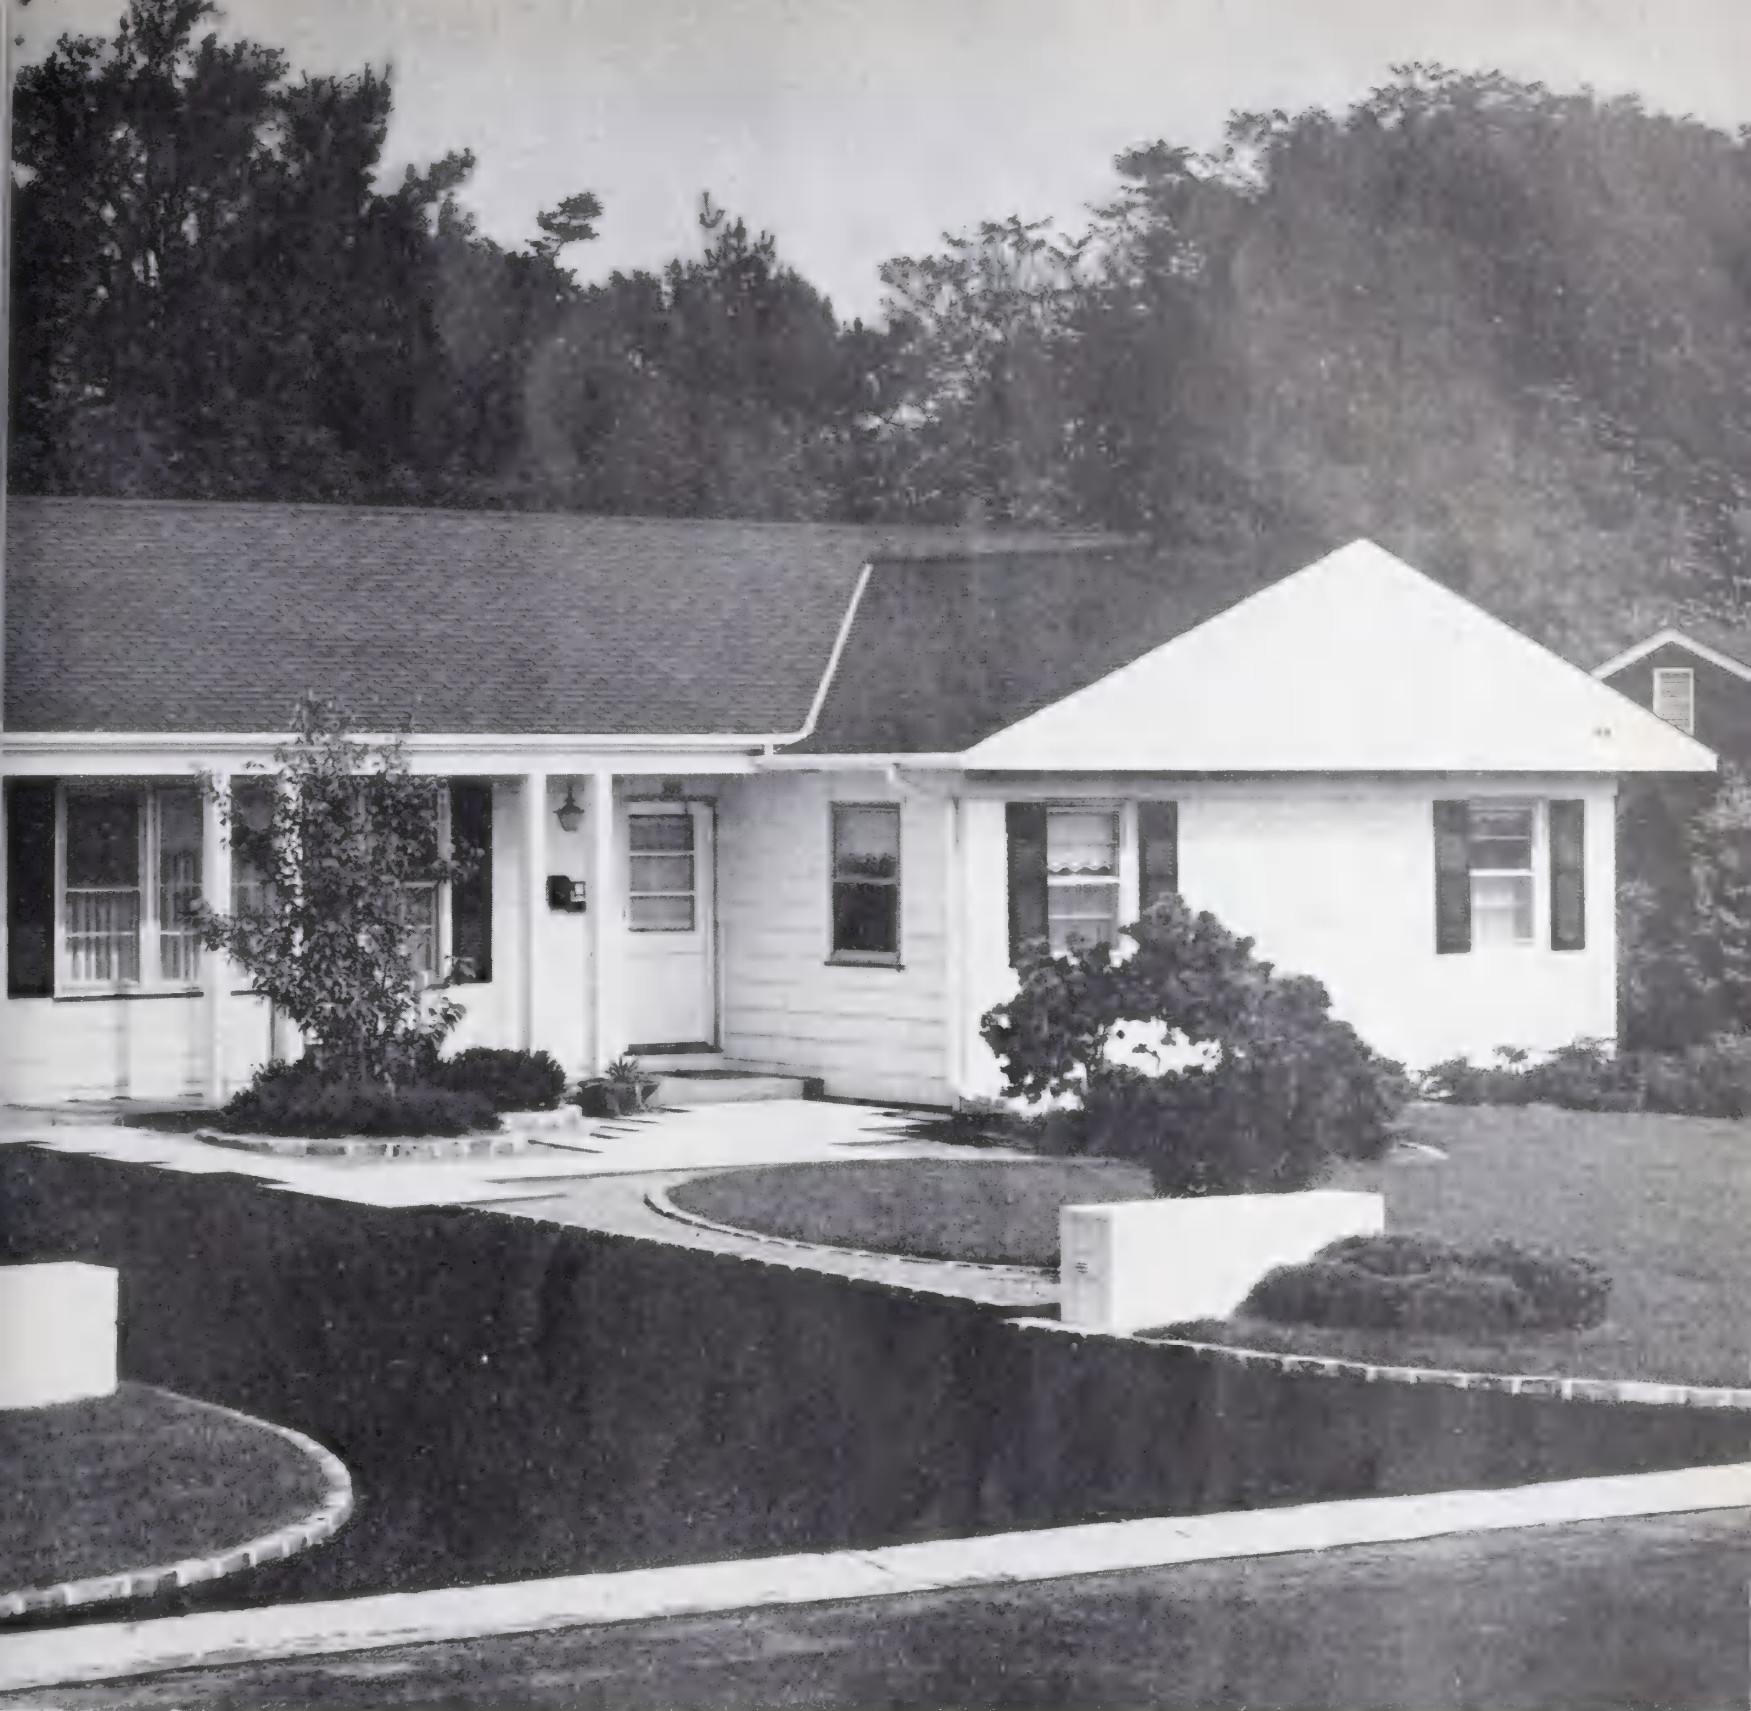

To save money, the builder of this tract house made the driveway and entry walk narrow. The plants around the foundation were the cheap, fast-growing, get-out-of-control variety. So they quickly smothered the house, making it seem dark inside and look smaller from the outside. This is a common fault. Tract houses look passable the first year, but cheap shrubs grow wildly and in three to five years all is out-of-hand. (Slow-growing shrubs cost two to three times as much as fast-growing types.)

The owners called in a landscape architect to cure their rubber-stamp look. He started with the same problems—the arrival by car or on foot. But he solved them with flair and originality. And he solved them better and with more than mere adequacy.

Now there is space for four cars to park off the street. The walk from driveway to front door is interesting in design, while being more ample. The low wall extends the visual size of the house. The light-colored paving and gravel seem to cause the white house to settle more snugly into the ground. House and land became more intimately related. Fewer plants were used, but they have design character.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY EXTRA STOLLER ASSOCIATES

Entry way is clearly defined by paving. Concrete walk has divider strips made of redwood 2-by-4's. Spaces between walk and plantings are crushed bluestone. The walk has an interesting pattern to beguile the eye. Paving blocks are used to define borders of planting beds and to edge the lawn and avoid hand-trimming.

A second-floor suite can be the answer to your problem of what to do when your teen-age children and their friends usurp the house. Here parents have created their own private retreat, a place for reading, TV, music, and conversation.

When the Only Way to Go is UP

Sometimes adding a second story to a house can be easier, better, and less expensive than adding first-floor space

● The owners of this house wanted a bedroom for each of their children. This meant it would be necessary to build an addition. But if they added a wing, they'd have to give up part of their garden and sacrifice priceless trees and other rare plant specimens.

The simple answer was to add a second story. Besides not demanding an inch of ground space, it had important other advantages. It would give them more privacy and a better breeze. Breezes always move more freely as you get above the ground. Far from destroying their garden, it would give them a chance to enjoy it from a new and different vantage point. Most important, it would give them a chance to create a truly luxurious bedroom suite to which they could retreat—an entire floor they could call their own.

Adding a second floor to an existing house isn't a difficult operation. The roof can either be removed and a new one added, as in the case here, or it can be jacked up and a second floor built under it. But your foundation and existing structure must be strong enough to support the added load, and zoning ordinances must permit making such an addition. Check with your architect, builder, or local building inspector.

There are plus and minus factors to consider. A new second story is usually easier to heat than an addition at ground level. Heat rises, and you will be benefiting from some of the heat that otherwise would be escaping through your roof. On the debit side, a second story may be noisier. A blaring Hi Fi on the first floor will come through more clearly than if you were in a wing on the far side of the house.

There is a fundamental hazard. Can a second story be added that will maintain or improve the appearance of the house? To be successful, it must look like an integral part of the house, not an afterthought, and it must be right in scale. The addition shown here meets all those tests. Character and distinction have been added along with space.

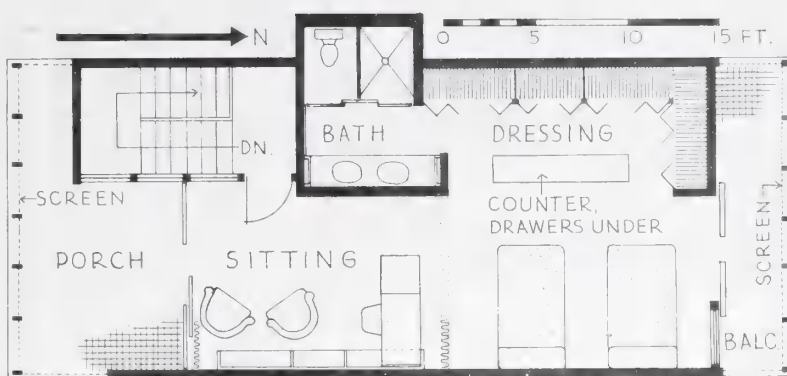

Screened at both ends and oriented toward the bay and its prevailing winds, this new second story is practically a breezeway, comfortable for sleeping as well as for sitting. Curtain partitions make it possible to separate areas, if desired, but essentially it is all one big room.

Protection offered by screened balcony and its roof means the suite can be left open to the breezes even in rainy weather. Balcony has ceramic tile floor. If rain should blow in, there is nothing to worry about.

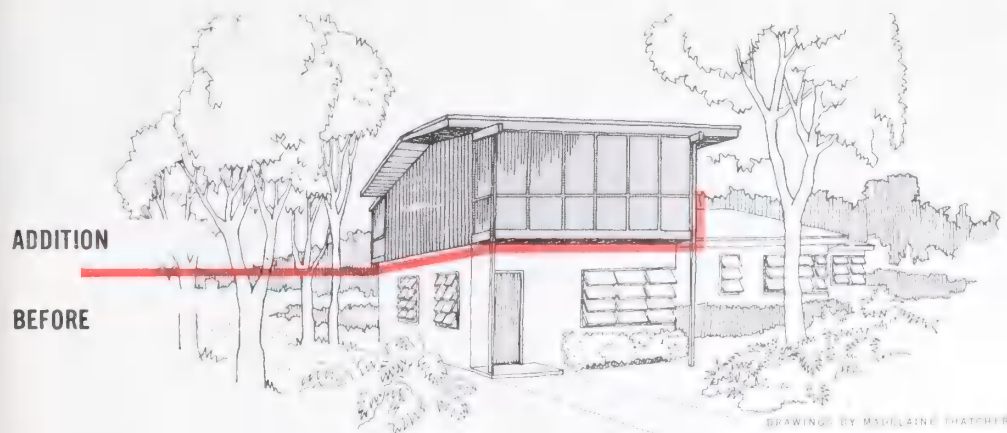

Wood-curl plastic doors compartment the bathroom. The ceramic-tile lavatory counter is a continuation of the ceramic-topped drawer chest in the dressing area.

For many people, being high creates feelings of greater privacy and security. These add up to an intangible sense of well-being. Here, with the miserly windows of the usual attic replaced with walls of glass, the effect is of being up among the trees—in an eyrie, a nest or a tree fort—of floating in space.

Exploit the true shape of an attic

Most attics, by nature, are triangular spaces.

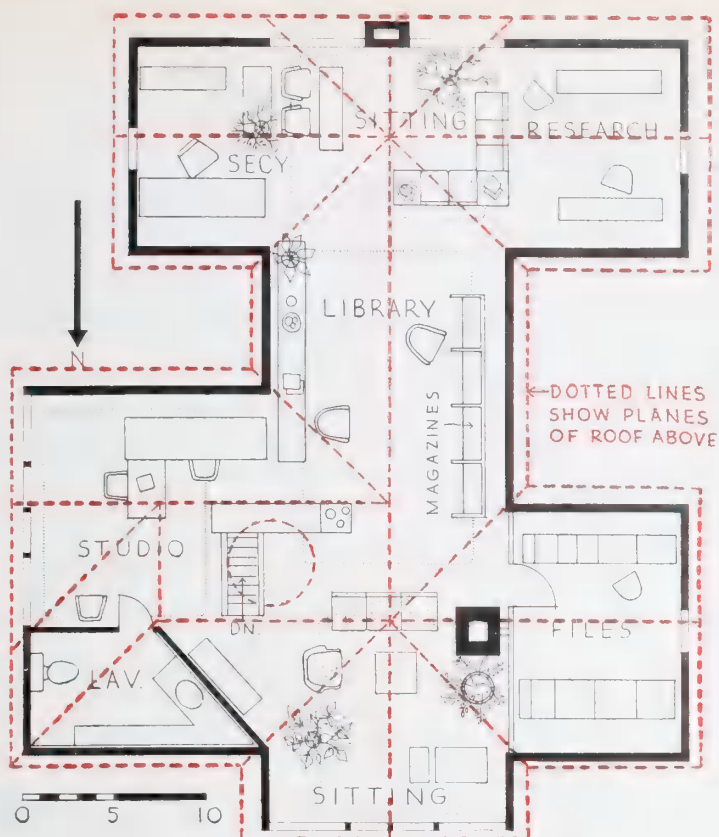

When finishing off an attic, you'll gain by staying true to that nature

● Don't try to force an attic into the shape of rooms downstairs. Don't feel that it must have vertical walls. That isn't the nature of an attic. If it's a triangular space, let it stay triangular. In the photographs on this page you see the result of allowing an attic to express itself. It is the most beautiful one we have ever seen.

Far from being second-rate space, an attic may offer the greatest potentialities for beauty and drama of any area of your house—if only you don't think of it in conventional terms or try to force it into a routine mold.

Here, by not using the conventional knee-wall—a device intended to protect you from bumping your head on the ceiling—600 cubic feet of space was gained, the attic was visually enlarged, and the drama of the triangular space was boldly accented and expressed. By placing bookcases, tables, benches, and filing cabinets in the low-headroom area, you are still protected from whatever hazard the low ceiling presents. Skylight helps keep ceiling from seeming low.

Floor plan shows how attic was divided into seven distinct areas without disturbing its over-all openness. "Rooms" are defined by rugs and the natural separation caused by roof shapes. Owner (a designer) uses attic as office and studio.

In photo, right, you see stairwell. Stairs remain typical, narrow attic approach. Contrast of coming into great, open attic space is all the more striking. Furniture, of necessity, had to be hoisted in through one of windows. Below, you look across studio desk into reception area. Library is at left. Skylight and light color of ceiling give visual lift to roof, keep the slanted wood walls from seeming heavy and oppressive.

Dramatic diagonals give sense of soaring space and keep you from feeling roof is right on your head. Cypress boards cover rafters, maintain character of attic. This is view looking through library.

The truth about the cost of money for remodeling

■ Home improvement is a matter of increased comfort and enjoyment. It is also a matter of hard business sense, for it is vital to the preservation and enhancement of as important an investment as the average family is likely to make. Consequently, if ready cash is not at hand or if, for some good reason, other investments should not be disturbed, borrowing for home improvement is often both necessary and justifiable.

Home improvement financing in the ordinary sense is, however, a special sort of business, quite unlike mortgage financing or borrowing on collateral security. It is often arranged for by the materials dealer or contractor doing the work, rather than directly by a lending institution. It is generally made not on the basis of a payment of simple interest (that is,  $X$  percent a year on the amount of the loan still unrepaid) but on the basis of a "discount" or "add-on." In general, both of these systems involve payment of interest in advance, but it isn't easy to explain exactly how they work.

Assume, for example, that you wish to borrow an amount of $3,500, repayable in a three-year period. A common method of charging for such a loan is by a discount of $6 per $100 per year, calculated on the basis of amount of money which, when so discounted, will give you the $3,500 you need. In this case, the total amount that you would have to repay in monthly installments over the three years would be $4,268. The amount of the discount—$768, the difference between what you receive and what you repay—is equivalent to paying ordinary interest at the rate of (Continued on facing page)

Six Ways to Finance Home Improvements and What They Cost

Type of Loan	Maximum Amount	Maximum Period	Usual Terms	Equivalent Simple Interest*	Total Cost of Money*
Uninsured home-improvement note (bank or other institution) discount basis	Usually $3,500	Usually 5 years	$6 per $100 per year deducted from amount calculated to produce, after the deduction, the desired amount	13.38%	$768
Uninsured home-improvement note (bank or other institution) add-on basis	Usually $3,500	Usually 5 years	$6 per $100 per year added to the desired amount	11.1%	$630
FHA-insured home-improvement note (bank or other institution)	$3,500	5 years	$5 per $100 per year for the first $2,500; $4 per $100 per year for the amount above $2,500 up to the permissible maximum	8.77%	$493.48
Open-end mortgage loan	Usually amount already repaid on existing mortgage	Usually same period as existing mortgage	5% to 7% simple interest, depending on locality and other circumstances	5% to 7% (same as stated rate)	$334 (assuming 6% rate and total 3-year amortization)
Collateral loan	No set limit	No set limit	5½% simple interest	5½% (same as stated rate)	$305
Second mortgage	No set limit	Usually not over 5 years	From 6% up, with discount, depending on locality and other circumstances	12.41% (assuming 6% rate and 3% discount per year)	$712

* For a $3,500 loan amortized over 3 years

13.38 percent per year on $3,500 on a regularly amortized basis (paid off in equal installments, with interest only on the unpaid balance).

This is the way in which most automobile financing and many other types of installment financing are conducted. But it is an expensive type of financing for the borrower. It may be said, in justification, that this is also expensive for the lender. Since it is ordinarily made with no security except the good faith of the borrower, it involves the possibility of high losses. Since the average loan is relatively small in size, there is a high ratio of cost for collection and accounting in relation to the amount of income derived from it.

THE add-on is a somewhat simpler variation of the discount procedure. Take the example of a $3,500 loan with an add-on of $6 per $100 per year for three years. In this case, the $6 per $100 for three years—$630—is added to the stated amount. The borrower receives the full amount of $3,500 but pays back $4,130 in monthly installments over the three-year period. This is equivalent to paying ordinary interest at the rate of 11.1 percent a year on a $3,500 loan repayable over three years. The add-on basis is thus a little less costly than the more complicated discount basis.

Funds for home improvement loans are provided by banks, savings and loan associations, commercial credit and personal loan companies, and, to a lesser extent, by mortgage companies. Although, as noted earlier, the transaction is often handled by the materials dealer or builder, the borrower may also make his arrangements directly with a bank or a savings institution. It is strongly recommended that he do so.

In order to reduce the cost of financing essential home improvements, the Federal Housing Administration in 1934 introduced a financing plan under which it insures lending institutions against loss on unsecured home-improvement loans.

The lender now pays to the FHA a small premium for this protection and agrees to charge not more than the following amounts: for loans amounting to $2,500 or less, a discount of $5 per year for each $100 borrowed; for a loan of more than $2,500, a discount of $5 per year for each $100 up to $2,500, and $4 per year for each $100 above $2,500 up to the maximum of $3,500 that the borrower may obtain.

Under this arrangement, a loan on which the borrower receives $3,500 for the maximum period of five years would involve a total charge of $825. In terms of ordinary interest, this is the equivalent of 8.54 percent a year on a fully amortized, interest-bearing loan of $3,500. The FHA system, while thus giving the borrower a lower-cost loan than those in the typical examples previously described, is more restrictive about purposes for which the funds may be used than may be the case with an uninsured improvement loan.

FOR example, the law requires that the work for which the loan is made must "substantially protect or improve the basic livability or utility of the property." Under this requirement many improvements, such as swimming pools and barbecue pits, have therefore been ruled ineligible.

The law requires that the work done must become part of the real estate. This rules out the financing of all types of equipment that can easily be removed from the premises, such as freestanding refrigerators and ranges. On the other hand, kitchen sinks and garbage digesters, other kinds of plumbing, and permanently installed heating or air-conditioning equipment are eligible for financing. The line between what does and what doesn't "improve the basic livability" is, however, sometimes so indistinct that the only way to be sure that a proposed improvement is eligible for FHA financing is to consult your lending institution or your nearest FHA office.

It is possible, however, to have two or more insured improvement loans outstanding at the same time. Thus, if you obtain a loan to build a new porch this year, you may later obtain another one to cover the cost of painting the house. But the total outstanding balance of loans in force at any one time may not exceed the $3,500 maximum (exclusive of finance charges). And the loan must be arranged be-

SECOND STEP

Just yesterday, he took that dramatic and momentous first step. Today comes an even greater triumph—a second step, hailed as positive proof that “he’s walking!”

So often in life it is a “second step” that proves to be the most significant. This can be especially important when a family is making plans for home remodeling.

First step, of course, is the decision to remodel—whether it’s a new roof, wall or ceiling, or to add a room, convert a basement or attic. The second step is to insist upon quality building materials. When you choose precision-made, durable products including those which carry the famous BESTWALL and CERTAIN-TEED names, you know for sure that home remodeling will mean home improvement.

THE TRUTH ABOUT THE COST OF MONEY FOR REMODELING

fore the work starts: FHA-insured financing may not be used to pay for work completed before financing arrangements have been made.

It is important to bear in mind that there are open to you other and sometimes less costly ways to obtain home-improvement financing. These alternative methods involve merely payment of simple interest at a stated rate of a fixed percentage a year of the outstanding amount of the loan, plus some initial charge for handling the loan transaction.

If, for instance, the property is free of mortgage debt, it should be possible to obtain a mortgage loan. If the improvement project is a major one, this is likely to be the most economic method of financing. In some cases, where a first mortgage is still on the property, you may be able to obtain additional funds under the same instrument. The difficulty here is that if the interest rate currently being charged is higher than that originally stated in the mortgage, the lender may insist on rewriting both the outstanding and the new indebtedness on the basis of the higher rate.

MANY mortgages are so written that you may borrow from time to time additional amounts for home repair and improvement and repay by increasing the monthly payments proportionately. Such a mortgage is called an “open-end” mortgage: its advantage is that you may finance added amounts at the original mortgage interest rate without the expense of taking out a new mortgage. Anyone acquiring a new house with mortgage financing should try to have an open-end provision included in the document for future use.

If the property is already mortgaged and if it is not feasible to obtain funds through an additional advance under the existing mortgage, a second mortgage is possible. Sources of second-mortgage money for home-improvement purposes are not generally plentiful or well organized. The interest rate is likely to be higher than that on a first mortgage, and a discount may be included. As a consequence, the total cost of a second mortgage, especially for a short period, will not differ greatly from that of an unsecured home-improvement note.

Two years ago, the FHA statute was amended to insure lending institutions against loss on loans for major home improvements when made on the basis of a straight interest rate not in excess of six percent a year plus an application fee of $20 and an originating charge of $20, or one percent, whichever is greater.* Such loans may be made from a minimum amount of $2,000 to a maximum of $10,000, and amortized over as long as 20 years. The lending institution may take a second mortgage or such other security, or none, as it and FHA in their discretion may decide. While this plan was devised to provide secondary financing on more favorable terms than available through an unsecured note or an ordinary second mortgage, it has not been widely accepted by lenders, and it would rarely be available to you. But it may be worth inquiring about if you need a sizable amount of borrowed funds.

Generally the cheapest and simplest way to obtain funds for home improvement or for any other special purpose is a collateral loan secured by a savings account, marketable securities, or a life-insurance policy. Or if your credit standing with your bank is sufficiently satisfactory, you may be able to get funds for short periods on a simple interest basis, without any security.

Both home improvement itself and home-improvement financing involve many traps for the unwary. For the guidance and forewarning of borrowers, the FHA has published a number of helpful bulletins, obtainable from any of its offices. This bit of advice that it has been publishing for years is worth keeping at hand whenever you decide to embark on a home-improvement venture:

* Where the loan is paid out during the construction period, with the lender inspecting construction, the fee may be up to but not in excess of $50 or 2 percent of the loan amount.

"The selection of a contractor or dealer and the acceptance of materials used and of work performed are your responsibility. Neither the FHA nor the lending institution guarantees the materials or workmanship.

"All but a few of the thousands of dealers and contractors are ethical businessmen. They are just as anxious as anyone that the home-improvement program operate in your best interest. They are just as anxious as anyone to have you protected against the fraudulent few.

"You can and should always protect yourself, though, and here are several ideas to help you make sure you're getting your money's worth:

"Deal only with a reputable, established contractor or dealer. Consult your lending institution. Better Business Bureau, or Chamber of Commerce if in doubt.

"Choose your contractor or dealer with the same care as you would a family physician.

"Sign the completion certificate only when the job has been completed in accordance with your contract or sales agreement.

"This foresight will protect you and assure the quality and lasting beauty you desire on terms you can afford."

To sum up: 1. Deal with the materials supplier or contractor for the work, but with a lending institution for the financing. It may seem easier to let the person doing the job arrange for the financing, but this is almost certain to be the most expensive way of handling the transaction.

2. Go first to the bank, or the savings and loan association with which you have an account, or the mortgage company or other institution with which you did your original financing. The people at these institutions, who know you, will want the added business you are offering them, and will give you sound advice, and will figure out the best arrangement for you.

3. Remember that borrowing on an unsecured discounted note is the most expensive method, and that borrowing on a note secured by a mortgage or other collateral the least expensive. Use the cheapest method available to you.

Built-in dressing area for compact storage

Ideal for small bedroom, built-in drawers take the place of furniture and utilize space usually wasted under a window. Of varying heights, these drawers are designed specifically for shirts, underwear, socks and other small apparel. Double-level adjoining closet has hanging space for blouses, shirts, and jackets, and drawers for bulky items.

Lost corners made into found space

Lazy-Susan wardrobe unit makes wasted space fully usable. Swivel hanging rod is particularly good idea for the sportsman or exurbanite with a large collection of slacks to store. Three-decker revolving shelves put shoes within easy reach. Lowest shelf was set so slacks just clear the floor of the closet. Morgan Stedman, remodeling architect.

Inside story on a well-designed closet

An aisle in this deep closet stretches space by making more of it accessible. It makes possible pull-out shelves for shirts and sweaters, drawer space for small items, properly proportioned section for hanging jackets and slacks, and a high cabinet for out-of-season gear. Gerald Luss, owner-designer.

Neither Cinderella nor the Prince would have difficulty finding a slipper here. For a couple who share a shoe closet, shelves built from top to bottom accommodate all their shoes. Each slanted shelf has a wooden bar on it to catch the heel. A closet like this needs very little depth, so can be added in front of an existing wall. Harry F. Gates, owner; Henry Eggers, architect.

The new master bedroom opens its walls wide to rear garden. It literally sits among treetops. Through double door at left you can see the bridge that crosses two-story entry gallery and links new wing to old house. This is almost outdoor space. Out of picture at left is door to new bath.

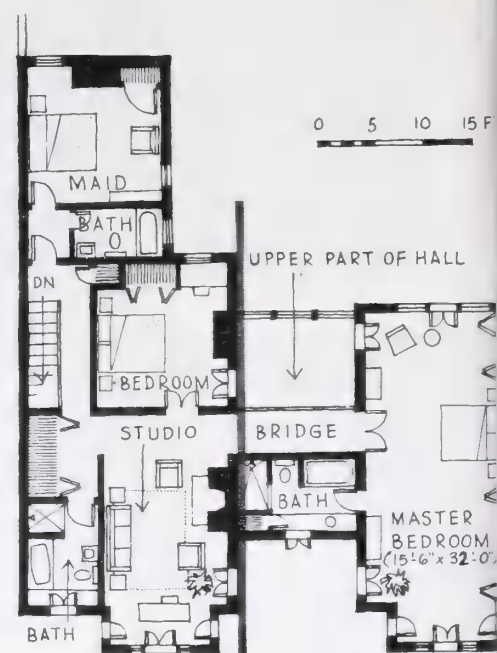

Just as much was accomplished upstairs. A master bedroom of generous size, with room enough for storage of all kinds, took the space over the new living room. The master bath took only part of the space over the entry hall, so that the rest could become a two-story gallery, roofed over with wire glass. The daylight that fills the gallery through the roof and the 22-foot-high windows in the rear makes this a perfect place for growing all kinds of plants, including good-size trees. The old master bedroom became an upstairs sitting room.

Throughout the country are many such houses waiting to be put to contemporary use.

Plans of second floor, before and after, show as much improvement as first floor. New master suite is separated from rest of house by a bridge, giving far more privacy than smaller master had before. patio? And it seems to us a most satisfying sight to watch a strolling Copenhagener pause at an automatic vending machine, put his krone into a slot, and pursue his way refreshed by a piece of smørrebrød.

We've just been taking a fresh look at Ireland, England, Germany, and Denmark, and can report that it is still that mysterious blend of national tradition and temperament that creates a sense of place, no matter how many high buildings and supermarkets alter the landscape. Unless you are a mighty myopic tourist, you don't have to look far beyond the electric-eye doors and self-service elevators to see that exciting differentnesses still give travel its piquancy. One touch of modern plumbing does not necessarily make the whole world one gray kin.

THE traditional pretzel-shop sign which marks the Danish bakery may now occasionally light up in neon, but the pastries purveyed within will still be the flaky, buttery marvels that can't be duplicated anywhere else in the world. And while all business may close down on Sunday, the Danes' passionate respect for food and flowers keeps bakeries and florist shops open. In Ireland, no amount of contemporary architecture and abstract art restrains a waiter from commenting in genial human-to-human fashion that it's a lovely day, thank God, and inquiring after your health—because that's how Irish people are. And in booming, building London, where the street scene is changing as fast as in New York, you can have no doubt where you are when the theater produces such characteristic, bitter, disturbingly funny satire as Oh, What a Lovely War!, and the events of our times are devastatingly interpreted over the air waves on a program called "That Was the Week that Was."

If we can be permitted to tinker with that last title, we'd say that travel today is as much This Is the World that Is as This Is the World that Was. As a dedicated sight-seer, we will never permit ourselves to miss an ancient abbey, an archaeological museum, a storied castle or historical relic on our route—or even off it—because we believe the past is not for burning. But then, neither is the present, for this is what you inevitably must return to after any brush with the antique. We thought of this as we returned one evening to the recently opened Limerick Intercontinental Hotel, after a medieval dinner at Bunratty Castle, a 15th-century stronghold of the Earls of Thomond that has been restored and furnished as authentically as research can guarantee. Here you can get as close to high life in the 15th Century as possible, drinking mead by firelight and eating such dishes as tarte fysche, petytoes in gelyce and peris in syrippe with a dagger, while toasts are shouted and costumed maidens dance the reel and sing plaintive songs to the harp. It's an atmospheric evening that turns out to be more fun than most lingerings with the past do. (Since it's just a few miles from Shannon Airport, stopover plane passengers can easily take it in—if they can tear themselves away from the bargains in Waterford glass, cameras, watches, perfume, liquor, et al in Shannon Airport's custom-free shop.)

But meantime, back in Limerick, while we were eating our salad with a knife, the locals had been pouring into the new hotel, inspecting the modernity of its 96 bedrooms with their slick bathrooms, their Irish linen draperies, their Irish-made wool carpeting, and the bright wool plaid bedspreads, woven in Avoca. We found them there, in the tawny brick-paved lobby, discussing—and mincing no words, either—the avant-garde Irish art hanging on the walls above flower boxes burgeoning with familiar Irish primroses and cinerarias.

WE can probably put it down to our own sentimental association of Ireland with the peat fire and the thatched cottage, that we were surprised to find such unrelenting contemporary design here. What surprised us even more was the local pride with which this newness was accepted. But then we were stunned to discover that the mayor of Limerick, robed in the traditional sable and chain of office, is a mayoress, and a very pretty one. All of which was enough to shake the shamrocks and shillelaghs out of our thinking and bring us up to date with the realities of life in Ireland.

In Cork, base for all travelers who want to kiss the Blarney Stone, there is another Intercontinental Hotel, almost the counterpart of the one in Limerick, appropriately designed in motel fashion. (Not a bad idea in this country, where

How Cointreau makes a Czar's treat out of a Strawberry!

It's an exciting trick performed by Cointreau in your kitchen—in just 10 minutes. It's Strawberries Romanoff... a zesty surprise, a zingy dessert delight that's fit for a Czar. Cointreau Liqueur and its 19 companion cordials are prerequisites for preparing regal main dishes and princely desserts.

Strawberries Romanoff:

Whip 1 pt. vanilla ice cream, slightly. Fold in 1 cup of cream, beaten stiff. Add 6 full tbsps. Cointreau Liqueur. Then pour mixture over 2 quarts of chilled strawberries, sugared to taste. Serve! Other berries may be substituted for strawberries. For other interesting food and drink recipes, write for your free copy of "Gourmet's Guide" to Dept. 87.

distances are short and driving is so simple, once you get used to keeping to the left. Ryan's Car Rental service has desks in the hotels.)

Dublin's latest, largest, and most luxurious hotel is still another Intercontinental, very glassy, very urbane, with a view from its roof lounge, the Martello Room, which opens up a panorama of the city that's never been seen before. Its public rooms are almost severely unadorned except for more Irish abstract art in its major lobby and for vistas of flower beds seen through its glass walls. We were rather charmed by the blowups of 18th-century Dublin scenes by Maldon, applied to its bedroom walls and by the photomural collage of Irish faces on the wall of the bar.

These hotels will undoubtedly be in for some curled-lip criticism by those who contend that the American influence in hotels in foreign countries produces glossy anonymity along with plumbing that functions. We have often contended so ourselves, but in this case we'd have to take issue. The Intercontinental Hotels Corporation is an American concern, a subsidiary of Pan American World Airways. The company plans, builds, and operates hotels on all six continents, in cities that especially attract air-traveling tourists and that new, peripatetic breed of traveler, the international businessman. American methods are certainly brought to this job of international hotelkeeping, but since local financing is usually involved and local skills and enterprise always used, these are not, strictly speaking, American hotels. They reflect the taste of the lands they're in—and if people the world over have fallen in love with towering slab architecture, glass walls, the American idea of a bathroom, and a minimum of plush and ormolu—well, this is the world that is. We note that travelers who criticize such hotels as being too American curl their lips in another direction when they hit a really quaint, indigenous old inn that invites them to share the bathroom with several other guests and regrets that it cannot furnish room service.

As a matter of fact, we would say that the taupe stone Frankfurt Intercontinental, latest IHC hotel, far from imposing an alien façade on the city, has contributed an embellishment to the park-lined banks of the River Main. Inside and out, the designers seem to have achieved that sense of place which saves any building anywhere from anonymity. In this case, the place is modern Germany, and it is interesting to see that, even in the land where the Bauhaus and so-called International School started, contemporary design has relaxed, using pattern and color to relieve the sternness of the straight line. The hotel is, as so many hotels are getting to be, a sort of museum of specially commissioned art, and something like 28 modern German artists are represented in the prints and paintings, sculptures and tapestries. In the Brasserie, or grill room, you can eat your rotisserie-broiled huchner or your apfelfisch-kuchen within eyeshot of a collection of Picasso plates. But we found ourselves wining and dining most happily in the more whimsically turned-out, conversation-provoking Commedia dell'Arte restaurant, where the decoration is inspired by scenes from the operas. One wall is hung with contemporary tapestries depicting The Tales of Hoffmann, and lighted, glass-boxed tableaux from well-known operas are used as privacy devices separating the dining banquettes and tables.

And we do not know any place in the U.S.A.—barring the Bronx Botanical Gardens or the New York Flower Show—where you could see anything like the extravagant floral display that surrounds this hotel and burgeons in specially sunk beds and planters in the lobby.

Americans certainly can't carp that this is a look that reminds them too much of home. Would that it could! The gala elegance of real, live, blooming flowers en masse is peculiarly part of the European public scene. The fresh brightness of flowers is everywhere. They're planted wherever there is free space along the streets, hung in baskets, or set out in urns on the sidewalks. New hotels, like the Royal and the Imperial in Copenhagen, for instance, may be no great beauties of contemporary architecture, but you forgive all that as you take tea or breakfast in their central atriums, which are actually modern versions of the traditional European "winter garden." The Royal rather pretentiously surrounds you with orchids in bloom, while the Imperial charmingly beguiles you with imaginative indoor plantings of less exotic shrubs and flowers—the kind you might take a crack at growing yourself—so you are led to believe that even you might produce the same effects on your home grounds. Similar fancies flitted through our head in the flowery dining room of the charmingly Edwardian Marienlyst Hotel in Elsinore, overlooking the Sound on the Zealand coast north of Copenhagen.

And if plantings in public places flourish, it's because the public itself pays them the same respect they'd pay to their gardens at home. This is one of the strongest impressions Americans bring back from that paragon of all pleasure gardens — Copenhagen's fabulous Tivoli. It is quite literally a garden — a place of flowers, pools and fountains, and tree-shaded walks. Everywhere you look there are blossoms, in vast beds, tumbling from ingeniously hung baskets and planters, climbing walls and kiosks. By night it is sheer fantasy, its pavilions sparkling like diamonds, fountains bubbling like illuminated champagne. And yet, set into all this glamour, there are scenic railways, shooting galleries, concert halls, dance halls, children's playgrounds, twenty-some restaurants where, depending on your taste and purse, you can get a hot dog or a gourmet dinner. Here you can hear an opera or a jazz session, or artists like Lauritz Melchior or Pearl Bailey, see a tight-rope act, or take the children to the pantomime (don't miss this, on any count).

IF YOU were in Copenhagen for a summer and went to Tivoli every day (11 A. M. to midnight, from May 1 to September 15), we'd defy you to take in all it offers. No small part of this garden's attraction is the opportunity to see the Danes disporting themselves, for Tivoli is a playground for everybody of every age, taste, and pocketbook. The admission fee to this phenomenal pleasure park is never more than two kroner, equivalent to about 30 cents, and it is consequently one of the most-used public places you could find anywhere, and used by people in holiday mood when they're not usually expected to be watching where they walk or where they throw the candy-bar wrappers. Yet it is the trimmest, best groomed, uncluttered public place we've ever seen. The crowds, for all their rollicking, treat the place as if it belonged to them personally.

Tivoli is also a place of a thousand design ideas—yours for the taking if you keep your eyes open. Even such details as fences, planters, waste baskets, and the floating houses where the lake ducks live are designed with that peculiarly Danish combination of whimsy and directness that turns the solution of a practical problem into something that charms the eye or tickles the ribs and makes you wonder why you couldn't have thought of it first.

You may also do your souvenir shopping in Tivoli, for Den Permanente, the institution that purveys the finest of Danish arts and crafts, has cannily set up a little branch store here, full of the small mementoes that tourists love to buy, but all tastefully selected, reflecting the kind of thing you will find in larger objects and in fuller variety in the main store on Vesterbrogade.

BACK to the subject of international influences, we would direct all American shopkeepers to the home-furnishings store called Illums Bolighus on Amagertorv for a look at the most beautiful presentation of merchandise we have ever seen. Here again, flowers and plantings flourish in an atrium-like center area and are used as a setting for displays of china, glass, and garden whimsies. The display of glassware, cleverly lighted to bring out the full beauty of its form and brilliance, is as handsome as any museum show.

Amagertorv, by the way, is now a "walking street," meaning that motor traffic is not permitted here — one method the city fathers are using to alleviate Copenhagen's traffic problem. But a walk along this street is a shopper's delight, for you'll also find here the china shops of Royal Copenhagen and Bing and Grøndahl, and if you're really in a walking mood you can keep right on, until suddenly you are at Kongens Nytorv, the central park, which is also the address of the Magasin du Nord, Copenhagen's great department store. With typically Danish imagination, the roof here has been turned into a parking place for youngsters, and you can enjoy the outdoor-furnishings displays because you're invited to sit in them.

Within the last fifteen years, no European country has had a greater influence on the American home scene than Denmark, thanks to the popularity of Danish furniture. You may see what the Danes themselves consider their best in Copenhagen's Industrial Arts Museum, and if you are in Denmark during the Scandinavian Design Cavalcade, you may see the latest in all crafts on special display in shops and in the studios of the craftsmen themselves. This takes place during the month of September.

Where space for a stair well is limited, the spiral staircase is both a practical and an economical solution. It takes up very little floor area. In addition, its interesting form is an architectural asset to a room, as can be seen in these two examples. Above, wood risers circle around rough-hewn post in a ski house. # A NEW ADDITION CAN CHANGE A WHOLE HOUSE

PHOTOGRAPH BY EZRA STOLLER ASSOCIATES

Sun lamp pulls down from ceiling and is adjustable to any height. It is conveniently located here in this workroom-office. The bath and dressing rooms are just across the hall. Outlet is handy for hair dryer or electric massage. Shelves are for reference books and current reading.

The new bedroom, dressing room-bath, and office-workroom make up a pleasant, efficient world, well apart from the main stream of traffic in the house. With all these facilities so close together, yet separate from one another, it is possible to get much more done in less time than if the office-workroom, for example, were in another part of the house.

The bedroom has a small table and comfortable chairs where breakfast can be served. In the office-workroom all the telephone shopping, and the calls required to plan the day can be made. Any account-keeping, letter-writing, or other necessary work can be done in privacy while one is fresh, and before dressing for the day.

Of course, the separate dressing rooms and baths make it possible for two busy people to prepare for the day, or change for evening, at the same time. But there's the added advantage of each area being designed specifically for the needs of the individual. The wife's dressing room has a sitdown dressing table and low counters. The drawers and cabinets are custom-fitted for her clothing and accessories.

The husband's side has special storage for clothing and a stand-up counter for dressing. His bath has a shower, while hers has a tub. A single dressing room must always be a compromise, in storage facilities and in size.

The complete renewal of this area, which came about when the new wing was added, has also had a worthwhile effect on the children's rooms—also on this floor. The daughter's room was repainted and more efficiently equipped for study and reading. The son's room and a guest room were redecorated to keep it all looking like the same house.

You may be assured that when you start to remodel, one good thing will lead to another. Some improvement of related areas must be considered a part of the project. It is best to be prepared for this beneficial phenomenon, particularly when figuring the budget.

always know where to find each item." Place mats and linens have their own shelves and drawers. Sliding doors replaced the hinged doors of cabinets in the breakfast area, so china and glassware are within reach of the table without moving a chair.

In the old kitchen, sliding shelves below the counter held cooking utensils. But this meant stooping and bending to select the pan desired. A much more convenient arrangement for Mrs. Lewin is the high cabinet next to the oven, in which rods with sliding hooks were installed. Pans are now in full view and in reach, as the door is opened. Lids hang on back walls of pegboard.

In studying ways and means to make the kitchen easier to keep, a one-piece counter top and backsplash, without seams, eliminated the problem of dirt's collecting in corners and at the back of the counter. Exteriors and interiors of the cabinets are plastic laminate, which is easily wiped clean. The primrose-yellow interiors are a repeat of the counter top and pick up the color of one of the stripes in the curtains.

Instead of an under-counter waste basket, a chute was built-in at the end of the cooking peninsula. Cans and waste papers may be dropped into the stainless-steel-lined chute, to fall into a 20-gallon garbage can located at street level.

Bulk storage of paper and case goods had always been in the basement. Special cabinets for canned goods, installed in the utility room adjoining the kitchen, are near the point of use, and stocks are easily checked.

The utility room had been used chiefly as a laundry, although a horizontal freezer was kept there. The newly planned room is far more functional. A vertical freezer occupies less than half the floor space of the old horizontal model, allowing space for additional storage and counter space. By replacing the separate washer and dryer with a single under-counter combination unit, another 24" of space was gained, and a continuous 12'-long work counter. Now there is a work area and storage for laundering as well as space for flower arranging.

HOW TO UPDATE A KITCHEN WITHOUT STRUCTURAL CHANGES

At end of cooking peninsula, cut-out door mounted on piano hinge pulls down to reveal stainless-steel chute. Empty cans, paper cartons, boxes, and other waste drop down and into 20-gallon garbage can situated at street level below. Slant of drawer front gives pull-space.

New equipment has added untold conveniences. Dishes no longer have to be scraped and prerinsed before being put into the dishwasher. The refrigerator, while it occupies the same floor space as the old model, has an additional 8-cu.-ft. capacity because of new thin-wall insulation. It never needs defrosting. Furthermore, it fits flush against the wall and looks built-in.

The new fully automatic wall oven is located at a convenient height, eliminating the stooping and bending connected with use of the old range. The continuous stainless-steel cooktop and the built-in rotisserie-grill with its vented hood are easy to use and clean. Even the double-bowl stainless steel sink has added new convenience with its chopping block from which peelings are easily scraped into the disposer well.

All this adds up to a bright and cheerful updated kitchen which is now the last word in efficiency and convenience.

Illusion of space was gained by removing all possible separation between areas. Furnishing of music room, entry, and sitting room gives each an identity. Best of the original (such as oak floors) was retained.

Logans, the way is now open for others to restore their houses while producing income at the same time.

The Logans wanted a spacious apartment in which they could live in a modern way, entertain large or small groups of friends, hold committee meetings, and still have privacy when one of them needed extra rest. They also hoped to have several apartments to rent. Their architect worked out a solution that gave them a well-planned duplex for themselves plus four rental apartments.

Since the only stairway had to be partitioned off for use by all the tenants, a new private stair was needed between the living and bedroom floors of the owners' apartment. A small corner fireplace and its chimney were taken out to provide the additional space. The new stairway is so attractive that it has become the focal point of the interior.

TWO PHOTOGRAPHS BY O. PHILIP ROEDER

Side wall of living room (back wall shows in picture above), makes good use of limited space. Hi Fi, TV, books, and lots of storage are included in a custom-made cabinet that has a visual life of its own.

Partitions were removed between the three rooms of the living floor, opening it into one large room. Additional light was provided by replacing two small windows in the rear wall with sliding glass doors. They opened onto a railed deck with stairs leading down to the garden. An extension to the left of the deck was made into a modern kitchen. A strip of windows, added over the sink counter, look out to treetops. A former dumb-waiter shaft provided space for a lavatory.

In both the living and dining areas, the original finely proportioned fireplaces were retained, as were the ones in the master and guest bedrooms, each with its own private bath.

The over-all effect of this duplex is much like that of a suburban house. The very active citizens' block committee has been inspired by the metamorphosis of this middle-of-the-block Cinderella. Its owners have spent many long evenings assisting neighbors in making preparations for similar property improvement.

What Section 220 of the National Housing Act can do for you if you own property in an Urban Renewal area

The law provides that if you rehabilitate a single-family dwelling in a designated Urban Renewal area, the government will insure 97 percent of the first $15,000 of the FHA's valuation of your property, 90 percent of the next $5,000, and 75 percent of the remainder up to a maximum loan of $25,000. If you fix up a house with two living units, you may borrow $27,500; on a three-unit house, $30,000; on a four-unit house, $35,000; on a five-unit house, $42,000. This is the maximum that will be insured.

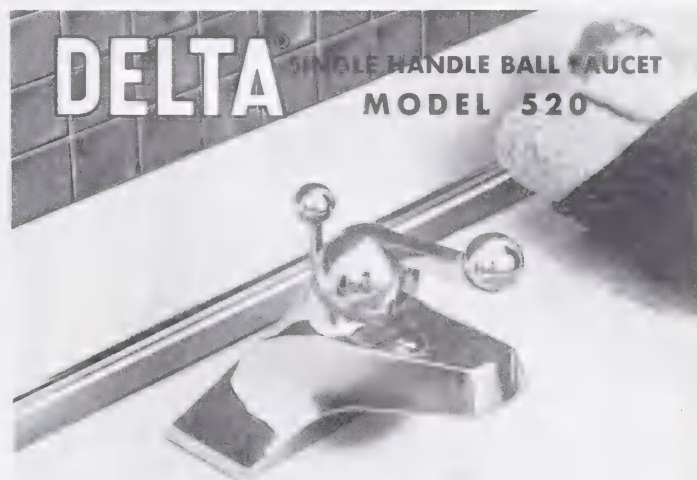

The duration of your mortgage will depend on the condition of your property and the number of units you put into it. The law provides that Section 220 mortgages for five or more units may extend for as long as 40 years, but your lending institution is entitled to decide for itself. The law simply states that the terms must satisfy the local Federal Housing Commissioner. If you would like to know more about the provisions of the National Housing Act, contact your local FHA.

DOWN TO A USEFUL LEVEL

Lack of screening for the service area, in foreground, was a further deterrent to outdoor living here. When the ground level was changed and a terrace installed, a wood fence was used to separate the working and living areas. Gravel replaced an area of grass which did not do well in the shade.

AFTER

Functional and attractive, this remodeled workroom makes fine use of space that was previously wasted. By replacing old radiator with wall-recessed unit and moving door 24 inches (see "before" picture at left) an entire wall became available for equipment, storage, much-needed counter.

Now four jobs can be done instead of one

■ The old laundry room was not only dreary, it was impossible. By comparing the "before" and "after" pictures, you will see the amazing transformation accomplished by well-organized planning. In addition to complete home-laundrying facilities, this newly remodeled 9'4" by 12'9" room has well-equipped work centers for food freezing, sewing, and flower arranging.

In order to make full use of wall space, the door at the end of the room was moved 24 inches. The old radiator, occupying valuable floor space, was replaced with a wall-recessed unit. With these simple changes, it was possible to fit into the space along one wall an 18-cu.-ft. freezer, an adjoining 6'-long counter, plus a utility cabinet. Below the counter top are cabinets that hold freezer supplies, as well as a sewing machine. In between, there's space for an ironer.

By placing washer and dryer in space previously occupied by the old sink, the same water connections could be used. The remaining wall area includes hamper and storage cabinets for laundering aids and accessories for flower arranging. Plenty of counter space surrounding the corner stainless-steel sink serves many needs.

AFTER

Sewing machine stores in 24" under-counter cabinet that extends to 38 inches. It is handy for mending, with plenty of work space nearby. Shallow drawers above machine hold sewing supplies. A posture chair serves for both ironing and sewing.

Getting to know you!

You already know a lot about this magazine.

To know about you is equally important to us. Our editors must decide what to include in each issue, what to omit. Our advertisers must decide what to say, and how to say it, to multiply sales.

Where do we get the answers? From a mutual friend, the Audit Bureau of Circulations. This respected, nonprofit organization of publishers, advertisers, and advertising agencies carefully checks, clarifies, and certifies the circulation figures of member publications.

Measures them by uniform standards. Defines the distribution patterns. Reflects constantly changing tastes. Helps editors, advertisers, and readers to get to know each other better.

The result? You get a better magazine to read. You pay lower prices for the advertised brands you buy. Thanks to the Audit Bureau of Circulations, getting to know each other is fun, and worthwhile for publisher and public alike.

WHEN THE ONLY WAY TO GO IS UP

Sudden showers make it impractical in this Florida climate to leave windows open on a regular basis. Here, however, by extending the roof and creating a ceramic-tiled balcony as a buffer between indoors and out, natural ventilation is possible even on days when rain is falling.

Clothes need air too. Louvered doors on the closets in the dressing area, immediately adjoining bedroom, help combat the twin problems of humidity and mildew. Strip light built into the beam above the ceramic-tiled counter follows the counter into the bathroom, which is to the left.

Illuminated niche for the display of pre-Columbian art, collected by owner, was created by the removal of an old cabinet in one corner of the library. At an adjacent corner, over the end of a suede sofa (designed by owner) is an unusual adjustable reading lamp, especially planned for this tight situation by Irene McGowen.

of the entrance and dining room. This was something to be seen from inside the house but it was not very useful even as a place to walk.

Something of this formal quality was retained in the new garden, although the architect did make the garden as modern as he could and still maintain a satisfactory relation to the style of the house. Some of the quadrants of grass were removed and replaced with brick paving to create outdoor sitting and dining areas. But the narrow watercourse, which begins in a pool against a brick wall on the east side of the garden and rills across the garden to another pool, is punctuated on the central axis of the dining room with a small fountain.

Much of the planting in the garden is a part of the original landscaping, but some of the plants that were not thriving were removed. Some of them were moved to new locations. A hedge of Japanese yew was planted to screen the western section of the garden from the street. The end result is that the former garden, which was conceived only as something to be viewed, has become an extension of the living area of the house.

Not all old houses may be as well planned as this one was. But with this one as a clear example of what can be achieved with relatively few changes, we may be less inclined to pass them by in our search for a place to live.

Termite Control

—facts for remodelers

• Your remodeling plans should include protection against termites simply because pretreatment is far less costly than control after the project is completed.

Termites are creamy-white insects, blind, and about 1/4 inch long. They live by eating wood, and in a house they are most undesirable tenants, because their consumption of wood weakens the strength of the structure.

They live in below-ground nests, in places that are warm, moist, and dark. They feed on most woods, though redwood, cedar, and cypress are resistant to their attacks (dense heart redwood and tidewater red cypress are virtually impervious to them). A few species of virgin timber (first-growth trees) are also resistant to termites—though you are not likely to find much available for building now.

IN ALL good construction, wood should not be allowed to rest on or touch the ground. At least six to eight inches of clearance should exist between the soil line and the first occurrence of wood. In short, the concrete foundation should extend six inches above the soil line and be visible everywhere, so an inspection can be easily made for termite tunnels.

Termites build tunnels of a mud-like-looking substance through which they can travel in darkness to reach their destination. They need the tunnels so they can return to their nests for moisture. The entire perimeter of your foundations and all piers should be easily inspectable—inside and outside. These inspections for tunnels should be made twice a year.

Termites can also penetrate a house by building tunnels up through hollow concrete blocks. And they can actually work their way through porous concrete.

If you are building on a slab foundation, a waterproof membrane of bituminous material is recommended under the slab. All expansion joints and seams around pipes and conduits extending through the slab should be sealed with coal-tar pitch.

Also take these steps:

1. The site on which the room is to be built should have positive drainage. Good foundation drainage and moisture-proofing of walls below grade with bituminous coatings are insurance against the development of undesirable moisture around the foundation.

2. Have the soil poisoned by a reliable, licensed termite-control operator. Pretreatment of soil is the best way to protect a home from termite damage. The poison, mixed and applied by professional personnel, creates a long-lasting termite barrier. But it will probably need renewing every five years. If your addition is to be built on a slab, the termite-control operator should poison the entire soil area to be topped by the slab. If the room is to be built on a conventional foundation, he will treat only the soil around the foundation and piers. Control children and pets while this poisoning is done, and see that no water pockets exist.

3. If the new area is built on a conventional foundation, provision should be made for cross-ventilation. The ventilators should be installed to give a minimum of two square feet of ventilation at least every 25 lineal feet.

A man-size entrance to any crawl space should be provided so annual inspections can be made for the presence of termites.

4. Veneer for the new addition—no matter of what type—should be started six to eight inches above the soil line. If brick or stone veneer extends below the soil level, the termites can work in through the mortar joints and have direct access to a dark void through which they can progress to the wood above. Since their entrance is hidden, they can do considerable damage before their presence is discovered.

5. Termite shields may help. Properly designed and installed termite shields make it harder to build tunnels. Even when the proper shield has been correctly installed, periodic inspections are still needed to make sure nothing has made it possible for the termites to by-pass them and reach the wood above.

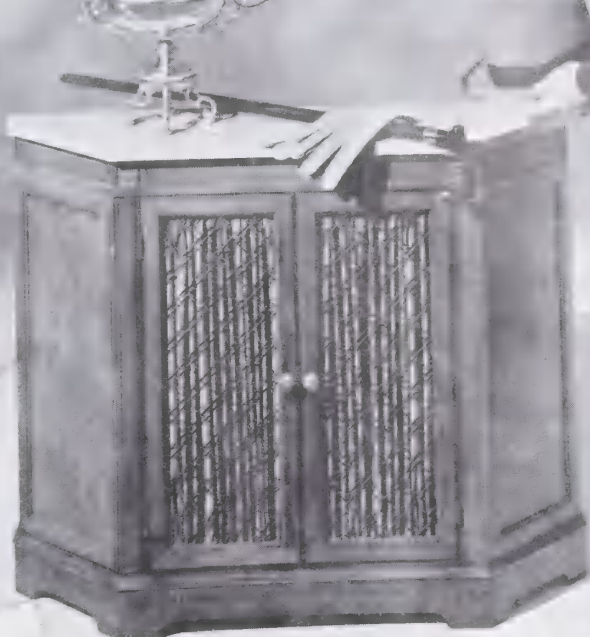

6. For parts of the structure uncomfortably close to the soil, or in line with possible tunnels, use wood pressure-treated with copper sulphate, which makes it impervious to attack from termites.

7. See that all wood debris is cleared from the ground area where the new addition is to be built. Rubbish of all description can be removed by use of a sharp-tined rake so that the crust of the earth is broken and scarified to a depth of three or four inches.

The best way to obtain a price for treatment of your proposed remodeling project is to show your plans to a reliable termite control company. If you are not familiar with a concern that specializes in this work, check the Better Business Bureau, The Chamber of Commerce, or your county agent. The company should be bonded and licensed by the state.

In most parts of the country it is now possible to obtain continuous protection from termites with an annual security contract which underwrites the termite hazard. Such security contracts provide periodic inspections and continuous termite protection for very few dollars a year. The rate depends upon the size of your home and upon other factors that add to or detract from the risk of termites.

Designing the structure properly in the first place is the biggest factor in termite control. Regular inspection is the next biggest factor. And eradication, after they have gotten a foothold, is the third factor.

tween its floor boards. It is free to run off underneath the deck without undermining it.

A DECK extends your outdoor living season. Up off the chill and dampness of the ground, you are able to sit outdoors on many days when it would otherwise be out of the question. It dries out quickly after a rain, for its boards can be left exposed to the air on every side.

A deck's smooth surface makes snow easy to push away. It can thus function as a dry, clear play yard for children even through the worst of winter. For the aged and infirm, it offers sure footing and easy access in any season. The outdoors can again become part of their world.

The design of a house can be improved by a deck. Accentuating the horizontal, a deck can make a high, boxy house look longer and lower. (It is the perfect antidote for a too-high foundation wall.) It can add importance to a small, inexpensive house, character to a nondescript one.

Decks are extremely economical. Besides not requiring any preliminary grading or filling, they can be built of ordinary inexpensive Douglas fir framing lumber—the kind that is used in making the structure of a house. In 2 by 6 size, this costs about 15 cents per running foot. Simple piers, spaced 8' apart, are usually ample to sustain its supporting posts. For 18½ cents per running foot, you can get "Wolmanized" or penta pressure-treated fir. This is a good treatment against termites and decay.

If you build a deck of untreated fir, it will require periodic maintenance. It will need painting, staining or brush coats of a water-repellent wood preservative annually. (Cost: about $7.50 per 1,000 sq. ft.) This is not necessary if you use treated fir or if you build your deck of some naturally durable species of wood, such as all-heartwood redwood, cedar, or cypress.

But these woods are more expensive. In the east, for example, 2 by 6 all-heartwood redwood sells for 40 cents a running foot. However it is so durable that it can even be used in contact with moist earth.

Fir is a stronger, stiffer board than redwood, and less subject to splintering. Cedar is weaker and more flexible than either, but it is one of the best weathering boards you can buy. Whichever you choose, you can't go wrong—for decks are great.

How to make your lawn better than it is

By DR. RALPH E. ENGEL
Professor of Turfgrass Science, Rutgers University

■ There is no such thing as a perfect lawn. There will always be some weeds, some discoloration, and some areas where the grass is relatively thin. Whether or not the imperfections are enough to warrant improvement depends upon your personal idea of what a lawn should be.

But no matter what the condition, your lawn can be improved. Beginning with the easiest steps toward improvement and progressing to more demanding remedies, here are recommendations for making your lawn better than it is.

A program of maintenance

You may be surprised at how much a good program of maintenance can do for the appearance of almost any lawn. Unless yours is obviously in need of more drastic repair, it makes sense to bring what you have to its best condition. Proper watering, weeding, feeding, and grooming should first be practiced.

When you water, put on enough to soak three or four inches into the ground. This encourages deep rooting and you won't have to water so frequently.

It is better to feed your lawn two or three times in late summer and fall rather than apply one large treatment all at once. For 1,000 square feet of lawn (an area 50 by 20 feet), use 10 to 15 pounds of fertilizer for each application. A fertilizer with about 10 parts nitrogen, 6 parts phosphorus and 4 parts potassium (10-6-4) is excellent for lawns, but the ratio can vary somewhat.

In the South, where warm-season grasses such as bermuda grass and zoysia are grown, do not fertilize until late spring for best results. Or ask your dealer for a "non-burning" type of fertilizer, to minimize the problem.

Where rainfall is more than 30 inches a year, the alkaline materials in the soil may be leached out and an acid condition can develop. This may adversely affect the quality of the lawn, so that added lime is needed. There is no sure way to tell when lime is required, except by testing for the acid-alkaline balance. This balance, of course, is stated in a pH figure. Number 7 is neutral on the scale. Lower numbers show acidity. In most cases a pH of below 6.5 to 6 on a lawn calls for an application of lime. Spread about 25 to 50 pounds per 1000 square feet. The lower rate is for sandy soils, the higher for heavier soils.

A pH of 7.5 or more can occur in dry areas, and is too high for good growth of grass. An application of gypsum is the usual treatment to decrease the alkalinity. Wherever this is a problem there are always accepted local practices.

As your program of good care progresses, do the best grooming job you can. Cut the grass thoroughly with a sharp mower, rake up all obvious trimmings and debris, and trim the edges neatly. In three to four weeks, when the fertilizer has had its effect, the lawn will be about as good as you can expect it to be—without more thorough treatment. If the status quo is not satisfactory, it is time for the next step.

What to do for dead spots

A few areas of brown are usually not serious. But they should be repaired. In cool-climates, September is the best season for this. If you wait much later, there's danger of winter kill. If done in spring, it may turn too warm before the new grass can take the heat. Brown spots in warm-climate grasses, such as bermuda or zoysia, can often be remedied by generous feeding at the start of the warm season. They can also be repaired with plugs or sod.

All you need for the job in seeded lawns is a rake, good grass seed, and fertilizer. Apply the fertilizer and work it into the brown patches with a rake. If the entire lawn has been recently fertilized, all that's required is to loosen the soil with the rake. Spread the seed evenly and rake again very lightly. If the rain is not sufficient, water often enough to keep the surface moist.

If you want immediate results, some of the bad areas in a lawn can be resodded instead of reseeded. Be sure you get grass to match the type you have. It's best to use a hand sod cutter for this job rather than a spade. Lower the soil level with a rake so the sod will be flush with the lawn. Roll or tamp the sod after installation, and keep it watered thoroughly.

HOW TO MAKE YOUR LAWN BETTER THAN IT IS

Some lawns are so thin, weedy, or spotted that optimum care or localized treatment will not get the desired results. It may require complete reseeding to do the job. This can be done in one of these three different ways:

1. Reseed the existing turf.
2. Kill the existing grass, and then reseed.
3. Dig out the lawn, regrade, and start anew.

This work should normally be limited to the period between late August and early October.

Reseed on existing turf

This is the easiest method, but it is also the slowest and most vulnerable. The new seedlings must crowd out the mature established grass, and they can succumb rather quickly in dry periods. If you are able to water the area thoroughly, the seeding can be done at any time during the growing season. If watering is difficult, do the seeding when rainfall will provide the necessary moisture. Seeding in late October or during the winter is an easy procedure, but there may not be as good a "catch" of seedlings as when done during the late summer or early fall.

The lawn must be properly prepared for seeding. First, kill all the weeds you can. Water well twice a week, unless there is rainfall to do the job. Fertilize the lawn as directed above. If weather is cool and moist, gradually lower the cutting height to one inch, and remove the clippings.

The objective of reseeding without destroying existing turf is to fill in the numerous and extensive bare areas. Broadcasting seed by hand over the area without preparation of the soil is sometimes adequate but more commonly fails.

To assure good contact of seed with soil, the ground should be sliced or pierced with a machine designed for this job. There are many kinds available. There are slicing machines, such as Aero-thatch, and Renothin; spike-discs, such as Powerspike or the hand-pulled spike-disc; hole punchers, such as Aerifier and Soilare; and vertical cutting machines, such as Henderson, Jacobsen, E-Z Rake, and Verticut.

The slicing machines that cut at an interval of about one inch probably disturb the appearance of the turf the least. But any machine that opens up the soil to let in air, water, and seed will increase germination and improve the stand of grass. If there is not enough work to be done on your lawn to justify the purchase of a machine, one may be rented, or the work can be done by a specialist on an hourly basis.

The more thorough the cutting of thatch and soil, the better the germination of seed. The treatment should be repeated to the degree the turf can tolerate. Some established turf grown in shade, or subject to severe injury, may have poor roots and can take only the mildest treatment, such as gentle spiking.

Seed can be applied as soon as the surface treatment is finished. Apply seed with a good spreader. And drag the surface with a steel door mat or something similar, to work the seeds down. It will improve the appearance of the area if you rake up the excess trash and mow the remaining grass. Watering will help speed germination, but is not necessary in humid areas. Water well when weather is dry. The established turf helps prevent erosion.

Kill grass, then reseed

The advantage of this method is in eliminating mature plants that shade the new seedlings and compete for water and nutriment. The disadvantage is the loss of whatever good grass there may be, and the complete loss of green lawn for a period of weeks.

This method can be started earlier in late summer because the new seeding will not be slowed down by competition from the existing grass. These are the steps to follow:

1. If dandelions, plantain, or buckhorn are abundant, remove them in late July or early August.

2. Lower the height of cut and remove clippings during this same period.

3. Apply 50 to 75 pounds of a 5-10-5 fertilizer, or other balanced fertilizer appropriate to your locality, per 1,000 square feet. Applied to wet lawn, this will kill most of the grass and weeds. It will also serve as a plant food for the new lawn.

Or kill the grass with some other chemical. Do this in time to permit late August or early September seeding. One that may be used with reasonable safety is cacodylic acid. It is used in some commercial herbicides, and seeding can be done as soon as vegetation is dead. But if you don't have time or patience to follow the instructions to the letter, you should not use chemicals at all.

4. Start tillage within a day or two after the first chemical treatment. Further delay may lead to root deterioration and the old turf residue could pull loose, which would require raking and hauling away. Cultivate the ground with the machine that most thoroughly chops and cuts the surface. Some of the professional turf growers use the hole-cutting type, 3 to 5 times over, and follow this with the groove-cutting machine. More renovations suffer from too little cultivation than from too much. However, if cultivation is too intensive, the surface is pulled loose and must be removed, with appreciable effort. In most cases there will be some loose vegetation to rake and remove.

5. Seed of the appropriate grasses should be spread at a rate of three to five pounds per 1,000 square feet for typical lawn seed mixtures.

6. Drag the area with a mat to work the seed into the soil.

7. Water, if necessary to keep the soil moist. With reasonable care erosion is not a problem. The trashy residue tends to serve as a mulch to retain moisture and help with germination.

8. Cut the grass when necessary with a reel-type mower.

be leveled for the sake of surface drainage and appearance. Or it may be required where all of the soil is in need of improvement. It is also a good way to get a vigorous stand of grass quite soon after planting. Of course it takes considerable time and labor, and includes the temporary nuisance of soft uncovered soil where there was lawn before. It is much like making a new lawn.

1. Destroy the old lawn with chemicals as recommended above. Do this one or two weeks before tilling the area.

2. Apply 50 pounds of 5-10-5 or other appropriate fertilizer per 1,000 square feet before tillage (unless you have used fertilizer to kill the grass). Also apply lime if pH tests show that it is necessary.

3. Till the lawn soil to a depth of six to nine inches with a spade plow, disc, or rotary tiller.

4. Allow the rain to settle the soil or, if it's dry, water thoroughly. Roll and rake moderately to refirm the soil and close large voids.

5. Rake and drag repeatedly with a heavy mat to give a smooth contour.

6. Apply 5 to 10 pounds of 5-10-5 or similar fertilizer per 1,000 square feet on the nearly finished surface.

7. Apply three to five pounds of appropriate lawn seed mixture per 1,000 square feet.

8. Rake the seeded soil very lightly. Do not drag it with the rake.

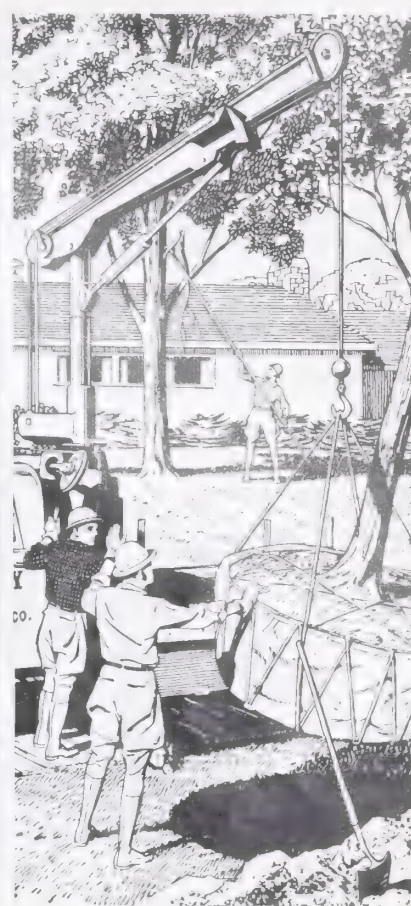

9. Protect the seeding with mulch, or an open mesh material, if the area is subject to erosion.

10. Germination can be speeded with mistlike waterings to keep the surface damp. Discontinue daily watering when grass grows.

About sodding

Of course you could resod the area after grading. In general it costs from 25 percent to 100 percent more to have a sod lawn installed than to have a seeded lawn put in. You can also do much more of the work yourself on a seeded lawn.

Do not undertake major renovation of a lawn without considerable thought and planning. Rather definite amounts of time are required. You must be thorough and attentive to details. Be patient and allow time for the new grass to develop. All growing things, whether lawns, flowers, pets, or children usually have some complications in the process of development. But it is all worth while if you keep your eye on the rewards.

Move it safely— call DAVEY—now!

Now's the perfect time to move that treasured tree to the very spot where you've always thought it should be — to really show off its splendid fall coloring.

Also, moving in big new trees — now — means you can enjoy the luxuriant shade and beauty of sizable trees without waiting years for them to grow. But remember — only experts can move large trees safely. It's a job that needs experienced, trained men, working with modern techniques and special equipment. Davey provides all this, to your economical satisfaction.

Davey deep-root feeding, expert pruning and cabling your trees now, too, will help keep them vigorous and beautiful for a fine spring showing.

NEW DAVEY SERVICE — LAWN FEEDING While Davey is servicing your trees, let us give your lawn its last feeding of the year, with Da-V-Green, the special Davey lawn food. Next spring your lawn can be a deeper, richer green than ever before.

This rich green carpet of violets, at Old Westbury Gardens on Long Island, thrives from spring to fall and is studded in spring with lovely deep-blue flowers. The ground is covered so well that weeds are no problem.

The virtues of violets as a ground cover

By ELSIE LOUISE SCULTHORP

■ I'll never forget that after a long absence from my garden, I was obliged to spend weeks of spare time clearing out and pulling down ivy. It took possession not only of the ground but also of shrubs and trees. Since then I have been most appreciative of nonaggressive and nonclimbing ground covers.

There are many to choose from, but the violet is one of the most delightful. The most common violet, and one of the most beautiful and useful as a ground cover, is the blue butterfly violet (Viola papilionacea).

It is the most showy and floriferous of the "everyday" violets. Its great quantities of large deep violet-blue flowers appear in April and May and are held well above the foliage. Its big, rounded leaves of rich green are carried on six-inch stems. In rich, moist soil its stems may reach a length of twelve inches. Unfortunately, it has no fragrance.

As do many violets, it grows in sun, or in the deep shade of shrubs or trees. This one is much too robust to put in a collection of other plants, but should be used only where it can be allowed to seed itself and spread freely. A perennial, it disappears completely where winters are cold but is a great performer from early spring until late fall. In warm climates it often stays green the year around.

There are forms of butterfly violet with flowers of pure white, faintly tinted blue, pale blue, or pale pink.

Another good species for covering the ground goes by the charming name of confederate violet (V. priceana). It has pale gray-blue or white petals, and a deep-purple eye. It is not fragrant, but does seed itself freely.

The sweet violet (V. odorata) of Europe has soft, rounded leaves and very fragrant flowers of violet, purple, pale blue, pink, or white. When grown outdoors, the stems are quite short. Grown in a greenhouse, they are long enough to pick. It is perfectly hardy but less robust than the butterfly violets. Although one would not use the sweet violet as a ground cover for large areas, it makes a delightful small planting.

Violets can be transplanted at any time, even when in flower. Although they grow easily anywhere with no care, they do respond to good treatment. They grow better in good soil, with a little leaf mold or well-rotted compost and some bone meal well dug in. A little fish meal watered in before blooming time will work wonders with the size and quantity of the flowers. Soil, if possible, should be on the moist side.

THE VIRTUES OF VIOLETS

Here's a practical and handsome use for violets. They fill a space that would be very hard to trim by hand.

There's more to the violet than beauty and fragrance. Celebrated in song and story since ancient times, it has always been a beloved flower. Ovid spoke of it with favor. Shakespeare referred to it frequently. At the celebrated floral games, held in the south of France during the days of the troubadours, a silver violet was awarded for the best heroic poem.

In the language of flowers—that delightful, old-fashioned idea that attributed to each flower some special virtue or meaning—the blue violet is the emblem of modesty; white, of candor and purity.

There's good reason to assign the qualities of modesty and purity to the violet. Many varieties retain the purity of their line by means of closed, seed-producing flowers that are self-pollinating. These are called cleistogamous (closed marriage) flowers, and are not the colorful ones for which the plant is famous.

They are small and budlike, mostly pale green in color. Depending on the variety, they may grow underground, close to the ground, or among the showy flowers. As these bud-flowers open up, you can see the brown seed.

If you wish to gather the seed, pick the buds just before they are ripe and put them into a closed paper bag to ripen. Otherwise they will shoot the seeds far and wide.

After growing the three violets mentioned here, you will probably be tempted to try some of the others of this charming and numerous family. You will find many varieties in garden stores and catalogs.

How to succeed while you're still young

Take the initiative. You won't always be right. But knowing business fundamentals will cut your margin of error to the minimum . . . . .

"Actively seek all of the responsibility you can possibly handle. You'll never get anywhere by avoiding the tough assignments . . . . .

"Develop the instinctive ability to make quick, accurate decisions. Business has always reserved its greatest rewards for men of action and courage . . . . .

"Broaden your knowledge of business in a systematic, organized way; learn the problems and viewpoints of all major departments of business . . . . ."

An interview with James M. Jenks, Vice President, Alexander Hamilton Institute

THE famed management consultants—Booz, Allen & Hamilton—contend that "The return of rigorous competition is forcing the improved use of executives. In many cases the margin of competitive success or failure is locked up in the quality of management talent."*

It is in times such as these that seniority is often thrown out the window; and that knowledgeable, ambitious young people are permitted to rise as fast and as far as their ability enables them to go. For business has too much at stake to discriminate on the basis of age.

The man who can do the job, gets the job . . . whether he's 28 or 58.

And today—as in critical eras in the past—top managerial talent is emerging from big and small organizations throughout the country. From engineers, chemists and other technical men. Among salesmen. Accountants. Lawyers. Marketing men.

Their backgrounds are diverse; but all of these men share a compelling force to succeed, and the intelligence to realize that only people with a well-rounded grasp of business functions can direct the activities of subordinates.

A Fascinating "How to Succeed" Plan

Most people are surprised to learn that the average age of our subscribers is closer to 40 than 20.

And we, in turn, are equally surprised that this mistaken notion has persisted for so long. After all, rarely does a man mature sufficiently until he is in his thirties to give any serious thought to his future, or to the security of his family.

But the day comes inevitably when he asks himself: "Where am I going to be in five or ten years? Will I be able to put my children through college? Will my estate support my family, for a reasonable period, without the need for additional funds?"

If he's fortunate, acts while time is still on his side and if the program he follows is valid, he frequently becomes successful while he's still young.

All of this, necessarily, is an oversimplification of the problem.

For that reason, we have analyzed the Institute's approach to executive-training problems in written form. The program is outlined fully in a 48-page book titled "Forging Ahead in Business."

This little book is not for children or even the 20-year-old. Rather, it was designed to show the mature, ambitious man how to build his career on a solid foundation—how to cope realistically with the problems everybody must meet and solve before he can hope to aspire to the top managerial level.

A copy is yours for the asking

After having devoted more than fifty years to helping ambitious men help themselves, we're naturally aware of the reasons why some men reach the heights at an early age . . . why others don't hit their peak until years later . . . and why some never do make the grade as major executives.

Surprisingly, native ability and intelligence are not nearly as dominant influences as one might expect (the $50,000 a year man is not five times as intelligent as the $10,000 man.)

Few men work at more than a fraction of their capacity . . . and most are willing to settle for mastery of a single department of business.

Somehow they fail to realize management's need to understand, relate and communicate on an overall administrative level . . . to master the basics of marketing, accounting, finance and production.

While helping thousands to accomplish more in months than they would, ordinarily, in years, the Institute has compiled, analyzed and refined authentic case-history material . . . made depth studies of real and complex business situations. Thus the training is immediately applicable to average everyday business problems.

Many executives have called the Institute's descriptive booklet "One of the most valuable contributions ever made to business literature."

It explains the modern method of attaining success while you're young—while you can still enjoy it to the fullest. Tells you what you must do, what you must know, to make upwards of $15,000 a year reasonably early in your career.

The program it describes is not meant for everybody; but if you happen to fit the pattern of the success-minded man, it's entirely possible that you, too, will find that the Institute's program will bring you a little closer each day to your chosen goal.

There's no charge for "Forging Ahead in Business" because—depending on the individual—it can be worth nothing . . . or a fortune.

We are Intrepid Traditionalists

We have been since 1824. We admire an intricate scroll, an ornate curve and borrow it for sterling. The silver must be as beautiful as its inspiration. Every pattern we design, each spoon or knife we craft is relentlessly perfected. Can it evoke an illustrious era yet be at ease with moderns? Does it respond with grace and balance to a hand clasp? Can it preside with wit and beauty at the most elegant table? Our ideal remains indomitable. To give you sterling of the very finest, Reed & Barton Sterling lives as long as we believe love should. And we are inflexibly traditional about that.

Sit down and listen while we give away some trade secrets about making furniture.

These are the things every furniture maker knows:

1 A dark finish will hide mismatched grains and imperfections in the wood. If it's a clear finish, it hasn't a thing to hide.

2 Drawer and door fittings can be done sloppily. Or right. So that drawers glide on ball bearings, won't stick or tip. So that glass doors won't rattle.

3 The inside of a cupboard doesn't have to be finished like the outside. It just looks better.

4 Extension table slides can be made of wood. But metal slides move more smoothly.

5 Drawer sides of plywood are cheaper. But solid oak lasts longer and looks better.

6 It's easy to leave out little niceties. Not all buffets, for instance, have silver trays lined with tarnishproof cloth. But ours have both. And cushioned grooves where plates can't slide or rattle.

Lane knows all the secret short cuts.

And still does everything the hard way. You'll see the results in Rhythm, the new Contemporary American Group. Clear, beautiful finishes in richly grained walnut.

Gracefully sculptured lines. No skimping anywhere.

The Rhythm Group includes cocktail tables, bedroom and dining room furniture. Expensive? Not when a 58" cocktail table costs just $39.95.*

wake up warm

This electric clock thermostat turns the heat down at night and up in the morning for comfortable temperature 24 hours a day.

Why not forget the inconvenience of turning the temperature up and down, up and down, day after day. Enjoy instead the comfort and pleasure of having a Honeywell Electric Clock Thermostat on your wall.

Set this handsome beauty just once—then night after night you'll sleep cool (this is the way to sleep comfortably)—and morning after morning you'll wake-up warm (no shivering or cold floors when you get out of bed).

And, then there's economy! Your clock thermostat can pay for itself with savings in your heating bill.

Call your heating cooling dealer today, and sleep cool tonight and every night—automatically with Honeywell. Ask him about the Honeywell Electric Clock Thermostat for heating or the one designed for controlling both heating and cooling.

P.S. We've also got a model you turn down manually, that returns the temperature to its higher setting later, at a pre-selected time. Working couples will like the way it saves fuel while they're away, yet welcomes them back to a warm house. They'll like the sleep cool—wake-up warm feature, too. This model is called the Semi-Automatic Day-Nite Round Thermostat.

LUXURY ACRYLIC FIBER

Painter makes carpets for two kinds of people.

Millionaires.

And those who want to live like millionaires.

Democratic? Absolutely.

"Deep Dream" is its name.

Its pile is plush velvet. Deep. Soft. Yielding. Yet its resilience is incredible; it just won't be crushed.

That's because "Deep Dream" is loomed of Creslan, American Cyanamid's amazing new acrylic yarn that has revolutionized every notion about man-made fibers.

For one thing, you'll find Painter Carpets of Creslan as lustrous as the finest wools. Not too shiny, like some synthetics. Not dull and cloudy, like some others.

And Creslan holds colors magnificently. In the case of "Deep Dream" this is no small task, for besides Topaz, shown at left, it's available in twelve other vivid, shimmering tones as well. (About $12.00 the square yard.)

When it comes to soil resistance, something about the chemistry of Creslan actually repels stains. When it does have to be cleaned, it bounces back fresh and new. For years.

Can't you just see yourself with a Painter? Then see your franchised Painter dealer. (If you're not sure where to find him, just drop us a note.) He'll show you carpets that will start you thinking like a millionaire. From as little as $7.00 the square yard.

You couldn't do much better even if you could afford not to look at the price tag.

A guide to vinyl floors

Eight pages of facts, pictures and decorating ideas to help you choose the vinyl floors best for any room.

Presented by

Armstrong

the people who make every kind of vinyl floor.

Decorating a home today is more challenging, more interesting than ever. There's more choice of things to decorate with, which means you have to take more care in the choosing.

This 8-page guide tells you all about one of the important contributions to good decoration and easy home care—vinyl floors. It shows you the wide and various choices of vinyl floors available and helps you choose intelligently the ones best for you, your home, and your own taste in decorating.

Why vinyl is so perfect for floors

Of all the floors available today, the most fashionable and popular are vinyl floors. Armstrong Vinyl Corlon Floors. (Corlon is Armstrong's trademark name for its vinyl floors.)

Vinyl is an extraordinarily adaptable "raw material." The Armstrong designers and research people have discovered that there are almost no limits to the effects they can achieve with vinyl in floors. It can be crystal clear or vividly colored. It can be translucent or opaque. It can be richly textured or satin smooth. It can be combined with other substances, like cork or glittering metallics. And vinyl makes floors that are beautifully smooth and easy to care for, wonderfully tough and long wearing.

Armstrong Vinyl Corlon Floors are created for the way you live—now. They're distinctive. They help you decorate your home comfortably, imaginatively, and with your own particular stamp of individuality.

Corlon floors help you express your individuality.

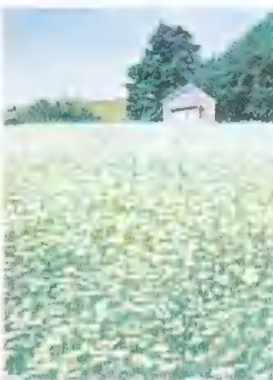

Montina®, Paventi, and Corlon® are trademarks of Armstrong Cork Co. Montina and Paventi floor designs copyrighted by Armstrong.

There are two basic types of Armstrong Vinyl Corlon Floors:

1. Sheet Vinyl Corlon
2. Vinyl Corlon Tile

1. Sheet Vinyl Corlon comes in rolls six feet wide and up to ninety feet long. Because a Sheet Vinyl Corlon Floor has practically no seams, it gives you a sweeping, unbroken flow of color and design from wall to wall. Although it's made up of small, individually beautiful elements, they blend into a continuous, beautiful expanse—the way daisies in a field blend to form a single majestic sweep of color.

2. Vinyl Corlon Tile comes in squares that are installed individually. They lend themselves to geometric patterns; and endless custom designs are possible by combining tiles of different colorings.

Thus, sheet vinyl floors have advantages over vinyl tile floors and vice versa. Take your choice—Armstrong makes both kinds.

The styles and colors of Armstrong Sheet Vinyl Corlon Floors

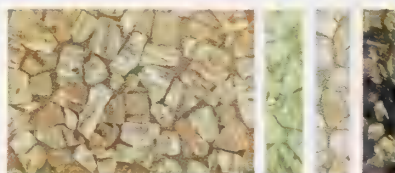

There are two basic ways to use a floor when you decorate. It can set the mood of a room, providing the decorative theme by being the dominant element. Several kinds of Sheet Vinyl Corlon come in colors that do this for you, such as lavender, teak, or peppery mixtures of colorings.

More often, the floor is a background—handsome and distinctive in its own right—but still a background. Every kind of Sheet Corlon comes in a range of muted colorings that provide a quiet, subtle background for your furnishings. Colorings that leave you free to combine contrasting colors in your rugs and walls and fabrics. And colorings that let you change the color scheme of a room again and again, if you wish, without changing the floor.

The colors in Armstrong Sheet Vinyl Corlon go all the way through the thickness of the vinyl to the backing, like this:

That's why these floors have such depth of design and richness of color, such durability and heft.

Here are the most popular styles and some of the colors of Armstrong Sheet Vinyl Corlon Floors.

Montina Corlon

Gives you a floor that's rich, warm, natural looking. Vinyl chips, colorfully veined like natural stone fragments, are set in deep translucent vinyl. They form intriguing patterns and give Montina a gentle texture you can actually feel. (l. to r. styles 86702, 86701, 86700, 86705.)

Paventi Corlon

Here's a totally new idea in vinyl floors. Large vinyl "stones," gently veined and tinted like natural marble, are set in a softly mottled, neutrally colored background. Extremely subtle. And Paventi has a look of depth that is frankly luxurious. (l. to r. styles 87021, 87020, 87023, 87022.)

Tessera Corlon

Cubes of colored vinyl (like this, actual size) in a vinyl background weave into flowing patterns. Tessera is a tasteful setting for any furniture. It comes in monochromatic and multi-colored effects. It, too, has a textured surface. (l. to r. styles 86541, 86551, 86542, 86539.)

Patrician Corlon

Its over-all appearance is subdued. Tiny, colored vinyl fragments merge into a softly mottled expanse. Some patterns are in a single coloring, some have accents of metallic or contrasting colors. And it has a gently textured surface. (l. to r. styles 86005, 86003, 86011, 86014.)

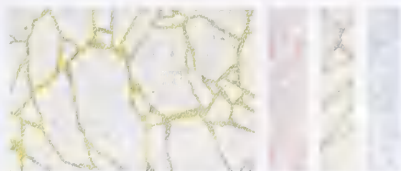

A striking, circular custom design of Tessera Corlon, 86549, 86531, 86547. Montana, Tessera, Patrician, Tracino, and Corlon are registered trademarks of Armstrong Cork Co.

Medallion Corlon

This important new floor color-coordinates for you! Every pattern has a white background. Each has varying shades of a single pastel accent color, specially chosen to go with the most popular colors in appliances, counter tops, bathroom fixtures. (l. to r. styles 86406, 86403, 86405, 86401.)

Tracino Corlon

Tracino Marble has a rich, classic look. Delicate veining weaves through a softly colored background. The veining is gently embossed and is strikingly realistic. You can choose from an interesting range of fashionable colorings. (l. to r. styles 88021, 88025, 88020, 88024.)

The textures of Armstrong Sheet Vinyl Corlon Floors

Montina Corlon, style 86707.

Texture, in and of itself, can be beautiful.

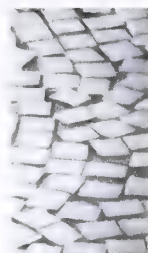

Consider a pebbled beach.

Lately, texture has become a very important part of good decoration and of good decorating materials. It adds warmth, new interest, aesthetic appeal.

Many Armstrong Sheet Vinyl Corlon Floors have gently textured surfaces. You notice the texture of Tessera and Montana, right away. The vinyl chips are raised slightly above their translucent vinyl background. The result is a look of depth. You can look down between the chips. The surface of the floor is rippled, nubby. When you run your finger over it, you can actually feel the texture.

As for Tracino, its surface is gently embossed. Again, texture you can see and feel.

Texture does more than make these floors especially interesting. It gives them practical advantages. It helps hide accidental scuffs and the marks of spiked heels. And it conceals minor irregularities in the subfloor.

Tessera Corlon. Do not feel this. It's only a picture.

Custom designed floors

A custom designed floor makes a room more distinctive. You can combine two or more colorings of the same style. You can even combine different styles. Custom designs can be used functionally, too. They can separate areas in an open plan house or set off special decorative features.

Because Sheet Vinyl Corlon comes in long, wide rolls, it lends itself particularly well to curving custom designs such as the one shown above. Your dealer can also create striking custom effects by installing Armstrong Vinyl Corlon Feature Strips with your new floor. These long strips come in many colors and in various widths.

Same entry hall . . . 4 kinds of vinyl tile. Here, Rochelle, 1330, with brass strips.

The styles and colors of Armstrong Vinyl Corlon Tile

Armstrong Vinyl Corlon Tiles are highly original in styling and color. They take the unique properties of vinyl and turn them into design effects and colorings that give you exceptional opportunities to create a beautiful floor with a distinctly individual look.

There's a fine choice of styles in Corlon Tile. Each has its own unique look, and its own range of colorings.

In the pictures above, we've taken the same room and decorated it four different ways to show you the wide variety of effects you can achieve with Vinyl Corlon Tiles.

Rochelle Corlon Tile

A unique tile which gives a room great elegance. Tiny, colored vinyl chips and golden flakes are suspended in clear vinyl, like this:  to create a dramatic three dimensional effect. (l. 1336, r. 1329.)

Sabrina Corlon Tile

This new floor provides a tasteful setting for almost any interior. Smoky striations of color weave throughout this subtly toned, yet interesting, tile. Sabrina comes in a wide variety of smart colorings. (l. 1383, r. 1385.)

Here, Paiselle Corlon Tile, 1725, is combined with Rochelle, 1333 and 1334.

Paiselle Corlon Tile

Perfect for very high-style decorating. (Paiselle is a pet of interior designers.) It's vivid in color, bold in design, with a luminous quality and an unusual look of depth. (l. 1720, r. 1722.)

Paiselle is a trademark of Armstrong Cork Co. Floor design copyrighted by Armstrong.

Custom Vinyl Cork Tile

A new kind of floor with the beauty of cork and the practicality of vinyl. A smooth, protective layer of vinyl is fused to real cork. Several styles. At left, above, Random Driftwood (1006); at right, Parquet (1011).

Custom designed tile floors

You can create countless custom designs with Vinyl Corlon Tiles — ranging from a basic checkerboard of two colorings to borders made of contrasting tiles, or abstract random patterns. You can combine a variety of colorings in a single styling because the predominant color in one tile is echoed in the accent color of others. You can add feature strips or use inlays of other materials, like brass, cork, silver, wood. Your flooring dealer or decorator can help you plan a distinctive custom designed floor.

The practical side of Armstrong Vinyl Corlon Floors

How well will a Vinyl Corlon Floor wear?

If you marched a Roman legion back and forth on a Vinyl Corlon Floor for six months, like this:

... there would be no floor left.

Vinyl is not indestructible. No floor or floor covering is immune to the eventual sign of wear—not even a steel floor would be. But unless an envious neighbor does something wantonly destructive, your Armstrong Vinyl Corlon Floor will stay good-looking for years. Its colors will last the life of the floor because they go through to the backing.

How do you take care of Vinyl Floors?

We've heard it claimed that vinyl floors need no waxing and no upkeep. Don't you believe it! Like any other fine material, vinyl floors do need some attention to keep them looking their best... and the lighter colors obviously will require extra care.

The point is, vinyl floors need less upkeep than other floors do. Vinyl is remarkably resistant to grease, water, perfume, foods, ink—most of the run-of-the-mill things that get spilled around the house.

A run-of-the-mill thing.

The best way to take care of your Corlon Floor is to give it an occasional cleaning and waxing. How often depends on how much use your floor gets. In between, all that's necessary is a quick once-over to remove loose dirt and dust. Of course, spilled things should be wiped away as soon as convenient.

To help you take the best care of your vinyl floors, Armstrong has developed special cleaners and polishes which are available from your flooring dealer. He can recommend the Armstrong floor care products best for your new floor.

Where can you install a Vinyl Corlon Floor?

Upstairs, downstairs, in my lady's chamber. Sheet Vinyl Corlon with the exclusive Armstrong Hydrocord Back can be used in any room in the home—even on the ground floor of basementless houses, and in most basements. That's because the Hydrocord Back makes Sheet Vinyl Corlon resistant to most alkaline-moisture conditions in concrete in contact with the ground.

All the tile floors shown in this guide can also be installed anywhere in the home, with the exception of Custom Vinyl Cork Tile, which cannot be used in basements.

How do Corlon Floors blend with your furnishings?

Some Armstrong Vinyl Corlon Floors are bright and gay. Some are subdued. Some go with modern furnishings, some go with traditional or antique. Some go with everything.

One thing is certain: There's an Armstrong Vinyl Floor for any room or decorative style in your home.

Vinyl Corlon goes with any furniture style.

When you buy an Armstrong Floor, your flooring dealer can get free decorating help for you from the decorators at the Armstrong Bureau of Interior Design. They will prepare color schemes—including paint and fabric swatches—to go with your flooring choice and your furnishings.

How can you make sure your new floor will be properly installed?

Three pieces of advice are worth bearing in mind: First, select a store with a reputation for good workmanship. The dealer people speak well of can earn that praise only by doing a good job.

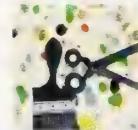

Second, remember that you're investing in something you will use for years. So don't choose a dealer on price alone. Since the finished floor is only as good as its installation, it's not worth taking a chance on less than the best in workmanship to save a few dollars.

And look for this sign. It means that the dealer has installation craftsmen who have completed a special course on floor installation given by Armstrong.

A wider choice of floors than ever before

Armstrong makes many more floors than are shown in this guide. For fifty years, Armstrong Linoleum has been a favorite for kitchens and bathrooms; especially popular today are the embossed brick and flagstone patterns. Then there's Armstrong Excelon Tile, a rugged, vinyl-asbestos tile that's a favorite of do-it-yourselfers. To install it, you just brush on the special adhesive and stick down the tiles. If odd-shaped pieces are needed, you can cut them with scissors.

Excelon Tile comes in dozens of colors and styles and is very economical.

Armstrong also makes rubber tile, linoleum tile, and cork tile. A good, temporary floor covering is Armstrong Vinyl Accolon, a rotogravure-printed, vinyl-coated material that's very inexpensive.

Your dealer also has a special kind of baseboard—called Armstrong Vinyl Cove Base—that eliminates dirt-catching joints between floor and wall. A handsome decorative asset, it comes in a variety of colors.

What about prices?

Armstrong Vinyl Corlon Floors vary in price. Some are fairly low in cost. Some are downright expensive. None are cheap.

Cost depends on the complexity of design, the way the floor is made, and many other factors. Unfortunately, we can't give you the exact price of a floor installed in your home, because it depends on varying things, such as room size and shape, condition of the subfloor, whether your home is new or whether you're remodeling, custom work done (if any), local labor rates, and so on. But your dealer will give you a free estimate. Easy terms are usually available.

Where to see Armstrong Corlon Floors for yourself

You really have to see the floors themselves to appreciate the depth, luminous colorings, texture, metallic accents of Armstrong Vinyl Corlon Floors. These qualities just can't be reproduced on paper. Visit the showroom of a nearby Armstrong dealer. He will be happy to show you the real thing. If you would like a free, permanent reference copy of this guide, write Armstrong, 6310 Atkins Ave., Lancaster, Pa. In Canada, Dept. 103-H, Box 919, Montreal, P.Q.

If you don't buy the best carpet you can afford, watch your step.

A "bargain" carpet can look great in a show-room. It can even look great in your home. For awhile.

But on your steps, doorstep, entrance hall, hallways, in front of your sofa, your husband's favorite chair, the TV, or wherever there's traffic all day, don't kid yourself.

A "bargain" carpet can't take it. Not for long. Lees knows it.

That's why we don't make one.

We'd have to short-cut it too many ways.

We couldn't use good enough yarn to begin with. Or enough of it to make the carpet firm and dense enough. We'd have to spread the yarn so thin, your carpet would die on the floor in a couple of years.

We'd have to chance it with dyes we hadn't tested out. Skimp on the backing. Give up vital inspections. Forget our strict standards. Disappoint you for the few dollars you'd save at first.

We couldn't stand behind a carpet like this, and we wouldn't risk our good name on it.

We only put our name on first-quality carpet. We print it, bold and clear, along with a number, right on the back.

If you don't see it, watch your step.

For a lot of good, down-to-earth reasons, "those heavenly carpets by Lees." Write us. We'll tell you where to find them.

Enjoy the new feast of Debussy recordings

Let his luminous music come to life in your living room as it did during commemorative performances throughout the world

By EPSIE KINARD

• If your Debussy diet has been limited to an occasional L'Après-midi d'un faune on concert programs and to Claire de lune on soap operas, there's a sumptuous feast in store for you on recordings.

Major gaps in Debussy's recorded works were filled during the current centennial honoring the founder of musical impressionism. Paying tribute to the 100th anniversary of his birth (August 22, 1862), great concert artists performed his music with the old Debussy radiance fresh in their hands. Performers in New York and Paris recaptured the gossamer world of Pelléas et Mélisande, his approach to opera that proved to be unique. Here is music which crystallizes many moods of infinite tenderness and melancholy.

Published biographies and critical studies of the man, who gave us these inexhaustible treasures, were among the commemorative honors. So were recordings of rarely heard pieces and reissues of undying 78's, thus making the Debussy discography an almost complete document of 41 years of musical creativity. (See our Record List at the end of this article.)

Extensive in scope, these recordings, still being issued, are an enduring result of the centennial.

They let you listen again to music that does not always surrender its full beauty the first time you hear it. Simply drop the needle on a disc, and you can hear this music come alive in your living room, as it has in the world's great concert halls. Walter Gieseking, who recorded all of Debussy's piano works, was probably his greatest and most faithful keyboard interpreter. Other noted exponents include Toscanini, Ernest Ansermet—who, having known Debussy, draws his interpretive ideas first-hand from the composer—and Maggie Teyte, who sang his songs as no one else could.

Revealing Debussy's long creative span, recordings begin with his first preserved piece—Danse bohémienne, written when he was 17. Already ailing when he began his last works—Six sonates pour divers instruments—he finished only three before he died in 1918.

ON SO comprehensive a discography, you have in music the whole story of the man who broke with tradition, perfected a new musical vocabulary, threw off the heavy yoke of Wagnerian Romanticism, and drew great melodies of great splendor from the Oriental pentatonic (five-note) scale. André

Hodeir, author of Since Debussy, sees his influence on every musician who followed him, gives Debussy credit for "destroying rhetoric, inventing the contemporary approach to form, and reinstating the power of pure sound per se."

Play a recording of almost anything he wrote, and you understand why his music sounds so fresh today. His teacher predicted: "It'll be a long time before your music is appreciated and widely played." So it's not surprising to find Jeux, his ballet, sounding as modern as Stravinsky's Rite of Spring.

Orchestral, piano, chamber, and vocal music paint revealing self-portraits of the composer. "He was witty, like no one else," said Mme. von Meck, Tchaikovsky's Russian patroness, whose young daughter Debussy taught. And Debussy could be witty about his own works. For example, the continuous employment of sixths in his Etudes pour les sixtes made him think of "pretentious maidens, sitting in a drawing room and sulkily working on tapestries while they envied the scandalous laughter of the mad Ninths."

at night, of festivals, of the amorous spell of a summer afternoon in a sun-dappled glade—is everywhere in his music and especially in the richly sensuous L'Après-midi d'un faune. This is also a supreme example of his use of impressionism—painting with notes instead of a brush. La Mer is another characteristic example of this kind of music, evocative rather than descriptive, suggesting moods and feelings rather than drawing a physical image. La Mer is to music what Monet's Rocks of Belle Isle is to impressionistic painting.

Debussy set to music the poetry of the great imagists of his day: Verlaine, Rimbaud, Mallarmé. You hear them sung their most gloriously by Maggie Teyte. Reissued from old 78's (1936-1944) in honor of the centennial, these lovely, passionate songs, in which Debussy made his most personal statement in music, are as intimate as a whisper.

Add to these engaging qualities his gift of fantasy, which shows in his Children's Corner Suite. Dedicated to his five-year-old daughter—"to my dear little Chou Chou with her father's apologies for what is to follow"—it ranges from a charming lullaby for her little velvet elephant to the humorous Dr. Gradus ad Parnassum, a parody on the toilsome grind of a child's five-finger exercises. What delights musicians in these innocent pieces for a child is the dig Debussy takes at Wagner in Gollwog's Cake Walk. It has a mocking motif from Tristan in the middle of it.

But there's also fantasy for grown-up children, as witness the ethereal world of make-believe created for Mélisande (Pelléas et Mélisande), the dream-princess of a fairy tale for adults.

Cross-fertilizing Debussy's music is a rich catholicity of interests, as the titles of his compositions show—they sound like names of paintings hanging in the Paris museum, Jeu de Paume. He was fascinated by old legends and literature, contemporary literary movements, classic monuments, Greek mythology, minstrel shows, architecture, archaeology, Oriental gamelan music, the new mechanical rhythms of the 20th Century, natural phenomena, and foreign countries whose culture intrigued him, including Russian towns which he called "J'aime le caviar" when he couldn't pronounce their names.

His fascination with natural phenomena grew out of his interest in nature, to which he looked for inspiration. That he found it is abundantly shown in such pieces as Reflets dans l'eau and Jardins sous la pluie, each of which captures in music a mood, as elusive as a butterfly, caught in a shimmering net of notes.

 BALLET

No need to look abroad when you can grace your home with this lovely hand-blown lead crystal pattern from the venerable American house of Bryce. Notice, if you will, how the primly graceful drawn stem flows smoothly upward into the bowl—to be subtly counterbalanced by a delightful little flair at the lip. Ballet is available in the iced-tea, goblet, wine and sherbet shapes as shown. Write for the name of the Bryce dealer nearest you.

 CANDLELIGHT

With this elegant new pattern Bryce artisans combined a delicately cut rounded bowl with a stately fluted and tapered stem so that each crystal piece would sparkle brilliantly even in subtle lighting. Beautiful Candlelight can be yours in the goblet, saucer champagne and wine shapes shown here plus iced-tea.

 ANTIQUE JELLY GLASS

Late in the last century, great-grandmother Bryce asked the factory to produce these glasses for her own use in putting up jellies and jams. ## Doing It Better

Tips on the latest in the care and feeding of houses
 by David X. Manners, House Beautiful's Building Editor

How to visualize your dream house

If you have trouble visualizing how your new or remodeled house will look, get a "Model Homes" kit. It contains all you need to build a scale model of any house plan, including the furniture and fixtures that go inside.

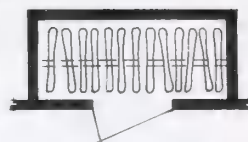

Special metal clips make it easy to assemble the walls, which are cardboard. You cut doors and windows in the walls as you go, glaze the windows and glass walls with cellophane. You can make any style of roof. The roof isn't fastened down, so you can remove it at any time to study the interior layout.

To complete the house, you cement the simulated roofing to the roof, stone or brick to the chimneys, paint the inside and outside to match your plan. Everything is provided. If your house is bigger than the suburban average, you can buy additional parts. I think you'll find the kit good for making improvisations and adding custom touches. $5.95; Scale Model Homes, Box 5164, Louisville 5, Ky.

How to improve the accessibility of closets

BEFORE

If you have a conventional closet with a standard door that swings open, you know it's not easy to get into the two ends. How nice it would be to open such a closet to its full width and have everything in plain sight and easy reach!

You can do it with a set of new K-Doors by Kennatrack, available at lumber dealers. You have your choice of many woods and styles, including full-length-mirrored doors (4', 5', 6' openings, $65 to $99).

Installation involves removing some of the wall on each side to enlarge the closet opening. It's simple carpentry, providing those walls contain no wiring, plumbing, or heating. Mirrors and all hardware are factory-mounted.

A more orderly way to hang clothes

The problem with the usual closet rod is that clothes tend to get bunched up on it too tightly—thus spoiling their press. Despite good intentions, we often hang more on a rod than it can properly accommodate.

A closet rod designed to end this jamming up and wrinkling of garments is the new National VI50. It is screwed flat to the underside of the closet shelf, as you can see in the photograph. Each hanger gets its individual hook. The hooks slide easily, and automatically provide a minimum space of at least  $\frac{3}{4}$ " for each garment. To insert more hooks at any time, you merely snap them into the track.

There is just one limitation. Your shelf must be sturdy enough to support the added weight of the stored clothes.

A 60" VI50 rod, with 20 slide hooks, sells for about $5 at building-supply and hardware dealers'. It's made by National Manufacturing Co., Sterling, Ill.

Add hydromassage to your bathing

The hydromassage of the famous portable Jacuzzi Whirlpool Bath is now available as a permanent, built-in part of any new or existing bathtub. The new, more powerful pump-motor unit ( $\frac{1}{2}$  horsepower, 44 gallons per minute as compared to  $\frac{1}{3}$  hp, 35 gpm of the portable) is installed outside the tub. No valuable tub space is sacrificed to it. A toe-controlled discharge valve is only evidence of installation.

Water under pressure and aerated is both tingling and relaxing. It's a massage you can give yourself—a thermal spa in your own home. It is more soothing and beneficial than manual massage, for muscles don't flex against the pressure of the water. Some find it gains them an hour's sleep. They can drop off immediately after a Jacuzzi bath. Pressure, aeration, and direction of water can be controlled.

The unit comes in two models. The J-500 can be placed behind the tub at its drain end or in a closet adjacent to the tub. It occupies approximately 1 sq. ft. of space. The J-600 can be placed under the tub in the basement.

Either model costs about $400. Look under "Pumps" in the Yellow Pages for name of Jacuzzi dealer or write: Jacuzzi Research, Richmond, Calif.

AN EXCITING, NEW ENTERTAINING AND COOKING PORTFOLIO

✱ OVER 200 THOROUGHLY TESTED RECIPES

✱ APPROPRIATE WINES AND LIQUEURS FOR EVERY MEAL

✱ SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANNING AND STAGING YOUR PARTIES

✱ DINING CUSTOMS AND FOOD LORE FROM EACH COUNTRY

More than a handbook of organization, INTERNATIONAL DINING WITH SPICE ISLANDS is a fine cookbook and a distinguished introduction to gourmet dining in many lands.

10 individual volumes, designed by Sister Mary Corita and boxed in a single attractive folio, all for just $4.00.

VOLUME 1.

Covers the various ways you and your friends can form an informal club of your own to enjoy the best of international dining together.

VOLUME 2. FRANCE.

The romance of the French kitchen in dinner menus that feature regional favorites from each of 3 different provinces: Normandy, Burgundy and Lyonnais. Authentic recipes, thoroughly tested and adapted for the American home.

VOLUME 3. ITALY.

The savory diversity of the Italian kitchen demonstrated in menus and recipes from the north, south and central regions of the country. Each of the 3 menus avoid clichés and open a wonderfully exciting new world of dining experience.

VOLUME 4. GERMANY.

A sense-stirring exploration of the German kitchen as it really is — inviting, varied and full with a promise of fine dining. Includes one menu for a Christmas or New Year's dinner you would enjoy in Berlin.

VOLUME 5. INDIA.

This volume proves that the Indian kitchen is pillaus, biranis, kebabs, vindaloos, and boor-thas, as well as curries. Each of the 3 different menus (from Madras, Bengal and the Punjab) affords many exquisite new dining experiences. All of the recipes use easily obtainable ingredients.

VOLUME 6. GREECE.

True to a tradition born in the pre-Christian era (the word "epicure" is a legacy from the philosopher Epicurus), the contemporary Greek kitchen, has wonderful ways with food. Many of them are included here in menus from Messina, the Ionian Island of Zakynthos and Thessalonika.

VOLUME 7. ISRAEL.

Being a remarkably young country, Israel has no single cuisine of its own. Rather, it has a number of uniquely different kitchens. Three of these — Sephardic, European and Sabra — are typified with dinner menus included here.

VOLUME 8. SWEDEN.

Three tantalizing glimpses into Swedish home kitchens when "occasion" meals are the order of the day. Menus and recipes for a Christmas Eve smorgasbord, a "company" dinner and national holiday feast in honor of the crayfish.

VOLUME 9. JAPAN.

In addition to Sukiyaki, Tempura and rice, innumerable unusual delicacies enhance the three typical menus included here. Happily, too, the ingredients used in recipes are readily available.

VOLUME 10. SPAIN.

Every pre-conceived notion you may have harbored about Spanish food being "hot" or the "same as Mexican" will dissolve deliciously as you savor your way through the dinners planned in this volume. 3 menus — one each from Catalonia, Andalusia and Valencia.

There's never been a book of food quite like INTERNATIONAL DINING WITH SPICE ISLANDS. Each of the ten individual volumes is, literally, a work of art. For each boasts a reproduction of an original serigraph by Sister Mary Corita, IHM. A distinguished Professor of Art at the Immaculate Heart College in Los Angeles, Sister Mary Corita's work hangs in major museums throughout the nation and around the world.

Order your copy (or copies) now with this coupon. The book will not be available in bookstores. The price is $4.00 complete, with 7-day money-back guarantee, of course.

Masterpiece, a new sterling pattern.

For the baroque richness of International's new Masterpiece, our designer went to France. And came back with an idea inspired by the flowers in the gardens of Versailles and by the splendor of its palace.

International fashioned bowls and tines and blades to complete this idea. Then found a way to make this new pattern easy for you to own.

The Bride's Set unit.

The Bride's Set saves you $65.

It brings you the new Masterpiece pattern in a 44-piece service for eight.

That includes 16 teaspoons, 8 place forks, 8 place knives, 8 salad forks, 1 sugar spoon, 1 butter knife, 1 regular tablespoon, and 1 pierced tablespoon.

All in a solid walnut drawer chest.

It would cost you $451 in open stock. It's only $386 in the Bride's Set. What an elegant way to save $65.

Low-cost yard light

You can have a light at your driveway entrance (or down by the lake) at low cost, no matter how far it is from your house. This new kerosene "Patio Lamp" by Dietz (Syracuse 1, N.Y.) mounts on any 3" post or pipe. The lamp will burn 40 hours on one filling. It's an especially appropriate design for rustic localities. Price is $9.50 with clear globe, $9.75 with amber.

Radar-style burglar alarm

A new electronic burglar alarm detects any movement within 30 feet. It can be hooked up so that it flashes a warning light at your bedside, turns on bright lights in or around the house, sets off a siren, or sounds an alarm at the police station.

The unit is easily portable (14 lbs.), works off house current. A key switches it on. Security officers tell me it's one of the best. It's made by Pinkerton Electro-Security Corp., Webster, Mass. For dealers, see "Burglar Alarm Systems" in Yellow Pages. About $300.

Don't let it die

Don't you agree that it's sensible to replace mechanical equipment before it gives its last gasp? You can then do it on a considered basis, and at your own convenience.

Take an electric water system. The average life of a well pump is 15 years. If you have one in that age bracket, or if increased demands and a dropping water table have made it inadequate, you'll be wise to start shopping.

Goulds (Seneca Falls, N.Y.) has a new jet pump system that's typical of today's improved designs. By separating the tank's air-pressure chamber from the water, they have eliminated need for an air-volume control, a common cause of trouble. And with their new pressure system you get twice as much water each pump cycle.

Pump, complete with tank and other fittings, may cost from $150 to $250. You'll probably also have to replace the pipe in the well shaft. Once disturbed, aging metal pipe is never the same again. Modern practice is to use plastic pipe. It costs about $1 per foot of well depth, installed.

Happily Ever After

That's how the stories end. But your marriage is just the beginning . . . the beginning of new hopes, of new plans, of a new life. Together you will decide on the kind of home you want . . . and together you will start to buy all the many things you need to realize your new life.

With so many products to choose from these days, it's sometimes hard to know which one is best for you . . . which one will give you most service and value. One of the best ways to decide is by name. If you buy a name brand in furniture or home furnishings, you know what the name stands for. Then you can be sure of getting what you have a right to expect, of what you have paid for.

A name brand means quality because the manufacturer stands behind the design, the materials, the workmanship of his merchandise.

A name brand means confidence that you have made a good investment.

A name brand means pleasure—the pleasure of buying an original and not some nameless copy . . . the pleasure of seeing it fit perfectly into your home . . . the pleasure of living with it happily—well, perhaps not ever after, but for many years.

How to stop an insidious enemy

Water is an excellent beverage, pleasant to bathe in, and nice for boating. But you don't want it coming up under your house. As invisible vapor, water can deteriorate the house structure, peel paint, invite termites, raise costs for summer cooling.

Did you know vapor can be stopped for less than four cents per square foot? A unique vapor barrier called Moistop stops moisture under all floors. It comes in a roll, and it's unique in that it combines polyethylene film with a tough waterproof paper. The paper keeps the polyethylene from getting punctured or torn.

You may have an unexcavated portion under your house that is bare ground. Moistop is a good cover for it. If you are building a house, Moistop is the kind of thing you want under its slab or basement floor. If you're pouring a concrete patio or porch, get it under there too. Some day you may want to enclose the area as a room. I covered my crawl space with Moistop, which is how I learned about it.

They call it Delrin

Delrin is the name DuPont has given to its plastic made of acetal resin. It's a very tough plastic, and it is being used instead of metal in many products. You'll find water pumps and ball bearings made of Delrin. The slide hooks on the clothes rod, mentioned in an earlier paragraph, are of Delrin. If you aren't yet familiar with this relatively new plastic, a good way to make its acquaintance is with the new Peg-Board fixtures by Masonite. They're made of it.

These new Delrin Peg-Board fixtures have a pleasing appearance, as you can see in the photograph. They also have another important advantage. They absolutely will not pull out of their holes. They stay put so tightly it is almost a disadvantage. You can't blithely switch them around from location to location. Once they're in, they're really in.

Chatham did.

Don't shudder. That jawbreaker is the name of the miracle chemical from which acrylic fiber is born. What it has done for blankets is something of a miracle. Brightened colors, clarified prints. Made blankets that are delightfully lighter, softer and completely carefree. Chatham's exclusive Fiber-Fix® process applied to Chatham's Creslan®, Acrilan®, Orlon®, and other virgin acrylics makes thicker, fluffier blankets; keeps down pilling and shedding even through machine washing. So practical, they're also non-allergenic and impervious to moth and mildew. Practical prices too . . . in a wide range of sizes from $8 to $26. (Don't ask for “polyacrylonitrile”, please—“Chatham 100% virgin acrylic blankets” will do nicely.) (prices higher in the west). Chatham Manufacturing Company, Elkin, North Carolina.

ALEXANDRA, on the left, is obviously the loveliest sterling silver pattern. No—MADRIGAL, in the middle, is such a perfect blend of modern and traditional. ELOQUENCE, as anyone can see is unquestionably it. And of course, everyone is right. All that remains is the pleasant problem of deciding for yourself.

A comfortable corner, not just a back rest, is a feature of most of these semi-chaises. This one is not as long as it looks—it is only 61" overall, just right for feet-up relaxing. Parzinger Originals, Inc., about $595.

The return of a good thing —the semi-chaise

■ For a long time the chaise was in discard, a rejected symbol of the age of indulgence. Fortunately, we have matured to the point where a feet-up position is no longer automatically considered time-wasting. The restful few minutes' reading, sewing, listening to music, can make the rest of the busy day even more fruitful. As our idea of it has changed, so has the chaise. It is no longer bedroom-y, no longer full-length, no longer made only in a single puffed-satin style. It is perfectly at home in the living room, to which it can add needed sitting space. Here are five good examples of the new chaise.

DECORATOR'S DIARY

New home furnishings worthy of a second look if you want to treat your problems as a decorator might

"Deadly," was the dowager Mrs. Morton's response when I inquired what kind of summer she'd had. "Six weeks of old ladies in hair nets and flowered voile, playing auction bridge and bragging about their ancestry. I felt like a juvenile delinquent because I wore lipstick."

She had gone, in a headstrong fit of nostalgia, back to the dowdy propriety of a watering-place hotel where as a girl she had summered with her parents. And anyone who knew her might have foretold disaster, for Mrs. Morton, great-grandmother though she is, is conceded to be more Auntie Mame than Mother Machree, and a traitor to both her class and her age group. She once disappeared to Las Vegas for a week, just to see what that was all about, and is probably as well known in St. Tropez as is Brigitte Bardot. Normally she headquarters in a Manhattan hotel, living a life wondrously independent of her rather proper suburban son and daughter-in-law. Nonetheless, she adores her descendants and visits them frequently, but, "just so that they won't get too much of me and I too much of them," she has built a little one-room garden apartment onto their house where she can be quite self-sustaining during her visits.

It was the decoration of this matriarchal apartment that brought me into her orbit, and over the summer I had been shopping furnishings for the pavillon, as she likes to call the place. Really, it is no more than two walls of glass and a roof, enclosing a former terrace in the angle between two exterior walls of the house. But since it looks out on the most secluded sylvan glade Bergen County has to offer, it qualifies for the fancy name.

From the start, her approach had had a certain Marie Antoinette quality, so I was happily up to here in swatches of toile and pictures of delicately scaled chairs and some pretty French Provincial boiserie I intended to adapt on the paneling that hides the closets and kitchenette. It came as rather a shock to me, therefore, to hear the lady announce that of all the musts on her must list, a rocking chair was to take priority.

"Better make that two rocking chairs—I'll be having company," she said. "The one saving grace of that old hotel was that it helped me rediscover the pure joy of rocking. Whenever the other guests got to be too much for me, I'd escape to my balcony and its nice big, solid porch rocker, and rock my exasperations away. I'd almost forgotten what a magical motion that is, soothing nerves and muscles simultaneously—and so much better for you than phenobarbital. I've decided I'll never live without a rocking chair again."

I must have looked as if I were going to cry, for that's what I felt like doing at the thought of two monstrous porch rockers keeping company with my French Provincial boiserie. Should I slipcover them in toile, or carve S-curve scrolls on their backs, or should I tell dear Mrs. Morton to get a less sensitive decorator?

It turned out that I was spared any such drastic measures, because the lady could read my mind.

"My poor child," she said, "you don't think for one moment that I would clutter my precious parillon with an overweight hotel-porch rocker? I've taken it upon myself to do a little rocking research, and I am told that a furniture firm called Dux combines all the comforts of the good old rocker in a chair with such slim lines and graceful looks that you could build a salon around it."

A visit to the showroom proved her right. Here indeed was the rocker with the delicate air, of smooth hand-finished teak and hand-woven cane, with tapering, nice-to-touch arms, and slender rockers that won't nip your ankles. It's 26" wide, 32" deep, 39" high, with its seat 17½" deep, which means it's as commodious as a rocker should be, but it is so open and "see-through" that you're hardly aware of its bulk. Altogether it made a fitting companion to our black-and-white toile and fruitwood paneling, although it's a child of contemporary Swedish furniture design, an inspiration of Hans Olsen. Its reversible, zippered seat cushion and neck pillow are foam rubber, and can be covered in leather, Naugahyde, or any fabric you choose—a fact that tempted me to have our chairs done in matching toile, but the suppleness and patina of black leather won the day.

"Then there is this little room," explained young Mrs. Barclay as she was describing the apartment she had just rented in a remodeled brownstone. "It's right off the living room—which I guess used to be a bedroom—and its dimensions are really wild. It can't be wider than six feet or longer than ten, yet it has one window and two doors, and a 10'-high ceiling.

"Formerly a dressing room," I commented sagely.

"That's what Jim thinks," she said with a bride's deference to her husband's opinion. "But we don't need a dressing room, we need an extra bedroom for when Jim's mother comes to spend a few days—and I mean a proper bedroom, not one of those double-duty studies where guests get dumped on a day-bed and have to use a desk as a dressing table. Besides, I want Jim's mother always to feel she has her own room in our house."

Although a fervent advocate of making every room serve multiple function, I found this solicitude so commendable on the part of a daughter-in-law that I agreed that bedroom only the room should be.

But as it turned out, bedroom was all it possibly could ever be, as I discovered, with some desperation, when I saw the room. Clearly, it had originally been planned to hold no more than a wardrobe, a mirror and a slipper chair. So once you'd installed a respectable, sleepable single bed and organized some sort of built-in, close-tolerance substitute for the nonexistent closet, you'd be hard put to it to squeeze in an honest-to-goodness chest of drawers.

Mrs. Barclay, with the perceptive innocence of the very young, and assuming, I am sure, that the word "decorator" is synonymous with miracle-worker, remarked earnestly, "Jim says this room is a challenge."

"Jim," I said tartly, and meant every word of it, "deserves this week's gold star for understatement."

"He says it calls for a combination of resourcefulness and optical illusion."

"And the clever use of mirror," I started to add, when it struck me that the omniscient Jim might well be saving the day.

Mirror, of course—to sheathe both doors and the door of the built-in closet and to make the room seem broader and longer, as well as to give the occupant comforting, full-length reflections. And, on the subject of mirror, why not cope with the lack of floor space for a dressing table by sinking a couple of good-size, sliding-door medicine cabinets into the wall opposite the bed?

It seemed to me that I had met the challenge of ingenuity rather brilliantly with that solution to the lack of physical space. And as for optical illusion, here was a made-to-order situation for that age-old trick of unifying a little room by using the same pattern on every surface.

"Do you think we could get some wild-flower pattern in the room, too?" inquired the bride. "Because Mother Barclay is sort of a plant specialist. She majored in botany at Radcliffe."

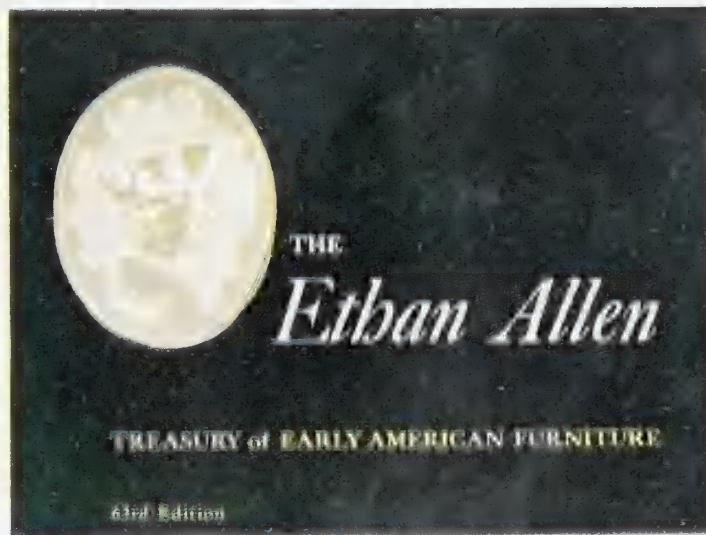

"And once again she'll major in botany right here," I said triumphantly, for the whole problem had suddenly resolved itself. That little word "botany" had recalled an especially pretty screen print of Howard and Schaffer's called

"Flowering Leaves." It can come in any color to order, but I couldn't make a better choice than to have this restrained line-drawing of widely placed woodland foliage printed in green and white, for the very drawing seems to make the background recede and create an illusion of space. The pattern can be printed on both fabric and wall-paper, so bedspread, draperies and wall would match.

And then, best yet, we could even cover the window itself in the same matching pattern, for this obliging firm will print the same design on shade cloth. (They have, in fact, a whole repertory of patterns that can be so matched.) To make this high-style decorating trick as practical as it is smart, the shade cloth itself is impregnated with vinyl and the printing is done in vinyl ink, so all this prettiness is scrubbable. Moreover, since I discovered that the senior Mrs. Barclay is a late sleeper, I found it was possible to have this printing done on a dense, room-darkening type of shade which blocks out light completely, although it can also be done on the kind of translucent shade cloth which diffuses light. The street-facing side of the shade is white, so that you can have interior pattern without disrupting the uniformity of the windows that face the world.

Now, what with the green floral covering the bed and draping the windows in its fabric version and covering walls and ceilings in its wallpaper manifestation, and the mirrored surfaces reflecting the same fresh woodland specimens, the room looks twice its pint-size—like, say, a quart-size botanical bower—but it's a whole little world for a mother-in-law to feel quite at home in. And Jim thinks I'm a miracle-worker.—M.G.

IN SAFE HANDS

A child begins life completely dependent upon his parents. For years to come, the basics of life—food, clothing and shelter—must be provided to protect him, to help him develop properly and be guided through the many stages of growing up.

Today, the child and the entire family can enjoy a degree of “shelter” not available until a few years ago. A new home made with fine quality BESTWALL and CERTAIN-TEED building products provides priceless fire protection and healthful insulation as well as lasting beauty and value. These advantages are important to the well-being of your family at every stage of life.

So make sure the home you buy or build is made with quality materials, inside and out. Insist upon the names “Bestwall” and “Certain-teed” on products for your roof, walls, ceilings, and throughout your home. Then you’ll find that “better living begins when you own a new home.” See your Bestwall Certain-teed dealer now—or write direct to

2 Shortcuts for Making Draperies

1. BESTPLEAT®

Just sew this Conso tape to the top of your fabric. Its evenly-spaced, non-rip, woven-in pockets eliminate complicated measuring and sewing.

2. GOLDEN NIP-TITE®

Then slip this Conso pleater hook into the Bestpleat pockets to form pleats; the exclusive middle arm holds pleats evenly—prevents slipping.

PRESTO! This "perfect marriage" of Nip-Tite and Bestpleat gives your draperies a professional, custom look. Important—Bestpleat pleater tapes are preshrunk. Golden Nip-Tite hooks are easily removed for washing or cleaning—their golden finish is your sign of quality.

Two built-in storage units to solve two different problems

OWNER-DESIGNER NORMAN SHEPHERD

TWO PHOTOGRAPHS BY WESLEY BALZ

For maximum efficiency, design storage to match your belongings, item by item

The only way to insure order when space is limited is to provide made-to-measure compartments for each item you want to store. The unit shown here is in an apartment where it is necessary to store a variety of things, including books, luggage, clothing, records, a built-in T.V., and a record player. Without careful organization there would be chaos. Some items require deeper space than others. By heeding this difference here, a bay-shaped unit resulted. It not only better serves what is to be stored, but adds architectural interest to the room.

STORAGE TO SOLVE TWO DIFFERENT PROBLEMS

ARCHITECT: LUTAH MARIA RIGGS

TWO PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAYNARD PARKER

If space for storage isn't at a premium, enjoy the luxury of being lavish with it

Be generous, if you can, when you provide storage space. Storage needs invariably grow, and if you design only to accommodate what you now have, you'll have no space for expansion later. Here, shelves fit on adjustable rests. As storage demands grow, more shelves can be added. Being generous with space doesn't mean you are wasting it. When space is generous it's easier to see and find what you have. Things don't get crowded, and order is easier to maintain. Pull-out board is convenient for folding.

LAFITE. Château (La-feet). In the opinion of most impartial experts, and perhaps in the mind of the general public as well, the ne plus ultra of Claret and the greatest red vineyard in the world, Lafite, or Lafite-Rothschild (both names are correct and both have been used at various times on the château label) was ranked first among the First Growths in the Bordeaux Classification of 1855, and has maintained its place with surprising consistency over the decades. Its special fame dates from the 17th Century, when it was the property of M. de Ségur, and it was purchased in 1858 by Baron James de Rothschild for five million gold francs.

There are something less than 150 acres under vines (Cabernet, Merlot, Petit Verdot) and the annual yield is not far from 15,000 cases, plus perhaps half as much of a second, lesser wine sold as Carruades de Château Lafite. The fermenting rooms, the chais and cellars are models of what such installations should be, and the "library" of bottles extends back, great vintage by great vintage, to before 1800.

The wine of Lafite varies, as all Bordeaux wines vary, from one year to another, although Lafite less than most, but of its best vintages it is hard to speak except in terms of the highest praise. Rarely over 12½ percent alcohol, they have an astonishing authority, impeccable breed, fruit and fragrance and depth of flavor, all the qualities with which a great Claret should be endowed.

LAFLEUR. Château (La-Flerr). One of the Premiers Grands Crus of Pomerol. An admirable small vineyard, some 1,200 cases a year of excellent Claret.

LAGREIN ROSATO (La-grain Roas-sa-toe). Delightful rosé wine of the Italian Tyrol, produced practically in the suburbs of Bolzano, and known as Lagreiner Kaetzer when this district was part of Austria, before 1918. It is made from the Lagrein grape.

LAMBRAYS (Lawm-bray). Burgundian vineyard.

LANGUEDOC (Long-guh-dawk). Ancient French province, extending along the Mediterranean from the Rhone River to beyond Narbonne: as far as wine is concerned, this is known as the Midi, and produces most of the vin ordinaire of France: the three départements of Hérault, Aude, and Gard rank 1, 2, and 3 in total vineyard acreage and total production among the ninety départements of France. “can this be vinyl?”

Even close up, this Colovin vinyl upholstery covering looks like fabric. It's the new Jacqueline pattern with the rich texture, subtle tones and suppleness of rich brocade. But after all, Colovin is vinyl. Rugged, durable, stain-resistant, scuff-resistant, scrubbable vinyl. Colovin vinyl comes in other patterns, textures and colors, too. It captures the glow of silks, the grain of leathers, the look of linens, the third dimension of brocades. Look for the Colovin tag on fine furniture everywhere. vast bulk of this is common stuff, and goes to market simply as vin rouge, but there are some excellent sweet Muscat wines produced at Frontignan and Lunel, a well-known sparkling wine at Limoux, and table wines of rather more than passable quality in a number of specific, delimited zones. A few of these have been granted an Appellation Contrôlée, and a number of others may carry the V.D.Q.S. seal.

L'ASCOMBES, Château (Lahs-Caumb). Second Classed Growth of Margaux. Now one of the better seconds, giving some 5,000 cases of Claret a year.

LA TACHE (Lah Tasch). Celebrated Burgundian vineyard and its great red wine.

LATOUR, Château (La-tour). First Classed Growth of Pauillac. Admirable and world-famous vineyard, legally and properly ranked as one of the three best of the Médoc, a worthy rival of Margaux and Lafite. Its 110 acres are planted on thin, poor, unfertile, gravelly soil, and the yield per acre is extremely low. The resulting wine, some 10,000 cases a year, is one of the most robust and sturdy of Clarets, deep-colored, long-lived, astringent when young but obviously of great class, developing a splendid bouquet as it grows older.

There are literally scores of châteaux in the Bordeaux Country having the words Tour or La Tour as part of their name. The most important of these are listed elsewhere, in their proper alphabetical place, in this dictionary. They should not, of course, be confused with the one great original Château Latour, which has a stylized tower, surmounted by a lion, on its familiar, old-fashioned label.

LATOUR-POMEROL, Château (La-tour-Paum-may-rawl). Good First Growth vineyard of Pomerol, owned by the owner of Château Pétrus. About 4,000 cases a year of fine, soft Claret.

LATRICIÈRES-CHAMBERTIN (Lat-tree-see-air Shawm-bair-tan). Distinguished Burgundy vineyard and its red wine, officially a Grand Cru and, after Chambertin and Clos de Beze, one of the best of this extraordinary little district. Seventeen acres in extent, it directly adjoins Chambertin on the south, shares the same exposure and practically the same soil.

LAUSANNE (Lo-zahn). Attractive city on the northern shore of Lake Geneva, itself the owner of two celebrated vineyards nearby, the Clos des Abbayes and the Clos des Moines. Both produce good quality, dry white wines from the Fendant grape.

LAVILLE-HAUT-BRION, Château (La veel-Oh-Bree-awn). Excellent small vineyard at Talence, on the outskirts of Bordeaux. It produces some 1,500 cases a year of what is certainly one of the very finest dry white Graves.

LAZIO (Lots-ee-o). The region of Rome, in Italy. Produces over 50 million gallons of table wine a year, almost all of it consumed locally, more white wine than red. Perhaps a third of this total comes from the Castelli Romani and is sold as such, or as Frascati, Albano, etc.

LÉOGNAN (Lay-own-yawn). One of the very best wine-producing villages of the Graves district, some seven miles southwest of Bordeaux. Its red wines and its white are equally distinguished and its best vineyards include Domaine de Chevalier, Châteaux Carbonnieux, Haut-Bailly, Malartic-Lagravière, Fieuzal, Olivier, etc.

LÉOVILLE-LAS-CASES, Château (Lay-oh-veel-Lahss-Kahz). Second Classed Growth of St. Julien, Haut-Médoc. Justly celebrated vineyard and its consistently good, well-balanced, fine-textured Claret. The yield is usually over 12,000 cases a year.

LÉOVILLE-POYFERRÉ, Château (Lay-oh-veel-Pwah-fair-ray).

On the whole the best vineyard of St. Julien, fully meriting its rank as a Second Classed Growth. Its excellent red wine (about 12,000 cases a year) is perhaps a little fuller-bodied than the other Léovilles, and generally brings a slightly higher price.

LIEBFRAUENSTIFT (Leeb-frau-en-shift).

Twenty-six acre vineyard at the Gothic Liebfrauenkirche, or Church of Our Lady, in Worms, on the Rhine. There are of course hundreds of churches called Liebfrauenkirche in Germany; this one happens to be, in all probability, the original source of Liebfraumilch. The vines are planted on heavy alluvial soil well inside the city and not far from the river, and the wines they produce, while unquestionably authentic, are rather common and a long way from the best of Rheinhessen; they are sold as Liebfrauenstiftswein, not as Liebfraumilch.

LIEBFRAUMILCH (Leeb-frau-milsh).

In German, this word, which is certainly one of the most universally known of wine names, simply means, "Milk of the Blessed Mother." It was probably originally given to the wine produced by a few acres of vines round the Liebfrauenkirche in Worms, on the Rhine (the Liebfrauenstift and by no means an outstanding vineyard); but it has long since turned into a meaningless passepartout of a name, vaguely synonymous with Rhine Wine. The cheapest and poorest wines of Rheinhessen may be and usually are shipped as Liebfraumilch, and a number of producers in the Palatinate have now entered the lists, with Liebfraumilchs of their own. On the other hand, a few shippers have found it advantageous to offer some excellent wines as Liebfraumilch—wines from Nierstein, Nackenheim, Oppenheim, etc., which are properly entitled to these more precise and honorable names. The consumer's only guide to quality (other than such rarely used terms as Spätlese and Auslese) is the name of the shipper. This may or may not be the producer's name, and in most instances is not.

LILLET (Lee-lay).

LIQUEUR (Lee-kerr).

In common, conventional usage, a sweet after-dinner drink, high in alcohol. Applied to whiskey or brandy, it means, rather vaguely, one of sufficiently fine quality to be consumed straight in this way, although of course not sweet. But the word has other and specific meanings as far as wine is concerned, notably two, with respect to Champagne: the solution of sugar, or rock-candy, in wine, which is added (usually plus a yeast culture) to the young wine before bottling, to bring about a second fermentation in bottle, is called liqueur de tirage; the quite similar syrup, added in the form of dosage, to sweeten the bone-dry, already sparkling wine at the time of disgorging, to make it brut, or extra dry or demi-sec, is called liqueur d'expédition.

In addition, liqueur, when applied to the great, naturally sweet dessert wines—those of Sauternes and Anjou, for example—means the sweetness, or unfermented grape sugar, left in the finished wine: Thus one can say, of a Château d'Yquem, that it contains 14 percent alcohol, plus perhaps 4 percent of liqueur.

However, what is called a vin de liqueur is almost always a fortified wine (it would be called a vin liquoreux if its sweetness were wholly natural and involved no addition of brandy); the term is generally applied in this sense to wines from the Eastern Pyrenees, such as Banyuls, Grand Roussillon, etc.; prepared in a slightly different way, these are called vins doux.

If your child is a poor reader

—see how phonics can help him

Now your child can learn to read better in just a few weeks—with records that teach him by the phonics method at home. For complete information about The Sound Way to Easy Reading—and our money back guarantee—mail coupon below.

Would you like to see your child gain as much as a full year's grade in reading in as little as six weeks' time? These are results parents have seen again and again with this simple home-tutoring course in reading.

Mrs. H. M. Kilpatrick of Reno, Nevada writes: "After six weeks of work with The Sound Way to Easy Reading, my son improved not only in reading and spelling but in all of his lessons because he could read with understanding. He is in fourth grade but could only read at the second grade level. In just six weeks he advanced the two years."

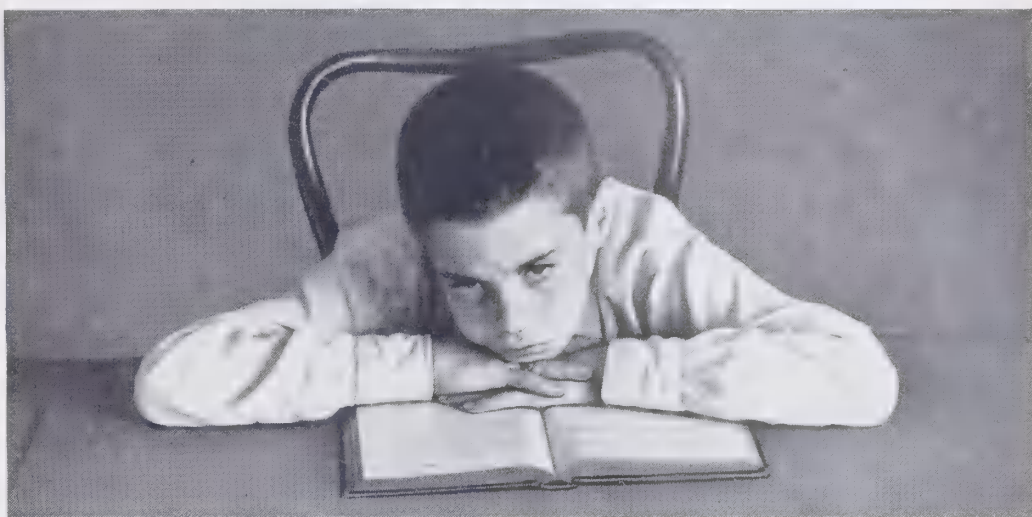

Mrs. Kilpatrick is only one of over 50,000 parents who have turned to The Sound Way to Easy Reading for help in the frustrating problem of a child who can't read. And over 3,000 schools use it.

Teaches with records

Don't think it's all your child's fault if he hasn't learned to read. Many of our brightest children are not able to grasp the "look-and-say" method taught in most schools today. Yet, many educators insist that at least 40% of our children must have formal training in phonics—that they will never master reading without it!

That is why so many poor readers show remarkable progress with The Sound Way to Easy Reading. It teaches reading by the phonics method (the method by which most parents learned to read years ago). Its phonograph records and charts show your child exactly what to do, so he can teach himself without any help from you.

The records drill him in the sounds of the 26 letters in the alphabet and their blends. Once he learns the 123 basic phonics sounds in this course he can read up to 85% of the words in the English language. It works for children of all ages—in the earliest grades, and even in high school.

Tested and proved

In a pilot study by university psychologists, children gained up to a full year's grade in oral reading skill after only 30 lessons with The Sound Way to Easy Reading.

A semester-long study involving 214 pupils in 4 Chicago schools proved that the classes given The Sound Way to Easy Reading showed marked improvement in reading and spelling over the control groups.

Help your child now

Don't wait for your poor reader to reach high school before coming to his aid. By starting your child on The Sound Way to Easy Reading now, you can change his entire attitude toward school—turn his sense of failure into the joy of success. Send for full information. No salesman will call. Mail this coupon now!

These are the records and self-quizzing cards that can help your child gain as much as a full year's grade in reading in just a few weeks.

PARENTS DELIGHTED

Better marks—"Bobby has used the records for only three weeks, yet his reading and spelling grades have gone from Ds to C-plus and B. Now his teacher has borrowed the course to help other children." Mrs. W. H. Gregory, Calif.

Advanced two grades—"In ten weeks my son advanced from Second Grade level in reading to the Fourth Grade level. His spelling improved to the high Fourth Grade level. We feel fortunate in learning of The Sound Way to Easy Reading."

Mrs. B. J. Smith, Concord, Calif.

Four sons—"In twelve weeks, two of our boys brought up their reading grades from D to B. And our other two came up from D to C. I'll never get more for my money than I already have with your course." Mr. John Gehde, Jr., Wisconsin

TEACHERS ENTHUSIASTIC

Recommends to parents—"Your course has been excellent in standardizing the teaching of phonics in our entire school system. I recommend it to parents as a home tutoring course for poor readers."

R. B. Miller, Supervisor, Monterey, Va.

Even helps teachers—"Although I'm a first grade teacher, the records are doing more to make my Johnnie a solid reader than anything I can do when I'm bone-tired. They're great for teachers who don't really know how to teach phonics."

Mrs. P. B. Winkie, Minneapolis

Helps high school student—"I've been tutoring a high school student who failed in English because of poor reading and spelling. After working with your records, he's reading fluently—and getting marks in the high 90's." Mrs. B. C. Starr, Florida

Angel Advent Calendar

□ A charming way to mark the days of Advent! The big cardboard angel wears a candle halo in her hair. Her red robe is filled with colorful designs — around it are little covered secret windows. On the 1st day of December open #1, on the second day #2 — keep opening one a day until the 24th. When you open that date, there's the tiny Babe and His Mother. Angel is 15½" tall.

9760-6—Angel Advent Calendar $1

Electric Table Fountain

□ Imagine the effects you can achieve with a cascading iridescent waterfall, fresh flowers or Christmas ornaments and the look of luxurious Travertine marble! Bowl is molded of durable Styrene with golden marbling. An electric pump keeps the water constantly in motion sending a never-ending spray over the flowers or other decorations you've added. Bowl is 16" across and is on a stand 4½" high. 110-volts, AC. Six-foot cord included.

XL252-6—Table Fountain .....$7.95

Filter Fry Pan Covers

□ Fry the modern way — without grease spattering stove and walls, yet with foods thoroughly browned! Our new Filter Fry Pan Cover is made of sturdy aluminum mesh that traps spattering fat and allows steam to escape. When the cooking is done, dunk it into hot suds and every bit of grease vanishes. Two sizes — 11½" to fit 10" skillets or 9½" to fit 8" skillets. Kitchen walls stay cleaner!

Personalized Baby Rocking Horse

□ How to pick a winner for a baby buckaroo! The enchanting steed is durable pine with gently curved rockers that take little riders for a safe non-tip ride. Rocker has handlebars on each side of the head for added safety and a chrome-plated jingle bell that makes merry music as he rides. We'll put your little equestrian's first name on both sides. Horse is 6¼ x 10¼ x 19" long with the seat a safe 4" from the floor. Easily assembled. Print name please.

XP675-6—Rocking Horse .....$3.25

Personalized Executive Cigaret Lighter

□ Gag gift of the year for nabobs and tycoons — or the man you'd like to make feel like one! Here in a leatherlike folder are hundreds of matches — it's 16¼" long so you can imagine the count! We'll put his name or initials on the black leatherette cover in gleaming gold to match the Executive Cigaret Lighter stamped on it. He'll proudly display it at the office — and brag about how clever you are for finding unusual gifts.

FROM SUNNY CALIFORNIA
DIRECT TO YOU!

DELICIOUS...TENDER...MOIST

California Fruits

GLACÉ IN REAL ORANGE BLOSSOM HONEY

It takes a full year to prepare these rare fruit delicacies for you. Just the mist of honey sweetness surrounds each piece to blend with the natural flavor of freshly picked fruits... whole fruits. Repeated slow simmerings remove all water content and replace it with pure orange blossom honey and nectar syrups. You can't buy glacé fruits like these in stores. So tasty... non-fattening, too! So inexpensive you can afford to add extra people to your gift list!

261 So. Robertson, Beverly Hills 3, Calif.

Five new
"see through"
weaves

only $2.98 a yard
and it's 10 feet wide!

Decorators and architects "up end" one piece to drape the widest window floor-to-ceiling—no seams to sew or show. Seven heavy, sturdy cottons launder fluff-dry, never ironed—in primitive weaves that look handwoven. Smart, too, for slip covers, bedspreads, tablecloths. Natural, white, or custom matched to your swatch or paint chip. Plus 5 new "see through" weaves. All 2.98 to 5.25 yd. in our wide, wide widths.

world's widest seamless draperies!

Your choice of yardage, do-it-yourself pleating materials—or prepleated yardage—or complete, made to measure draperies (hand-somer at low, low cost because they're seamless). For brochure and 34 samples, send 25¢ to Beverly Hills or Glenview address.

HUNGER- IS ALL SHE HAS EVER KNOWN

Margaret was found in a back lane of Calcutta, lying in her doorway, unconscious from hunger. Inside, her mother had just died in childbirth.

You can see from the expression on Margaret's face that she doesn't understand why her mother can't get up, or why her father doesn't come home, or why the dull throb in her stomach won't go away.

What you can't see is that Margaret is dying of malnutrition. She has periods of fainting, her eyes are strangely glazed. Next will come a bloated stomach, falling hair, parched skin. And finally, death from malnutrition, a killer that claims 10,000 lives every day.

Meanwhile, in America we eat 4.66 pounds of food a day per person, then throw away enough garbage to feed a family of six in India. In fact, the average dog in America has a higher protein diet than Margaret!

If you were to suddenly join the ranks of 1½ billion people who are forever hungry, your next meal would be a bowl of rice, day after tomorrow a piece of fish the size of a silver dollar, later in the week more rice—maybe.

Hard-pressed by the natural disasters and phenomenal birth rate, the Indian government is valiantly trying to curb what Mahatma Gandhi called "The Eternal Compulsory Fast."

But Margaret's story can have a happy ending. For only $10.00 a month, you can "adopt" her, or thousands of other desperate youngsters in your choice of the 55 countries listed. CCF sponsors have shown their love to the world's children for 25 years in this unique person-to-person program—today assisting over 43,000 children in 500 projects.

You will receive the child's picture, personal history, and the opportunity to exchange letters, Christmas cards—and priceless friendship.

AUTHENTICS

HAM FOR THE HOLIDAYS should be smoked in the old Virginia tradition that takes almost a year to achieve such succulence. Smoked, cured, aged, baked in wine, they're 8 to 12 pounds each, bone-in, $1.98 per lb. Boneless, 6 to 8 lbs., $2.98 per pound. Shipped anywhere in the U. S., ready to serve. Jordan's Old Virginia Smokehouse, 1508 W. Overbrook Rd., Richmond, Va.

WICKER WALL LAMP is a shining example of a lamp that adjusts to meet your needs best—instead of your adjusting to meet its light. It has a hand-woven 8" shade of natural wicker over frosted glass; non-glare diffuser suspended from 14" walnut arm. Height is adjustable, arm swivels left to right. $7.99 plus $1 handling. Lampland, Dept. F10, 581 Sixth Ave., New York.

SINK YOUR FEET into the luxurious softness of these Alpaca slippers and you won't care what the thermometer reads in the early A.M. They're the softest, coziest things afoot, so be sure to order a pair for your college-bound daughter. Handmade by Peruvian Indians, long-haired alpaca in beige or brown. S. M. L. $6.95 incl. tax. Helen Howard, HB10, Flushing 52, N.Y.

SIZE OF RELIEF is this Xtra shelf, because it relieves the usual clutter of cupboard shelves. In one third the space generally needed, you can stack a set of dishes, extra jars, glassware, cleaning equipment. Woodgrain finished steel to match your cabinets. 20" w., 6" d., upper shelf 3" d. Height is adjustable. $2.29. 35¢ post. Betty Adams, T-59, Breck Bldg., Boston 10, Mass.

RAIN OR SHINE, you'll be a jump ahead of the weatherman, because the wind blows the news to this vane which passes it along to you. "Winged Wanderers," an original design by Ernst Hagerstrom, is made of aluminum finished in weather-resistant black. 27" across arrow, approx. 34" high. $28.50. Hagerstrom Metalcraft Studio, HB10, Wheeling, Illinois.

"COME 'N GET IT!" WESTERN MUG SET

True Western hospitality in a 9-piece set! Mugs are amber glass, each with a different white etched design, brass bound with carved wood handles. Wood tray has grooved circles for the 4 mugs, a 7" center post that holds leather thonged dinner gong and striker. Tray is 12" in diameter. $10.98. ### Better than bath mats! PERMANENT SAFETY TUB TREADS PREVENT DANGEROUS FALLS!

Protect your family from slippery wet tub or shower! Tub Treads are less expensive, safer than "shifty" mats. Strong adhesive backing holds them in place for years of security! Won't irritate tender skin, or harm tub. Regular cleaning methods keep them sanitary, germ-free. Install in minutes. 9 20-in. strips, grey or white. Each set, $2.98 Postpaid in U.S.A. Two, $5.70

No C.O.D. or stamps—Satisfaction Guaranteed

Bala-Cynwyd, Penna.

DIANA AND APOLLO. symbols of beauty in Greek mythology, look amazingly like their illustrious originals. Reproduced in white porcelain bisque, the facing pair would be striking decoration over a mantel, on an open shelf, a room divider. 5" high, $2.50 the pair, 25¢ post. 9½" high, $10.95 the pair, 50¢ post. Edward H. Ziff, Box 3072, Mdse. Mart Plaza, Chicago 54, Ill.

BY ITS FRUITS you'll know that this hand-woven basket comes from Harry & David of Medford, Oregon. And when the Royal Riviera Pears, other luscious fruits, nuts, candies are no more, the pretty basket becomes an imaginative centerpiece. A just-right gift for business, friends. Basket #7 (over 18 lbs.), $16.95. Free color booklet. Harry & David, Box 200, Medford, Oregon.

MUSICAL ROCKER is a TV throne for a spell-bound small fry. Or it's a sweet extra seat in the nursery. And the magic music that fills the air when a little girl rocks is "Rockabye Baby." New England pine sap-bucket rocker has a chintz cushion and is hand-painted with any first name. 14" high, $13.95. Gotham Gifts, 67-85B Exeter St., Forest Hills 75, New York.

TWO HIT MUSICALS. In all the world there's nothing quite so nostalgic as a Swiss music box. We buy them for a dear child, but when we wind them up and the music starts, we, too, are a child again. Hand-carved, hand-painted figures revolve as the left plays "I Could Have Danced All Night," the right, "GiGi." 8½" h., $12.95 ea. Hildegard, HB10, 597 Farmington Ave., Hartford 5, Conn.

GERRY CARRIER makes traveling with Butch easier than coping with sitters. The blue canvas seat holds him securely as soon as baby's head is erect. Adjustable straps go over his shoulder and under the seat. Waist and leg openings fit over snow suits. For babies up to 25 lbs. $4.75. Side sling, $3.75. Add 35¢ post. Harvest House, R-819, 230 Bryant, Buffalo 22, N.Y.

NECKLACE TREE. We thought that we would never see a gadget helpful as this tree. A tree whose plastic arms are stretched, to catch our tangled necklace nest. Golden finish, 10" high, it holds all your beads, costume pearls; earrings clip round the base; rings and pins go in the center. Snaps together. $1.
Walter Drake, HB10, Drake Bldg.,

A DECK OF CARDINALS
could be a lovely sight for a flock of bird watchers, a convalescing child, an aged shut-in. Flight Deck clips to your window sill, has 4 seed wells, water pool, feeding stick, perch rails. Weather-proof green duralon, white trim, it's strictly for the birds and they love it! 17½x15½". $6.95;
three, $19.75. Duncraft, HB10,

BRAVO FOR BOZO, the talented aerial clown who is really more than a toy! He makes the tricky job of balancing seem easy.
Tie one end of the string to any fixed object, and raise and lower the free end. Bozo rides his bicycle with the verve of a Ringling Brothers star! $1.25. Three, $3.

SELLING BY MAIL CAN BE PROFITABLE

Many successful businesses have been started on a small scale through mail order advertising. What makes mail order selling so profitable for so many people?

1. Minimum initial investment. You invest your money only where it pays off, in ads like those you see in this section of HOUSE BEAUTIFUL.

2. Controlled Inventory. You stock only what you are advertising and selling at the moment.

3. Nation-wide Sales. Your mail order advertising reaches prospects throughout the country, not just in your community.

WANT TO LEARN MORE? HOUSE BEAUTIFUL, first in mail order advertising, is first in mail order know-how. We tell you what we know in our special kit called "Mail Order Facts". No charge! So write today to be in on the big Christmas season.

AUTOMATIC BED WARMER

Electro-Warmth delivers 3 times as much heat as competitive warmers. Send for FREE comparison chart—
Here's why users prefer Electro-Warmth.

MORE COMFORTABLE—Warms the mattress and space beside you—not just the top covering.

CONVENIENT—Leave it on the mattress year round. It's protected from sun and rain. Washable with soap and water. Fits single or double beds.

ECONOMICAL—Puts all the heat in the bed.
Warms the bed—not the bedroom.

SAFE—Cannot become heated up to overheat while attached to mattress.

WINTER OR SUMMER—Whenever the bedroom cools, Electro-Warmth turns on automatically to keep the bed at the temperature you have selected on the Comfort Control, even in coldest weather.
It turns itself off when the room warms up again.

YOU WILL LOVE the pleasing sensation of complete relaxation as the soft radiant heat soothes the nerves and induces deep, restful sleep.

IF YOU SUFFER from arthritis, cramps, poor circulation, or have frequent colds, or if you do not sleep soundly all night, Electro-Warmth promises prompt, pleasant relief.

1 YEAR WARRANTY—Direct factory-to-user

Handmade imported sheer handkerchiefs look as lovely and dainty as the finest silk, but they're made of strong rice paper. White-on-white designs are copied from rare European laces, with pretty scalloped edges. For blow or show, these disposable hankies are just great. Pack of 50, only $1.

SAME OLD GRIND? No sir-ee!

It's the little grinder that does a big job grinding nuts, chocolate, crackers, etc., so that the preparation of holiday goodies is marvelously unburdensome. Imported from Sweden, 7" high, wooden plunger protects fingers from nicks, and it clamps to table or counter for easy use. $3.25. Free 892, Laguna Beach, Calif.

RARE AMERICANA

All the soft charm of early Americana is caught for you in these brilliantly full-colored costume prints of the Revolution—a new and original idea in home and office decor for family rooms, libraries, executive suites—wherever you choose.

Shown here is a Continental Marine of 1779 whose coat of warm hunter green, white vest with scarlet facings and trousers of taupe will add immeasurably to any decor.
It is 10 1/2 x 16, amply margined, fully returnable and exclusive with us. We have 15 others equally charming from the 13 original States.

Send stamp for our illus. brochure on prints and other Americana.

Multiplication Tables Now Set to Music

Give your child a head start in arithmetic!

See how these new MUSICAL MULTIPLICATION RECORDS can teach all tables from 2's through 12's—quickly, unforgettably!

You can help your child become a star in arithmetic—lead others in his class—by getting him these Bremner Musical Multiplication Records. Even children of pre-school age can easily learn all the tables from 2's through 12's simply by playing these records.

No urging needed from parents. Children love these records. Each table has its own catchy tune and jingles. And the man on the record quizzes your child so the tables stick in his memory. Learning multiplication becomes as easy as learning the words of a song. Your child must know his tables before he can learn long division, fractions or decimals.
